BREWSTER - Okanogan County Fairgrounds Manager Naomi Peasley and Washington Hometown founder Jennifer Hackett.

Peasley has been keeping the fairgrounds busy with activities from rodeos to racing to reunions to renovations, one of the latter of which in 2022 will offer an advertising opportunity for local businesses. Peasley said that repair work to the racetrack barrier on the west side of the track in front of the grandstands will involve replacement of the deteriorating railroad ties with large ecology blocks. Ecology blocks are so named because they are made from repurposed concrete that in the past was discarded or dumped into landfills.

Businesses will be able to purchase metal signs that will be attached to the blocks and will remain there for the lifetime of the wall. The advertising fees will help fund the renovation project and pay for the signs. Email npeasley@co.okanogan.wa.us for details.

Petition filed for possible recall for entire city council of Bridgeport

BRIDGEPORT - This is a formal announcement that a petition was filed in Douglas County on May 24 for the recall of the entire, 5 member, City Council of Bridgeport. The City Council of Bridgeport, by state law, is also the governing body of the Bridgeport Transportation Benefit District (TBD). The petition alleges that since the creation of the TBD in 2016, the City Council, in its position and function as the governing body of the TBD, has violated both city and state code some 30 times by not publishing required annual financial reports for 2017, 2018 and 2019. A court time and date of 1 p.m. on June 18 in the Douglas County Superior Court in Waterville has been established for the petitioner to present his evidence. At present, this will be a zoom hearing. Confirmation of this pending recall may be made by contacting any of the following Douglas County offices: Elections at 509-745-8527 or Clerk of Superior Court at 509-745-8529 or Superior Court at 509-745-9063.

out it was a good call as the state's vaccination program coupled with declining COVID cases gave the green light to many activities as Washington state moves closer to a 70 percent vaccination rate and a full opening by June 30. Once again, this year the Washington Department of Fish and Wildlife set aside 400 rainbow trout to stock the Marina Park Lagoon to provide the quarry for the popular Hooked on Kids Derby that coincided with Free Fishing Weekend June 12-13. More than a dozen of the trout wore special prize tags to make the quest for a trophy catch even more exciting. Eager young anglers from ages five to 14 gathered to wet their lines starting at 9 a.m. and to compete for lots of prizes for largest trout, most caught, and other categories. Nobody leaves the Derby without one or more prizes ranging from free fishing gear to bicycles. Hooked on Kids was started by the late Neil Jacobson a former city councilman who enlisted Bridgeport school students to design a logo for the derby. Today, a carved replica of that design welcomes visitors at the entrance to marina Park.

QUAD CITIES - With basketball season coming to a close this week Quad City teams are posting their final scores from the court.

Pateros

"We played a good Moses Lake Christian Academy team," said Billygoats head coach Marcus Stennes of the 69-47 loss on June 8. "We struggled both offensively and defensively."

Pateros made 19 of 59 attempts from the field.

Calvin Blackburn 2 pts, 8 reb
The Billygoats bounced back from their MLCA loss last with a 20-point 62-42 win against Cascade Christian Academy on June 10.

"We did not have the best first half because of turning the ball over," said Stennes. "We were able to get it going in second half having a 29-point third quarter and 20-point fourth quarter."

Pateros was led by Aiden Hall's triple double and Calvin

Blackburn's double double.
Pateros 7 13 42 62

The Nannies split two home games losing the first against Waterville, 57-43 on June 1, then regrouping to beat Cle Elum 37-26 on June 3, on Tuesday.

"We came out hot taking a 18-11 lead after the first quarter against Waterville," said head coach Jared Henton. "We got into foul trouble and cold shooting and lost the game."

Aleeka Miller-Smith led Pateros with 11 and Vanessa Cenicerros chipped in nine.

Against Cle Elum Henton said it "took a while to get going but we came away with the win. Tea Asmussen lead us with 14 points, Lani Gallegos had 11 and Aleeka Miller-Smith chipped in with nine.

Tuesday, June 8, at MLCA the Nannies played a tough back and forth game, said Henton.

"At the end of the first quarter we were tied at 17 and at half we had a five-point lead," said Henton. "By the end of the third we had a one-point advantage. It came right down to the last 30 seconds where Aleeka hit two clutch free throws that gave us a three-point advantage with under 20 seconds left. We came away with the 53-52 win."

"Aleeka had a huge game for us with 29 points, which included seven three-pointers," said Henton. "Tea Asmussen chipped in with 10 points."

Bridgeport

The Mustangs defeated Entiat 64-53 at home on June 9, said head coach John McDougal.

Junior Yair Diaz had 19 points, 2 assists, and 6 rebounds. Senior Jesus Torres had 6 points, 14 rebounds, and 6 assists. Senior Tito Alcantara finished with 10 points, 4 assists, and 3 rebounds. Junior Drake Morris had 15 points, 3 assists, and 3 rebounds. Sophomore Cristian Lopez had 12 points, 7 rebounds, and 1 assist.

The Bridgeport Fillies lost to the Waterville Shockers, 74-55 on June 8, said head coach Kate Luttrell. Karla Torres had 17 points, and Bianca Torres 14 points.

Brewster

The Bears lost to Chelan 77-60 on June 10, said head coach Michael Taylor.

With a 2-3 record going into their final week of competition the Bears have four games this week ending their season on Saturday, June 19.

players test positive for COVID and with graduation on June 11 the seniors opted to stay safe and not participate in the game at Chelan, June 10, said head coach Stephanie Schertenleib.

"In normal circumstances we would have possibly tried to reschedule or cancel but arrangements had already been made for Chelan's senior night. With an already condensed schedule and time frame there was no time to make up games," said Schertenleib. "So, we rounded up seven girls who have not practiced a single time together prior to this game; five freshman and two eighth graders who were willing to step up and play a varsity Chelan group to give their seniors an opportunity to play a final game in front of their family and friends."

Why I added some national news

BY BILL FORHAN, PUBLISHER

Bill Forhan

I am sure you have noticed by now that I have added some national news coverage to the pages of my weekly newspapers. Since I added the 2 pages of material from The Epoch Times, I have received a total of seven comments from subscribers. Those comments are split evenly with three supporting the move and four opposing it. Two have threatened to cancel their subscriptions if I continue. I have only received one letter to the editor. You can read it in the letters section.

Last week I pulled the two pages in a few of my newspapers because coverage of our high school graduations and a surge in advertising required more space than we had planned for on Friday before the Memorial Day Holiday and because of the holiday it was too late to change the press order.

So, the big question is why did I decide to include this coverage and why did I choose to use The Epoch Times? Those are fair questions.

