Legion Act expands eligibility for veteran membership

By Mike Maltais

Staff writer

CASHMERE – A new federal bill signed into law last July 30 has expanded eligibility for millions of U.S. military veterans to join the American Legion at a time when many Legion posts are struggling to recruit new members.

The measure, Senate bill 504, The LEGION Act (Let Everyone Get Involved in Opportunities for National Service) signed by President Donald Trump opens the door for an estimated six million veterans to access American Legion programs and benefits for which they previously were ineligible.

SB 504 was introduced by Senators. Kyrsten Sinema, D-Ariz., and Thom Tillis, R-N.C. A companion bill, House Resolution. 1641, was introduced by Representatives. Lou Correa, D-Calif., and Ben Cline,

Prior to enactment of The LEGION Act, American Legion membership eligibility was restricted to military service during the following periods:

WWI: April 6, 1917 - Nov. 11, 1918 WWII: Dec. 7, 1941 - Dec. 31, 1946 Korean War: June 25, 1950 - Jan.

Vietnam War: Feb. 28, 1961 – May

Lebanon/Grenada: Aug. 24, 1982 -July 31, 1984

Panama: Dec. 20, 19089 - Jan. 31,

Gulf War/War on Terrorism: Aug. 2. 1990 - Present.

The new law redefines the eligibility date from the above seven to two; WWI, April 6, 1917 to Nov. 11, 1918, and WWII, Dec. 7, 1941, until a time determined by Congress when the U.S. is no longer at war. The new law also honors thousands of veterans killed or wounded while serving during periods not previously designated as a time of war.

"Recognizing the service of these wartime veterans is the right thing do and it is long overdue," said National Commander Brett Reistad on the American Legion website, legion.org. "The families of those who were killed or wounded during these wartime acts should take pride in knowing that we recognize their sacrifice and service."

Veterans in the Cashmere area can sign up immediately online at legion. org/join or contact American Legion Post 64 Adjutant Wiley Collins 509-630-7125 (cell), 509-888-1904 (res.) or email wcollins@nwi.net for details regarding membership.

"We have `about 52 members," said Collins who added that Post 64 has already gained a new member thanks to the LEGION Act, George Komro of East Wenatchee, whose brother, Ken, is a Post 64 member.

Ken Komro, 71, served in the Army in Vietnam from 1969-72, an eligibility period approved under earlier rules. His older brother, George, 89, saw military service from 1955-57, after the end of the Korean War and during a period not eligible until the LEGION Act expanded eligibility.

"George always wanted to be a member of the Legion," said his brother, "and joined at our meeting on Oct. 3."

While existing Legion membership applications are being updated, applicants can enter "Legion Act" into the eligible date section of the current document.

Posts in the small outlying areas have seen declining memberships over the past years. American Legion Post 218 in Bridgeport, Wash, closed its doors last year after 68 years in operation citing lack of new members. Post 218 was formed in June 1950 and closed one year before the American Legion celebrated its 100th anniversary.

"There are 600,000 veterans in Washington State," said Area Three Commander Denny Pittman, of the potential pool of new Legion members. Pittman is a member of Columbia Post 97 in Brewster.

The American Legion was founded in 1919. Today there are more than 13,000 posts with two million members worldwide.

The American Legion Auxiliary was also formed in 1919 and the Sons of the American Legion in 1932. The Legion Act changes the eligibility criteria for descendants of military veterans and extends membership privileges to that group as well.

The Extremists Behind Covering Climate Now

COMMUNITY NEWS

Last month, over 170 news outlets around the world devoted coverage to climate change.

project, dubbed The Covering Climate Now, may seem like a feel-good effort to raise awareness of sound environmental policies. But it's actually an attempt by climate extremists to go mainstream.

The weeklong campaign was officially spearheaded by The Nation, but it's the brainchild of Bill McKibben, a well-known climate activist who for years has worked to brand fossil fuel companies as "Public Enemy Number One."

Covering Climate Now McKibben's attempt give his activism a mainstream platform. Like the rest of McKibben's work, campaign sacrifices pragmatic reform in favor of radical change, and does so at the expense of vulnerable communities.

Nation launched The Covering Climate Now back in April, at a five-hour event with panels full of climate extremists. They claimed that quickly transitioning to renewable energy is our best chance at avoiding catastrophe.

After turning up the threat level, conference leaders issued their call to action: seven days of climate-focused coverage, leading up to the UN Climate Action Summit on September 23. The campaign's organizers claimed it was not an attempt to "tell people what to write or broadcast." That proved false from the outset.

Covering Climate Now began with an email campaign designed to bully journalists into supporting the project. The emails called on reporters to stop "underplaying the climate story."

These emails also included sources for journalists to consult when writing their climate stories. For the most part, the emails linked to opinion pieces that relied on selective data and alarmist rhetoric.