I have been in the newspaper business now for 41 years. It has gone through tremendous change over that time. Some good, but much not so good. My biggest concern is the consolidation of the news industry into the hands of corporations - large corporations. Over the last 30 years there has been a growing consolidation of family owned newspapers into the hands of a small group of publicly owned chains that are much more concerned about the price of their stock than the depth and quality of their news coverage. I began my newspaper career as a low level executive in one of those chains - LEE Enterprises, Inc. They were one of the better chains. After 11 years, I left their employ to work for a family owned newspaper in Southern California. In short, during my 41 years in this business I have seen the deterioration of newspapers across the industry.

Nearly 21 years ago I bought three struggling weekly newspapers right here in North Central Washington. My wife and I have worked hard to build them into viable local newspapers that focus on news that is most important to the communities we serve - local news.

Major newspapers across the country have been forced to cut back editions and pages as advertising revenues have dwindled because of competition from the Internet. As a result, their "news holes" have dwindled mightily and staff is continually reduced. The inevitable result is a decline in complete news coverage - what the industry now calls a growing news desert. To make matters worse, today in this country there remains only one national news syndicate - the Associated Press. The AP collects and distributes news stories from around the country to its member news organizations. The result is that whether it is intentional or accidental the news that gets published in most larger newspapers is the same. It is filtered by journalistic competition if not outright political favoritism and tends to be the same wherever you find it. Now I am sure that those who are reading this are asking, but what about TV, radio and the Internet? It is a fair question. I watch TV. I listen to the radio but I utilize those media differently because at heart I am a newspaper guy. The first thing I would say is TV and radio both have the same limitation - time. That limitation causes them to choose the stories they cover based on what's "breaking." More importantly, they often do not have all of the important facts and usually dismiss the background because there is just not "time" to cover the issues in depth. The other problem is they choose what are the most important stories to cover. You can't skip over the headlines to pick the ones you find most important to you.

The Internet is a completely different animal. You can search for any topic you would like to know more about - great! The problem is it is the wild, wild world of the Internet. There are credible sources but there are also all kinds of propaganda, rumor and dis-information. The Internet is not subject to the same rules of libel and slander that traditional media are bound to observe. You get to sort it out for yourself. And of course, every time you log on to a topic you can bet that someone is tracking what you read or watch.

All of this brings me back to why did I add national news. Clearly, I do not have the staff or financial resources needed to cover national news events and single handedly take on the task of trying to fix the news desert problem. But 40 years in this business has taught me there are a lot of ways newspapers could change the way they do business in order to address issues like a growing "news desert."

There are far more small towns with weekly newspapers than there are larger metro newspapers. So, I began thinking about what if those weeklies started running some quality national news. I contacted AP but the issue is I would be running essentially the same content that all of the other AP newspapers ran - at a significant increase in my cost of operations.

Then I called Epoch Times. I have been reading their stories for some time. I found their stories were well written and much more objective than

OBITUARIES

Dorothy M. Gamble

Dorothy Marie Gamble was welcomed into her Savior's arms on May 31, 2021 at the age of 93. Dorothy was born to Arthur A. and Lulu F. Dezellem on May 27, 1928 in Methow, Washington, the middle child of three.

Dorothy spent her childhood attending school in the Pateros School District where she would go on to graduate. She later attended Eastern Washington University for two years to study education.

Dorothy met her future husband, Howard, at a dance in Pateros where he asked if he could drive her home. She thought that would be a good idea, and it led to them dating and eventually marrying in 1949. They made their lifelong home in Brewster, Washington and went on to have five children.

While busy raising her active family, she was heavily involved in many outside activities. Dorothy worked in the Brewster Schools as a teacher's aide and playground teacher. She also was one of the moms involved in beginning the ski bus program in Brewster. She then was employed by Gebbers Farms as a payroll clerk for many years and helped to institute the use of computers for completing the payroll. After leaving Gebbers, she went on to work at the Brewster Hospital for the remainder of her years of employment.

Dorothy also worked with Howard in their family orchard moving water and helping with countless other jobs necessary to support their farm.

Dorothy was a quiet leader, always supporting Howard behind the scenes in his very public life. She was always working to make Howard's job easier, whether that be changing his diet when he began experiencing heart troubles or making him buy a new pair of pants for the Schwan's salesman after Howard's dog bit him. She was a calming influence to Howard's slightly more outspoken personality, and they made an exceptional team together. Howard described Dorothy as an angel, and anyone who knew her would agree.

She filled her leisure hours with numerous volunteer endeavors. She taught Sunday School at the Community Log Church for countless years and thoroughly enjoyed teaching young minds about God's Word. This extended into many hours spent as a helper at Conconully Bible Camp as well. Dorothy loved her church family and could often be found preparing food for potlucks or other social gatherings and caring for the flowers around the building. She was always willing to help out with any special projects. Dorothy was a longtime member at the Brewster Senior Center, an active member of the Hospital Guild, and spent many hours mentoring community youth through the local school reading program. She loved sewing, cooking, and baking, and she was an avid reader of historical non-fiction and biographies. Dorothy was well known for her famous apple pies, and they were requested far and wide. It gave her much joy to keep her yard full of beautiful flowers, which the neighbors all loved.

Dorothy could be found on her regular walking route every day for most of her life. She was very self-disciplined and self-driven and incorporated that into every area of her life. She also took the time to travel to visit family whether it be a trip to Santa Maria to visit her brother, Don, or a trip to Arizona to visit her daughter, Gini, and grandkids, or simply a relaxing trip to the west side to attend the Tulip Festival with her daughters. She was never overjoyed to leave, but enjoyed the experience while away, and was always happy to get back home.

Throughout her entire life, she held an unwavering faith in God. Dorothy was a devoted woman who cared for those who needed it including her mother-in-law, Myrtle, and her brother-in-law, Robert, and later her husband, Howard. She never expected anything in return but always demonstrated God's love to those around her. While she will be deeply missed here on earth, we know that she is finally home and celebrating with Howard.

Dorothy is survived by her children, Nancy Gamble, Brewster; Gini Van Arsdell, Ogden, Utah; Kris Gamble, Brewster; Trudi Gamble, Brewster; daughter-in-law, Elaine Gamble, Edmonds; her grandchildren Dylan and Tessa Gamble, Brewster; Amanda and Andrew Gemmill, Spokane; Nick Van Arsdell, Ogden, Utah; Jared Gamble, Edmonds; Ashleigh and Bob Zutter, East Wenatchee; Jesse and Trista Dinjian, Port Orchard; and Taylor Gamble and Devin Goggins, Seattle; her great-grandchildren, Shea, Mia, Emma, and Maggie Gamble; Chelsea, Danikah, and Kirra Dinjian; Harper and Hudson Zutter; and Grace Gemmill.

Anna Georgia McCullough

Anna Georgia McCullough, 76, left us June 6, 2021 after bravely fighting cancer for one and a half years. Anna was born in Tonasket on March 24, 1945 to Woodrow and Bessie (Cline) Bailey. She married Clyde Ray McCullough on March 24, 1965, her birthday, in Bridgeport. They had three sons: Clyde Jr, Darren, and Chris. Clyde and Anna have lived in Chelan Falls for about 30 years.

Anna is retired from the Postal Service where she worked for 27 years at the Chelan Falls Post Office where she was Postmaster for the last 20 years.

Anna enjoyed sewing and quilting, reading, travelling, cake baking and cooking. Another of her passions was working at the Chelan Rustlers Saddle Club and Rodeo Grounds where she and Clyde did caretaking on the grounds and helped with events for many years. They also cared for many horses when their owners needed help. She would love on every horse, pony or mule, give them treats, help feed and water and above all, cleaned corrals while dressed to the hilt in color coordinated outfits, always wearing color matching flip flops, and jewelry that totally matched her outfit; earrings, bracelets, and necklaces. Her hair was always done perfectly. She was the best dressed horse caregiver that has ever been and the horses loved her. This was Anna.

Anna was quite the cook and always prepared foods for the Saddle Club picnics and also for events at the Manson American Legion where Clyde is the commander. She would also make festive decorations for the events.

Anna is survived by her husband, Clyde Ray McCullough, son Clyde Junior of Chelan Falls, son Darren (wife Kim) of California, son Chris (wife Jessica) of Lake Stevens. She also leaves her sister, Leah Thomas of Selah, sister Gwen Johnson of Bridgeport, brother Neil McKee of Bridgeport, and brother Eugene McKee of Omak. ## Guadalupe DeLaCerde

April 20 1955-October 22, 2020

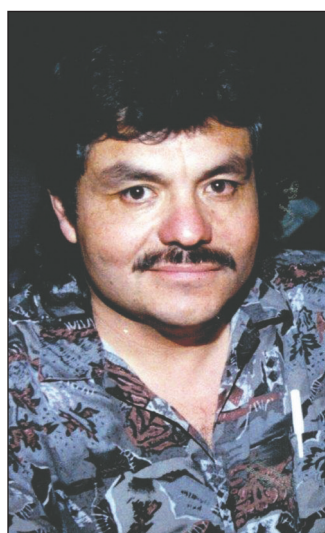

Guadalupe DeLaCerde of Long Lake, Washington left us to join his Heavenly Father on Thursday, October 22, 2020 at the age of 65. Guadalupe was born April 20, 1955 in General Teran, Nuevo Leon, Mexico to Pedro DeLaCerde-Salazar and Maria Perez-Hernandez. Around 8 months of age Guadalupe and his family relocated to Pharr, Texas, where he was raised. At the tender age of 7 years old, Guadalupe lost his father Pedro. Guadalupe being the oldest of his siblings worked odd jobs such as: shining shoes and sweeping floors to help support his mother Maria and his brother Pedro, and sister's Norma and Guillermina.

As a young man around the age of 20 years old Guadalupe relocated to the Brewster, Washington area. Guadalupe then worked on some Columbia River Dams as well as time he spent working at the Hanford Nuclear Site in Richland, Washington. He was extremely proud of the important concrete work he did while working at the Hanford Nuclear Site. Guadalupe was also extremely proud of the important work he did restoring and planting trees on Mount Saint Helen's when she erupted in May 1980. He always took pride in his work doing a neat, thorough professional job no matter what the job was! Guadalupe met and fell in love with Nyleen Moore of Pateros, Washington. They were married December 22, 1978 in Pateros, Washington. They soon began their family and were blessed with a daughter: Candace and a son: Caylan. Guadalupe and Nyleen raised their family in Brewster, Washington. Guadalupe during raising his family worked for some time for Gebber Farms, doing electrical work. Guadalupe then went to work for U.S. Electrodynamics, Inc. Not long after beginning to work for U.S. Electrodynamics, Guadalupe went through the process to become an American Citizen! Guadalupe continued working for U.S. Electrodynamics, Inc. until his passing. Guadalupe enjoyed visiting his family and friends enjoying a brew or 2. He enjoyed fishing with his son Caylan and other friends. He enjoyed restoring his old classic muscle car with his close friend Fred. Guadalupe was always lending a hand to whoever needed a hand.

Guadalupe was preceded in death by his parents: Pedro and Maria DeLaCerde.

Surviving Guadalupe: His wife Nyleen of Long Lake, WA, His daughter Candace Medina(Hugo) of Brewster, WA and his son Caylan(Kathy) of Long Lake, WA. He is survived by his grandsons: Brandon Medina(Gese) of Ellensburg, WA, Julian Medina of Long Lake, WA, Damian Medina(Bethany) Of Salem, OR, Orlando Medina of Spokane, WA, and Jordan Medina of Brewster, WA. He is survived by granddaughter Marisa Medina of Brewster, WA and Great Grandson Atom Gruber-Medina of Ellensburg, WA. He is also survived by his brother Pedro DeLaCerde of Brewster, WA, his sister Norma Fonseca(Chano) of Brewster, WA and his sister Guillermina Lucas(Franco) of Brewster, WA. In addition, he is survived by numerous cousins, nieces, and nephews.

Jim Veeder tribute to Lupe: Lupe's Boss at U.S. Electrodynamics Inc.

Lupe joined Jim Veeder's U.S. Electrodynamics early on in that team's quick international growth many years ago. Jim said that hiring Lupe was like hiring 3 important experts in one person. Lupe put his heart and his soul into everything that he did. Nothing about his work was sloppy, always the professional perfectionist. "I could call him in the middle of the night, and I knew that when he would be do done that it would all be perfect. Lupe was a huge part of my and U.S. Electrodynamics' success, I miss you Lupe and I will always miss you, you will always be stuck deep in my heart, always a best friend, and just like I told you 30 years ago, 'You know you are stuck with us now, and for the rest of your life, we don't let hard working geniuses get away. You are the best high power electrical expert, the best motor and pump expert, and you know concrete and steel perfectly and you are family here and especially with me already' " Jim said. "Lupe made the hard work fun for everyone in the field, and the customers and inspectors respected him, and loved him too, he was just that way." Lupe always enjoyed telling all the funny stories like this one of many in Peru: Having been given poor advice from Hertz in Peru, Lupe and Jim and his sister left Lima for Cuzco on a road that was out of season through the Andes at 14-16,000 feet elevation. "It was really a dirt road meant only for huge buses with 6-foot diameter wheels." Maybe 700 miles into an 800-mile trip a big problem arose, a 4-foot-deep river 30-foot-wide river flowing completely across the road. While Jim calculated speed required Lupe scouted out logs and large stones to build a ramp designed to the calculated trajectory. At the far edge of the river Jim moved one of the logs into center, as a skid way just in case we have insufficient speed, we needed 70 mph. "Jim, that's guaranteed to take out the oil pan," said Lupe. "Nah, maybe a little dented, but still intact," said a confident Jim. Lupe said they could only get to 50 mph because of the smooth stones, and so the car fell short. "Lupe, you see we needed that log," said Jim. 10 miles later the low oil light warning came on. "Well, I'll be, just a little dent huh?" said a proud Lupe. The outrageous stories only got better after that. "I am in deep, deep shock and grief.