According to organization's website, journalists can even "learn the science" of climate change from Bill McKibben."

There's just one problem --McKibben's writings contain more rhetoric than science.

Consider his work at 350. org, an anti-fossil fuel group he co-founded. The group likens the extraction of oil, gas, and coal reserves to the "crimes of slavery, totalitarianism, colonialism or apartheid."

According to McKibben, the only way to end these "crimes" is to stop harnessing fossil fuels altogether. He thinks America should rely entirely on renewable energy sources, like solar and wind power.

That's basically impossible. Renewables currently account for just 17 percent of our nation's electricity, while fossil fuels provide over 60 percent. Generating enough renewable energy to completely replace fossil fuels would cost the

$2,000 a year. These increased costs would hit low-income Americans the hardest. On average, poor rural households spend close to 9 percent of their annual income on energy bills. That's more than double what the median urban household spends. Switching to renewable energy sources will force these vulnerable Americans to spend even more of their income on energy bills. Meanwhile, fossil fuels are saving Americans money. Thanks to the natural gas boom, the average U.S. household is spending nearly $3,000 less each year on energy than experts had predicted.

The folks behind Covering Climate Now are right about one thing: we need to have a balanced conversation about climate change. But doing so will require presenting the facts, not strong-arming the media into reprinting activist talking points.

Drew Johnson is a national political columnist and former opinion page editor.

Environmental Concern

With the recent hype about Greta Thunberg's U.N. speech, the appearance of demonstrators waving signs on overpasses and flyers with the words "Our House is on Fire" in bright red letters posted in our community, it has raised the question: What is the Christian response to climate change?

Unfortunately, any discussion regarding environment the degenerates into leftist ideology, appealing junk science and is overly sensational. None of which are helpful or honest about the real issues. Take Greta's speech, for example, sure it may have thrust the 16-year-old into the limelight and has made her a champion of climate change advocacy but it does very little to help the environment. Her angry "How dare you?" has only polarized people and in my opinion, is a symptom of a larger problem and that is: we prize feelings over facts.

Is the climate changing and should we care?

Of course.

But not for the same reasons as the "Climate Justice" movement believes it to be.

As Christians, we believe the Bible and its testimony concerning the world we live in. According to the Bible, the world is changing and not for the better. Romans 8:20 says that "creation was subjected to futility" and in that process, the world is breaking down and decaying. Ever since the fall of Adam and sin entering the world through him, our world has been on an entropic slide gradually dying with every passing generation. To the ire of the radical environmentalist who might read this, this world is not meant to be preserved due to the radical corruption of mankind's sin. Saving the earth is an impossibility considering the rebellion that occurred by our first parents which had sent the created order into a perpetual downward trajectory.

Our real problem is not so much about carbon emissions or fracking, but the consequence of sin which is death (Rom Now, this doesn't mean that as Christians we take a fatalistic A WALK approach to WITH environment. In other PASTOR words, recognizing that JOHN this world is fallen does SMITH not give us a license to pour oil in storm drains or spew pollutants in the air. Rather as Christians, we recognize that although the world is corrupted by sin and is dying, it is still God's land and humanity has been tasked to be stewards of it.

The very first commission in the Bible was given by God to Adam and Eve where God says "Be fruitful and multiply and fill the earth and subdue it and have dominion..." (Gen 1:28). This concept of subduing and the dominion mandate over the earth is not an authorization to exploit Creation for human greed but rather to care for and be wise in its use.

It should trouble us when we see deforestation or toxic waste being dumped in animal habitats. Yet, the solution is not more governmental restrictions. I mean, after all, we saw how that turned out in regards to the spotted owl and how the forests have been unmanaged ever since. It is one of the reasons why forest fires burn hotter, spread quicker and last longer because those who did manage the land, lost their jobs and were unable to do so.

This is God's world. Let us deal with the issues that affect it with honesty and not get caught up in sensationalism or political ideology. Rather, let us take the first commission with a sense of seriousness and sobriety, recognizing that God owns the world and it is on loan to us.

Valley Bragging rights on the line Friday

The deeply rooted rivalry between the Cascade Kodiaks and the Cashmere Bulldogs is a timeless tradition — the two teams go head to head in the annual Pear Bowl this Friday, Nov. 1.

"This game is always a big one each year on the schedule as the towns are so close to one another and both communities really get into it," said Cascade Kodiak's head coach Dominique Coffin. "It makes for a very fun atmosphere to play in each year for the kids."

The Kodiaks are bringing a record of 4-4 to the game while the Bulldogs are at a 6-2 record for the season.

Regardless of the standing of wins and losses, both teams have put up impressive numbers on the scoreboard and both teams have suffered setbacks on the field.