When we lost Lupe, and it was so sudden, it really reinforced that Lupe was a strong force in making us a family," Jim said, "we are not sad because we lost his expertise, oh sure, we did lose an irreplaceable hard-working person, and a great and amazing friend, but the true sadness is much deeper, for myself I have lost a wonderful brother in life. Many others must feel lost as well, he would do anything for anyone in need." "It is really, really tough, and we will never really completely get over it until we see him again, but for now Lupe is with his father Pedro and his mother Maria in God's Presence and Glory!

Nyleen's Loving Tribute to Lupe!

Guadalupe DeLaCerde lived most of his life in Brewster, WA. There he raised a family of 2 wonderful children, Candace and Caylan. He went to work for Jim Veeder at USEI and was very excited about. A new challenge in life that he looked forward too. Through his years working there, he made many friendships and memories with his coworkers. His family, daughter and grandchildren still live in Brewster. In the year 2007, Lupe, myself and our son Caylan, moved to Spokane where Jim Veeder bought property on Long lake. Over the years it became a beautiful blueberry and rescue animal farm. He has been on the farm about 16 years. He loved living here on the farm because he got to work with his beloved son every day. They would go fishing all the time, hang out down at the lake and just enjoy the peace and beauty that exists out here. Over the years, Lupe and Jim developed a very strong bond/relationship through work and friendship. They had a relationship that I can't even describe. He was always grateful to Jim and Isabella for the beautiful life he was able to live out here on the farm. There's so much to say but I cannot say it all. I was married to Lupe for 42 years. We have 2 children, 6 grandchildren and 1 great-grandson. We were blessed with a beautiful family. He was a great husband, father, grandfather, and friend. We will always love and miss him. As Tina Turner says, "You are simply the best!"

Candace's Tribute to My Dad!

Best Dad and Friend on Earth. He was my everything since I was born, and I was his Nanace! Nanace always sucking her thumb rubbing dad's mustache and it was mine and his thing. I will never forget we would drive in his trans am while I ate twinkies. Since Nanace was always with dad, I was a daddy's girl and loved to be by his side as a child. My dad would always complain about his white hairs and offered to pay me a quarter for each hair I pulled out. I was so excited thinking that's a lot of money! As I got older, I would joke with dad, that is a lot of white hair. I would say can I pull them out for a quarter each, because now I could be rich with all those whites! As a little girl, I always begged my parents that I wanted a baby brother. When I finally got one, I was so happy! I Still am very happy; my dad was to have his Nanace and Booboo! He would tell me he was so happy he had his boy and girl. We were so blessed to have him as our dad! There wasn't anything he wouldn't do for us, as we would do anything for him, too. I will always be so grateful for everything he has done for me and the grandbabies! He always had a heart of gold, and me as a young mom, I knew it was hard for him to accept. His heart was hurting, knowing his little Nanace, wasn't so little anymore. But eventually, he was so proud and happy to have a handful of grandbabies! Hewas an amazing grandpa and last year he became a great grandpa and was tickled pink! I feel so grateful he was able to be a part of his life, even if it was for a short time. We will always teach and tell all the stories of Grandpa Lupe to baby Atom, about what an amazing great grandpa he had. As I sit here writing about my dad, my heart is broken. I feel like half my heart is gone. On the other hand, trying to be happy, as he's getting so much needed rest. I know here is my angel and as of now he is smiling ear to ear, sitting right there with his mom and dad, that he missed so much! Dad you are my hero, and I love you! I will not say goodbye, but I will see you again! Oxox!

Caylan's Tribute to My Dad!

My dad was one of the best dad's you could ask for. We always went fishing in the Columbia river then he would take me to work with him every day after school. I grew up working in the best place with my dad, Lupe, my mom, Nyleen and for Jim and Isabella. Every day after work we would hang out in the shop creating good times. I love him forever and will miss him forever. There is so much more but until we see each other again, I love you Dad!

Juvenile chinook captured in Sanpoil River

By MIKE MALTAIS
STAFF WRITER
(COMPILED FROM A CTFW
RELEASE BY MICHELLE COMBOASSO)

NESPELEM – Sub-yearling chinook salmon have been captured in the Sanpoil River above Grand Coulee Dam from adult chinooks that were planted in that Columbia River tributary in 2020.

A media release from PR spokeswoman Michelle Comboasso of the Colville Tribes Fish & Wildlife Department (CTFW) said the chinook fingerlings were captured in a rotary screw trap set near the mouth of the river by CTFW staff to monitor out-migrating Redband trout, a rainbow subspecies.

A rotary screw trap employs a large cone suspended between two floating pontoons. The action of the river water rotates the cone and detours a portion of the migrating fish into an underwater holding tank at the back of the trap.

“We operate the screw trap from May until November, and we’ve captured sub-yearling chinook on their way to Lake Roosevelt,” said Holly McLellan, principal CTFW biologist. “The first fish we captured was 93 millimeters long. We PIT tagged it and released it back into the river.”

The PIT tag Information System (PTAGIS) is a data collection and monitoring method that uses a small electronic radio transponder inserted into a fish to track its movements and behavior.

McLellan said the tagged fish will continue its migration downstream to the ocean. If it survives past Grand Coulee and Chief Joseph dams the tag will allow biologists to detect the surviving fish downstream. Neither Grand Coulee nor Chief Joe have PIT tag detecting arrays but the remaining major downstream dams so.

“We will continue to PIT tag all juvenile chinook greater than 65mm in length that we capture,” McLellan said.

Last August, 100 adult chinook were trapped at Wells Fish Hatchery, tested for pathogens, then transported by truck and released into the Sanpoil River, the CTFW media release said. Each fish was PIT tagged to track their movements. In October, staff walked the stream and counted 36 redds or egg nests that were within about six miles of the release sites. The work last fall confirmed that most of the salmon appeared to have stayed in the area, survived, and spawned.

“It is exciting that our fisheries department has identified 70 juveniles that were the result of our cultural releases of salmon in the Columbia and the Sanpoil Rivers,” said Chairman of the Colville Business Council Rodney Cawston. “With the construction of Chief Joseph and Grand Coulee dams, our people were separated from tradition and loss of salmon populations had a large impact on our people. Our people feel they have never intentionally relinquished their rights to the resources and fishing practices that historically have been a significant part of our lives.”