"Every year this game has been a battle no matter where each team is in the league and what is on the line. I expect it to be the same this year as well," said Coffin.

The tradition of the Pear Bowl traces back a long time, revealing a constant yo-yoing cycle of wins and losses between the two teams. Last year's contest was a tight match with the Bulldogs pulling out a victory at 14 to "Our team needs to continue to develop into a more disciplined football team. In past weeks we have made too many mental mistakes and a team like Cascade will capitalize on those mistakes," said Bremer.

Cashmere is poised to go into the playoffs while this will likely be the Kodiaks final game of the 2019 season. Only time will tell if team pride will provide the incentive for the Kodiaks to end their season with a win. The game is on their home turf in Peshastin beginning at 7 p.m.

During the first 8 games of the season the Kodiaks held opponents to only 17 points. To be successful against the Bulldogs they have to limit the Bulldog offensive scoring with their swarming defense.

The course is 2.75 miles in length and run in two laps through Enchantment Park. It is a pretty flat course on crushed gravel paths and some grass. While there are separate results for boys and girls, the competition is just one race with boys and girls combined.

Can phytoestrogens help relieve menopausal symptoms like hot flashes and night sweats? What about women with breast cancer?

I experienced my first hot flash standing in front of 120 pharmacy students in a large lecture hall in Pullman, Washington. While explaining how a particular weight loss medicine worked I felt the temperature in the room skyrocket and my scalp felt hot and prickly. Suddenly, sweat began shooting out of my pores front and back, showering my skin inside my shirt and leaving me damp and disoriented in front of everyone. Talk about being distracted... and embarrassed!

Can phytoestrogens relieve the physical and social discomfort of menopausal symptoms like sudden hot flashes/flushes or their nighttime equivalent, night sweats?

Researchers have noticed how Asian women don't suffer as much from hot flashes during menopause as Western women do, calling it the "Japanese Effect". They suspect the major reason for this difference is diet, because the typical Asian diet contains a lot more soy than a typical American diet, and those soy foods contain phytoestrogens: plant-based substances that can act like estrogen in your body to relieve menopausal symptoms.

Eating more soy-based foods may not be the only thing responsible for the "Japanese Effect". Protection against hot flushes may also depend on how well you convert the phytoestrogens in soy to a more active form called equol. It's estimated that only 30-50% of women in North America can make the conversion to equol, while Asian or Hispanic women convert soy-based phytoestrogens into equol much more readily.

Phytoestrogens act by attaching or binding to the same places in your body that other estrogens do, in binding sites called estrogen receptors, or ERs. There are two main types of ERs: ER alpha and ER beta receptors. Most estrogens and phytoestrogens bind to ER alpha receptors, relieving hot flushes but possibly stimulating certain types of breast and endometrial

Phytoestrogens that bind to ER beta receptors create the opposite effect, instead they block the action of estrogen on breast tissue, much like the estrogenblocking medicines tamoxifen and raloxifene (Evista®), which may help prevent certain types of breast cancer.

Unfortunately, it's not a predictable effect because it's very hard to pin down and study the effects of phytoestrogens on the body. One reason is that common food sources of phytoestrogens usually contain more than one phytoestrogen, and they can bind to either ER alpha or ER beta receptors, creating conflicting effects.

will develop Plants differing concentrations of phytoestrogens depending on the species and their own growing conditions. They can also act differently in your body depending on whether you are still making your own estrogens or you are menopausal or postmenopausal, with very little estrogen in your body.

How much soy does it take to reduce hot flash/hot flush symptoms? Most clinical studies use from 40 and 80 mg daily of phytoestrogens from soy-based products. Recent evidence suggests that you start with 2 servings a day of soy foods and try that for 3 months to see if your frequency of hot flashes decreases.

One serving of soy food can be 3 ounces of tofu, ½ cup of edamame, ½ cup tofu, ¼ cup soy nuts, or 1 cup of soymilk. Flaxseed, chickpeas, beans, peas, green leafy vegetables, cauliflower and nuts are also good sources of phytoestrogens. After trying soy for 3 months, if you don't notice any decrease in your hot flashes or hot flushes, you probably won't, and can stop it.

Could soy cause breast cancer? Ιf you're not vegetarian, it's unlikely you'll get enough soy in your diet to increase your risk of breast cancer unless you also take supplements containing concentrated soy or herbal products like black cohosh marketed for "menopause support", such as Remifemin®.

Here Are 3 Tips on Phytoestrogens Safely:

1. You CAN eat food containing soy, even if you have breast cancer.

Moderation is the key. If you are vegetarian or vegan, avoid eating tofu or tempeh every day, and control your consumption of soy milk.

2. Use phytoestrogen supplements that have had their potency tested.

Exact concentrations of particular phytoestrogens differ depending on growing conditions. Choose products with standardized quality control assays of each batch.

cautious supplements for menopausal symptoms.