The Colville Confederated Tribes have been working closely with the Upper Columbia United Tribes and the Washington Department of Fish and Wildlife to pursue a phased approach to reintroducing salmon in the blocked areas upstream of Chief Joseph and Grand Coulee dams, said the CTFW media release. Phase 1 is complete and included science and feasibility evaluations. Phase 2 will include multiple studies to test feasibility and determine the best path forward to continue reintroduction efforts of moving salmon into the blocked areas.

THE WASHINGTON OUTDOOR REPORT

Oh Shad

By JOHN KRUSE, THE
WASHINGTON OUTDOORS REPORT

It's primetime for shad fishing on the Columbia River! This year's run is about a third less in size so far than the mammoth runs we've seen in recent years but with 40,000 plus shad crossing Bonneville Dam on June 2nd alone, the big push is definitely on and should continue into July.

The American shad is historically a popular food fish along the east coast and was introduced into California's Sacramento River in 1871. Within five years shad, which look like overgrown herring weighing anywhere from one to five pounds, began showing up in the Columbia River. Today, shad numbers in the Columbia have exploded. The ten-year average run is over three million fish and last year some six million shad came back to the Columbia River to spawn.

Shad are scrappy fighters and ready biters, and it's not uncommon to catch a couple dozen in a morning of fishing. Because of their fighting quality and relatively large size compared to trout and panfish, shad fishing can be a whole bunch of fun for kids and young at heart anglers who just like to tussle with a bunch of fish.

There are several places to cast for shad on the Columbia. During the month of May some anglers will fish off the docks at Washougal. In June and July, the river just below John Day Dam near Rufus is a great place to catch shad. However, the best (and most popular) place to get into a bunch of shad is just below Bonneville Dam. Hundreds of anglers congregate here every morning when the shad are running and the action can be fast and furious with multiple anglers hooking into shad at once.

The nice thing about shad fishing is that you can easily catch them from shore. The standard rig is to attach a sinker to a swivel or above the swivel. Depending on the current a ¼ to ½ ounce weight will work fine. Then tie three feet of leader below the swivel and attach your lure. The most common offering is a shad dart, a uniquely shaped jig head above a hook. 1/16th ounce or 1/8th ounce jigs work best. No bait is necessary and neither are trailers. The jig head color does matter though. White and red, green and chartreuse or white and green are all effective color schemes. These darts can usually be bought in sporting goods stores or bait shops along the Columbia River. Other lures to try are Shad Killers, available at Gorge Outfitters Supply in Rufus, Oregon by the John Day Dam or Shad Slammers, from Mack's Lure.

Once you are rigged up simply cast out slightly upstream and reel slowly keeping your jig off the bottom. Often the bite will come just as the line starts swinging towards shore. If you don't get a bite, reel in rapidly once the jig is directly downstream and cast again.

Quite often the shad will surge forward upstream in schools and you'll see anglers begin to hook up downstream from you. Be sure to get your line in the water in a hurry because they'll soon be swimming past you!

If you are going to fish from a boat you can launch from Beacon Rock State Park to try for the shad below Bonneville Dam or from Giles French Park on the Oregon side of the Columbia River below John Day Dam.

Marc Bush, the owner of Twisted Waters Guide Service, catches shad out of the boat by rigging up an 18-inch dropper to a Brad's Wiggler Crankbait, then tying 30 inches of leader behind that where a small Dick Nite spoon entices the shad to bite. As for where to fish, Bush recommends motoring over to the Oregon side of the river below Bonneville Dam by the Shad Rack or just look for where the boats are congregated and the anglers are reeling in the fish and you'll be in the right place.

Then there is the question of what to do with these fish. They are oily; really, really, oily, but some people do keep them to eat. Others harvest shad for sturgeon bait while still others, myself included, keep a dozen or so for crab bait. Whether you keep them or just catch and release them though you'll likely be in for a fun-filled and exciting day of fishing and catching on the Columbia River from now until mid-July!

most of what I read in other mainstream newspapers in this country.

I asked them if they would be interested in an experiment. What I proposed is that each week they would provide me with two complete pages of national news to run in my weekly newspapers. They could use my newspapers as a way to promote the distribution of their news to small newspapers around the country. I pay nothing for the service while they work to see if they can develop the program into a syndicated product they can sell. They loved the idea and agreed. So, each week they send me two pages formatted for our newspapers.

I have agreed to test this model for one year. That will give them time to see if it works for them and for me to test my readers interest in the additional content.

Newspapers are not produced to satisfy the interests of any single subscriber. There is always content that an individual subscriber will find offensive. They always have the option to ignore those sections. My focus will continue to be to produce a quality local newspaper that informs our communities on important local issues.

Adding this new content only costs me more for printing extra pages. I plan to continue to test this until next May. I am open to your feedback.

It was Hackett's second visit to the Chamber. On an earlier engagement last May she introduced Washington Hometown and secured Chamber membership in the program. Hackett designed a database that combines scores of information sources about recreation and cultural sites with printable web maps to aid travelers and visitors in their search for places to go and things to do across the state.

“We have gathered information from more than 150 sources, verified it, and added details about each place,” said Hackett on her website washingtonhometown.com. “We offer apps and interactive maps tailored towards specific recreation interests, custom print and interactive maps, and data that can be used by organizations in their own projects.”

The Brewster Chamber is now offering Washington Hometown access to its members.

“We can offer our businesses a membership for their business on the maps for $35 a year,” said Chamber President Mike Mauk. “We are trying to get all of our businesses on this so when people come to our area, they can see what we have to offer. For more information visit washingtonhometown.com/business-info online.

Mauk also reminds readers that the Brewster Independence Day parade will be held on Saturday, July 3, rather than Sunday, July 4.

Illegal Border Crossings Keep Climbing; 180,000 Apprehended in May

CHARLOTTE CUTHBERTSON

Customs and Border Protection (CBP) apprehended 180,034 individuals illegally entering the United States in May, the highest number seen in a single month in 21 years.

The agency said the majority, more than 112,000, were expelled under the Title 42 emergency health provision.

Former President Donald Trump implemented Title 42 in March 2020, which effectively closed the border to nonessential travel in an attempt to mitigate the spread of COVID-19.

It allowed for Border Patrol to turn back illegal border-crossers almost immediately, rather than for them to be placed in Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) custody for a more protracted process through deportation proceedings under Title 8.

The Biden administration has already exempted unaccompanied children and many family units from Title 42, whereas single adults from Spanish-speaking nations are almost all still subject to immediate expulsion, according to Troy Miller, acting commissioner for CBP. But Border Patrol is also encountering more illegal aliens from non-Spanish speaking nations, Brazil and Haiti in particular, which Miller suggested aren't being expelled.

The number of unaccompanied minors and individuals within family units dropped in May compared to April, but still made up more than 33,000 apprehensions.

Most of these individuals are released into the interior of the United States with a notice to report, meaning the individual is obliged to report to a local ICE office once settled, or a notice to appear, meaning the individual is given a date to appear in immigration court.

CHARLOTTE CUTHBERTSON/THE EPOCH TIMES

The Title 42 restrictions have triggered a higher than normal recidivism rate of illegal crossings as single adults repeatedly attempt to cross and evade capture, according to CBP.

During the month of May, 38 percent of Border Patrol apprehensions were individuals who had at least one prior encounter in the previous 12 months. The average one-year re-encounter rate during the previous five years was roughly 15 percent, CBP said.

In addition, Border Patrol detected, but didn't capture, more than 51,000 illegal border-crossers in May, according to statistics obtained by The Epoch Times.

The Biden administration is under pressure to end the Title 42 restrictions and has hinted it would do so. However, the head of ICE has said its removal is his biggest concern.

"Title 42 is absolutely critical," ICE Acting Director Tae Johnson said during a congressional hearing on May

13. "I don't think it's a situation where it's going to just be lifted electively—we will be mandated, through some sort of court order, to lift it."

Once Title 42 is revoked, the 3,500 to 3,800 single adults that Border Patrol is currently arresting on a daily basis will have to be processed by ICE.

At the same time, ICE has less capacity than it did during the previous border surge in 2019. ICE had approximately 55,000 detention beds in 2019. However, their capacity was reduced to 30,000 beds in the fiscal 2021 appropriations package—enough beds for less than two weeks at the current rates of alien arrivals.

Vice President Kamala Harris is currently traveling to Mexico and Guatemala on a trip that the Biden administration said was to discuss the "root causes" of the vast numbers of illegal immigrants entering the United States from that region.

"We have, and it is a legitimate correct conversation and concern, which is to address what is happening at our America's southern border, and no question about that. We cannot have that question and have that conversation without also giving equal weight and attention to what is causing that to occur," Harris said while in Guatemala on June 8.

Pressed on why she hasn't yet visited the U.S. southern border, Harris said she plans to visit the border "at some point."

Guatemalan President Alejandro Giammattei said in an interview with CBS on June 6, before Harris's visit, that he would like to see the United States impose stronger penalties on human smugglers.

Florida Board of Education Votes to Ban Critical Race Theory in Public Schools

JACK PHILLIPS

Florida's state school board on Thursday voted to ban the teaching of critical race theory in public schools amid a push from Republican Gov. Ron DeSantis to eliminate the ideology from its classrooms.

During a meeting before the State Board of Education's vote, some opponents of critical race theory said it is Marxist and should be blocked.

"We all know it's a Marxist tactic to divide our country by class and by race," said Bennett Brown, a Duval County resident and board member of the Florida Family Policy Council.

Brown said that teachers should instead teach "the truth and that the United States of America is a great and wonderful land with freedom for all."

"Telling my child that they are in a permanent oppressed status is racist," critical race theory critic Quisha King of Moms for Liberty in Jacksonville said during the meeting.

Opponents of the Board's decision said during the meeting that DeSantis and Republicans are attempting to prevent schools from using critical race theory as part of a political strategy to gain votes.

"It's an effort to whitewash, cover up and candy-coat history," said Ben Frazier, president of the Northside Coalition of Jacksonville. "Allow teachers to speak the truth."

The Florida Teacher's Union president, Andrew Spar, also said he didn't favor the move. Spar alleged that the change was not necessary because Florida teachers don't use critical race theory in their curriculum.

But DeSantis countered Spar in the meeting with three examples of what he described as "attempts to teach [critical race theory] in Florida," including one in Jacksonville, where the meeting was held.

After the Board's decision, DeSantis hailed the move.

"Florida's education system exists to create opportunity for our children. Critical Race Theory teaches kids to hate our country and to hate each other. It is state-sanctioned racism and has no place in Florida schools," he wrote on Twitter.

DeSantis also spoke to the meeting, saying that he doesn't want children to not learn about the civil rights movement or slavery, but noted that some critical race theory proponents "look back and denigrate the Founding Fathers, denigrate the American Revolution." He appeared to be citing claims made by the New York Times' controversial "1619 Project," which has been panned by historians as having false information.

Jacob Oliva, the head for K-12 education at the Florida Department of Education, said that the move to bar critical race theory is to ensure that teachers follow state academic standards.

"It's important for us, or even imperative, to teach students how to think, not specifically what to think," said Oliva.

House GOP: Facebook's Zuckerberg Needs to Surrender Communications With Fauci Over COVID-19

JACK PHILLIPS

House Republicans sent a letter to Facebook CEO Mark Zuckerberg asking that he surrender any communications the social media giant has had with Dr. Anthony Fauci and other federal officials regarding the COVID-19 pandemic.

Reps. Jim Jordan (R-Ohio) and James Comer (R-Ky.) cited recently released emails from Fauci, head of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases (NIAID), that suggested Zuckerberg personally "communicated with [Fauci] about the COVID-19 pandemic."

"In light of Facebook's subsequent censorship of certain COVID-19 content—including content about the pandemic's origin—these communications with Dr. Fauci raise the prospect that the federal government induced Facebook to censor certain speech in violation of the First Amendment," they wrote.

Over the past year amid the pandemic, Facebook has moved to block content suggesting that the CCP virus, also known as the novel coronavirus, may have originated from the Wuhan Institute of Virology.

Jordan's and Comer's letter further stipulated that Facebook hand over "all documents and communications between or among Facebook employees and U.S. government employees," which includes Fauci, regarding the virus, treatment, and its origins. Documents regarding Facebook's policies about COVID-19 content moderation should also be surrendered, the representatives wrote.

"It also appears that you shared some of Facebook's confidential trade or commercial secrets with Dr. Fauci, as portions of your email exchange with Dr. Fauci were redacted when made publicly available," their letter stated.

Zuckerberg had sent a personal email to Fauci on March 15, 2020, in which the Facebook CEO wrote, "This isn't public yet, but we're building a coronavirus information hub that we're going to put at the top of Facebook for everyone to see" to "make sure that people can get authoritative information" and "practice social distancing." The email also asked Fauci to do a question-and-answer session for Facebook, among other requests.

Another mid-March 2020 email, titled "Offer from Mark Zuckerberg," included Fauci's response after Zuckerberg asked him to "do videos" on the pandemic. Fauci responded by saying, "I will write or call Mark to tell him I am interested in doing this."