If you have a family history or an increased risk of breast cancer, you don't have to totally avoid soy-based food, but you should avoid taking supplements containing concentrated phytoestrogens like soy concentrates or black cohosh until more is known about their long-term effects.

NCW Media Inc.'s Obituary and Memorial Policy

An obituary is a way for family members to commemorate a loved one's life and to notify the larger community of the deceased.

Obituaries are also used for historical and ancestral data. Memorials are another way of letting the community know about the life and memories of the person who has died. A memorial is different from an obituary. An obituary is usually current while a memorial can be written later.

For publication in the Cashmere Valley Record or The Leavenworth Echo, an obituary or memorial needs to be typed and emailed to editor@leavenworthecho.com no later than 4 p.m. Friday for the next week's issue. Funeral homes and chapels can submit obituaries by noon on Monday, except holidays.

We are here to serve families in Leavenworth, Peshastin, Plain and the entire Upper Valley.

OUTDOORS

Going To Walleye School

By John Kruse

You've heard of schooling fish, but how about a school for walleye? Yes, that's a thing and it's now being offered in Washington State. The Pacific Northwest Walleye School is the brainchild of Johnnie Candle. Candle is a guide who lives at Devils Lake in South Dakota, arguably one of the best walleye fisheries in the nation. In addition to being a guide Candle is also a tournament angler, competing in various walleye circuits around the country. He's pretty accomplished in this regard. In 2010 he won the Master Walleye Circuit's World Championship.

Most anglers of Johnnie's stature would be content to fish tournaments, guide clients and present seminars during appearances for sponsors at sportsmen's shows during the winter months. However, Candle has a strong desire to share his fishing knowledge with others beyond sportsmen's show circuit.

Candle started doing this with his guided fishing trips on Devil's Lake, where he not only helped clients catch fish, but taught them skills they could take home with them and use after their day on the water. Johnnie realized a day really wasn't enough to teach everything he wanted to share and that's where he came up with the idea of a 3 ½ day walleye school.

Initially offered in the Midwest, Johnnie Candle offered his first Pacific Northwest Walleye School last October in the Tri-Cities, teaching student anglers of all ages how to catch walleye out of the Columbia River. This October, Candle offered this regional school at Eastern Washington's Potholes Reservoir and the basecamp for the event was MarDon Resort.

The concept behind the school is novel. Johnnie Candle explains most anglers attend seminars during sportsmen's shows and then wait weeks or months before trying to put that knowledge, much of it now forgotten, to use. At Walleye School, Candle and his staff of local pros teach strategies and techniques in the classroom. Then they immediately go on to the water to apply the lessons they just learned. By employing this strategy anglers retain the

The students bring their own boats and electronics to the school. Candle and his prostaff jump on board the student boats to give them personalized instruction based on what they want to know. They also help the students get the most out of their boats as well as their sonar and GPS units to help them catch fish.

THE WASHINGTON OUTDOORS REPORT

At this month's Pacific Northwest Walleye School, thirteen anglers spent $695 each to attend from Thursday the 17th through Sunday the 20th. The fee included not only the instruction, but also lodging at MarDon Resort, three meals a day at the Beach House Café there, moorage for boats, ice and even bait.

I was lucky enough to attend the Friday morning session of Walleye School. The student anglers were an interesting bunch. Twelve were men, one came from as far away as Indiana, another from Oregon, and the rest from various locations around Washington State. Some of them had a good amount of walleye fishing expertise, others not as much, and one had not caught a walleye before (but did that morning)!

After breakfast and a quick classroom session we headed to the docks. I tagged along with Johnnie Candle who went out with Paul Phillips from Omak and Mike Monahan from Indiana. Candle spent the first hour with them demonstrating how to use the fish finder and GPS unit to locate walleye. The second hour was spent teaching the two how to fish spinner worm harnesses behind bottom walker weights. It was very informative and I learned several new tricks from Candle. These tricks worked too. In short order Paul Phillips had a walleye in the boat using this new found knowledge.

We headed back to the marina after our session and changed boats. Johnnie now boarded an 18-foot Hewescraft set up for Columbia River salmon fishing. Johnnie spent some time teaching this angler how to adapt his boat and motors so he could be successful fishing for walleye. One thing Candle suggested. based on the layout of the boat, was to troll plugs for walleye. Candle spooled a reel with lead core line and taught him and I how to fish plugs with this weighted line to get deep where the walleye are located in the Fall. Within one minute become a better angler.

Johnnie Candle will be of this plug reaching the bottom we hooked a fish and reeled it in. That's what you call rapid, positive reinforcement! As for my day at Walleye School? The biggest lesson I learned is the tuition spent here is a great investment if you want to