In recent weeks, Fauci, who has given hundreds of interviews to news outlets since the pandemic started early last year, has faced significant criticism from Republicans and former White House officials, who said he gave misleading information—or that he lied—about the hypotheses of the CCP virus's origin.

EcoHealth Alliance's Peter Daszak wrote in an email to Fauci on April 19, 2020, "I just wanted to say a personal thank you on behalf of our staff and collaborators, for publicly standing up and stating that the scientific evidence supports a natural origin for COVID-19 from a bat-to-human spillover, not a lab release from the Wuhan Institute of Virology."

Daszak, a staunch opponent of the theory that the virus escaped the Wuhan lab, also told the NIAID chief, "Your comments are brave, and coming from your trusted voice, will help dispel the myths being spun around the virus's origins."

Fauci responded by writing: "Many thanks for your kind note." According to the email trove that was published, Fauci a day before had told George Gao, head of China's CDC: "We will get through this together. Thank you for your kind note. All is well despite some crazy people in this world."

In a series of media interviews this month, Fauci said the emails have been "taken out of context" and defended grants worth hundreds of thousands of dollars being given to the Wuhan Institute of Virology.

"The Wuhan lab is a very large lab, to the tune of hundreds of millions if not billions of dollars—the grant that we're talking about was $600,000 over five years," Fauci told NewsNow last week.

But on June 9 during an MSNBC interview, Fauci went a step further following recent criticism from GOP lawmakers, who called on him to step down from the NIAID position he's held since 1984.

"If you're trying to get at me as a public health official and scientist, you're not only attacking Dr. Anthony Fauci, you're attacking science," he said.

Facebook and NIAID haven't returned requests for comment.

Prices Rise at Fastest Pace in Years, Fueling More Inflation Fears

EMEL AKAN

WASHINGTON—U.S. inflation in May rose 5 percent from a year ago, recording the biggest annual spike since 2008 as supply bottlenecks and surging household demand continue to push prices higher.

While transitory factors continue to lift prices, the economy sees more signs of continuing inflationary pressures, according to analysts, which may point to persistently high inflation.

The Labor Department announced that the consumer price index increased 0.6 percent in May on a monthly basis, just above the consensus forecast of 0.5 percent.

The rise in used car prices accounted for about a third of the increase in overall inflation. Prices for used cars and trucks jumped 7.3 percent in May, following a 10 percent increase in April, as global semiconductor shortages continue to affect new car production. This put “used car prices up at more than a 170 percent annualized pace over the past two months,” according to Morgan Stanley.

Airfares were also up 7 percent, and rental car prices jumped another 12 percent last month.

Food prices rose 0.4 percent and energy prices remained flat in May. Analysts, however, expect a further increase in food prices in the coming months.

Core inflation, which excludes the volatile food and energy components, is up 3.8 percent over the past year—the largest gain in 28 years.

The sharp jump in the year-over-year inflation number is partially due to the base effect, as the pandemic lockdowns and the plunging economy caused weak consumer inflation a year ago. The base effect is expected to level off in June.

In March, the central bank raised its inflation projection for 2021 to 2.4 percent, up from the 1.8 percent projected earlier. Fed officials have repeatedly said price increases are “transitory,” with the expectation that inflation will eventually return to the central bank’s 2 percent target.

Recent inflation data, however, may require the Fed to revisit its inflation forecasts.

“The outsized gains in a few select sectors support the Fed’s view that the current degree of price pressures is temporary,” Sarah House, senior economist at Wells Fargo Securities, wrote in a report. “However, we see signs of inflationary pressures broadening out, which we believe will keep monthly price gains from merely falling back to their pre-pandemic trend after the current flurry of activity.”

Restaurants and groceries have started to raise their prices as they face increasing food and labor costs. Agricultural commodity prices surged about 60 percent over the past year, reaching a decade high, according to Wells Fargo. And average hourly earnings at restaurants have increased 24.4 percent at an annualized rate in the past three months, as business owners scramble to fill open job positions.

Ellen Zentner, chief U.S. economist at Morgan Stanley, said persistent inflationary pressure could be greater than expected this year.

“What was most notable in this report is that while transitory factors did a lot of the heavy lifting driving the May upside, the more persistent components like rents and OER [owner’s equivalent rent] firmed up as well much more than expected,” she wrote in a report.

OER, which is used to estimate shelter cost (a monthly rent that would be equivalent to the monthly expenses of owning a house), rose 0.31 percent in May, the largest increase since June 2019. And rents increased 0.24 percent, the largest since March 2020, according to Morgan Stanley.

“I think it’s going to be more persistent than transitory,” Joseph Carson, a former Alliance Bernstein and Commerce Department economist, told NTD Business.

“You have a lot of factors pushing it up, like monetary policy, fiscal policy, pent up demand, worker shortage, wage increases.”

Carson also noted that the current business cycle is “quite unusual.” Unlike previous recessions, unique features of this recovery cycle include low inventory levels and wage inflation, which are driving prices higher.

I think [inflation] is going to be more persistent than transitory.

Joseph Carson, former chief economist, Alliance Bernstein

One of the world’s largest consumer goods corporations, Procter & Gamble, announced that it would raise prices for its baby, feminine, and adult care products.

David Taylor, CEO of Procter & Gamble, said at a virtual conference hosted by Fortune that inflation is “inevitable.”

“Yes, it is very real. We are seeing it across a number of products. It’s pulp, it’s paper, it’s anything involving oil. Plastic packaging is going up. Trucking costs have gone up significantly. Ocean freight has gone up significantly. You are seeing it in a wide range of cost areas.”

Biden Administration Tells Federal Agencies Not to Require Employees to Get a COVID-19 Vaccine

ZACHARY STIEBER

The Biden administration said this week that federal agencies generally shouldn’t force their employees to get a COVID-19 vaccine as a precondition for working in person.

“The Administration strongly encourages all Americans, including Federal employees and contractors, to be vaccinated,” the Safer Federal Workforce task force said in a new posting. “Employees should receive paid time off to be vaccinated and to deal with any side effects. At present, COVID-19 vaccination should generally not be a pre-condition for employees or contractors at executive departments and agencies (agencies) to work in-person in Federal buildings, on Federal lands, and in other settings as required by their job duties.

While workers and contractors may share information about whether they’ve received a vaccine, agencies “should not require federal employees or contractors to disclose such information.”

The White House didn’t immediately respond to a request by The Epoch Times for comment.

Of the 2.1 million federal employees, more than half worked from home during the pandemic, according to a 2020 survey released in April. The 59 percent who were teleworking was a jump from just 3 percent before the pandemic.

But as the pandemic subsides, more employees are returning to workplaces, underlining the importance of guidance on vaccination.

The new guidance came after the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission said companies wouldn’t run afoul of federal laws if they decided to mandate vaccinations for workers, provided they carve out exceptions for medical or religious reasons.

Federal employment “laws do not prevent an employer from requiring all employees physically entering the workplace to be vaccinated for COVID-19, so long as employers comply with the reasonable accommodation provisions” of the Americans with Disabilities Act and the Civil Rights Act, the commission said.

However, state and local laws could apply, it added.

Some private businesses have begun requiring workers to get a COVID-19 vaccine. Houston Methodist, a hospital system in Texas, this week suspended nearly 200 workers who refused to comply with the mandate and didn’t claim or were unsuccessful in claiming a medical or religious exemption.

Marc Boom, CEO of the system, said the workers “have decided not to put their patients first.” They face termination if they continue to decline to get a jab.

Matthew Staver, chairman of Liberty Counsel, a Christian organization that represents a variety of clients, told The Epoch Times that federal law does appear to bar entities from requiring workers to get vaccinated, because the vaccines currently being administered in the United States are authorized for emergency use, not approved.

“Federal law specifically says that no one can be coerced or forced to get one of these EUA-authorized drugs,” he said.

“It would be a different conversation if they’re fully approved. That, however, is focused only on the federal law, that doesn’t take into consideration the independent state law that provides additional rights for employees.”

In April, the Defense Department said in a memo that supervisors may not generally ask employees if they’ve received a COVID-19 shot. COVID-19 is the disease caused by the CCP virus.

The Biden administration’s task force previously reacted to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention’s update to its masking guidance by saying federal employees and contractors who are fully vaccinated can ditch masks and stop social distancing when working onsite. Fully vaccinated refers to a person who has at least two or more weeks prior received a Johnson & Johnson vaccine or the second dose of the Moderna or Pfizer shot.

The CDC says people who aren’t fully vaccinated should keep wearing a mask and social distancing while indoors or in crowded outdoor settings, and 25 percent occupancy limits are still in place in all federal buildings. Some Republican lawmakers have called on the administration to move back to onsite work, noting that more Americans are being vaccinated each day while COVID-19 metrics such as cases and hospitalizations have dropped sharply.

“It is time to begin transitioning to the workplace,” Rep. Jody Hice (R-Ga.) wrote in a recent letter to Kathleen McGettigan, acting director of the Office of Personnel Management. “If it is the administration’s intention to prolong remote working arrangements, then it is appropriate to hold a comprehensive policy discussion around related issues.”

‘Hundreds’ of Whistleblowers Say Military Forcing ‘Anti-American Indoctrination’ on Them: Sen. Cotton

JACK PHILLIPS

Sen. Tom Cotton (R-Ark.) told Defense Secretary Lloyd Austin on June 10 that “hundreds” of military whistleblowers have reported being forced to receive “anti-American indoctrination” training, including critical race theory (CRT).

In a Senate hearing with Austin, Cotton claimed that within the military, there’s “plummeting morale, growing mistrust between races and sexes where none existed just six months ago and unexpected retirements and separations based on these trainings alone.”

One whistleblower, Cotton alleged, said that military history training was replaced with training about police brutality, “systemic racism,” and “white privilege.” Another said that his unit had to read “White Fragility” by feminist author and critical theory proponent Robin DiAngelo, according to the senator.

In May, the Space Force confirmed it relieved Lt. Col. Matthew Lohmeier, a former instructor and fighter pilot, as commander of the 11th Space Warning Squadron. While it didn’t specifically name the reason why Lohmeier was terminated, the Space Force cited comments made by Lohmeier during a podcast in which he denounced CRT and warned about the spread of Marxism within the Space Force’s ranks.

CRT, which draws heavily upon Marxist critical theory and postmodernist writers, denounces U.S. and Western culture as oppressive, and often claims American culture and institutions are promoting “systemic racism” or “white supremacy.” Some critics have said the ideology’s proponents apply the Marxist tactic of “class struggle” to drive people along the lines of gender, race, and ethnicity, rather than between the “proletariat” and “bourgeoisie.”

In the hearing, Austin told Cotton that some training is designed to make sure that the armed forces are “welcoming to everyone who can qualify and who is fit to serve.”

“We ought to look like the America we support and defend, and senior leadership should look like what’s in the ranks,” Austin said.

But Cotton suggested that claims the military is attempting to foster diversity with such training are incorrect.

“[It’s] about a very specific kind of anti-American indoctrination that is seeping into some parts of our military, based on the whistleblower complaints we have received,” he said.

“The military for decades has been one of the institutions in society where you are most likely to get ahead based on your own performance, your own merit, irrespective of the color of your skin, where you came from, who your parents were.”

Austin agreed with Cotton’s sentiment.

“I absolutely agree with that. I am an example of that,” he said.

Austin went on to state that the military needs to be “a bit better,” be “absolutely inclusive,” and promote “equity.” The terms “inclusive” and “equity” have been used in social justice circles for years.

Austin then argued that by doing so, it’ll be the “most effective and lethal fighting force in the world.”

Don't leave home without this medicine

Could it have been was something I ate while trying to use up the food in my refrigerator before leaving for my long-awaited vacation to Italy? Did I come down with a 24-hour stomach bug? Whichever it was, I was attacked by diarrhea while driving to the airport!

After several frantic restroom stops and doses of anti-diarrheal medicine from my carry-on bag, I finally got checked in at Sea-Tac airport. With 23 hours of travel between Seattle and my final destination, I was lucky; I was able to replenish my stash of anti-diarrheal pills at one of the airport kiosks. It took several more doses and most of the trip from Seattle to Rome for my stomach to settle. Thankfully, I then could spend my vacation admiring Italian art and scenery instead of sprinting to Italian restrooms.

My go-to remedy for diarrhea is Imodium-AD® (loperamide). First introduced as a prescription medicine in 1976, loperamide has been available over the counter (OTC) for many years and has proven to be a VERY effective medicine for acute diarrhea.

During digestion, your food turns into a liquid mass of nutrients just waiting to be absorbed into your body. The muscles that line the inside of your intestines are designed to work together. They squeeze your food in a coordinated rhythm called peristalsis, moving your food through your intestines, inch by inch.

The coordinated movement of your internal intestinal muscles moves this food mass through your small intestine, large intestine, and then your colon, allowing your body to absorb its nutrients and water along the way. What is leftover is then eliminated as feces. The longer it takes the food to move through your intestine, the more water is absorbed into your body, and the firmer your feces or stool becomes. If the food moves too quickly, your body won't have time to absorb much of the liquid and nutrients, creating diarrhea. If the food mass moves too slowly, too much water can be absorbed, making the stool hard, encouraging constipation.

Experienced constipation for the first time when given cough syrup containing the narcotic codeine to treat my severe from whooping cough. Constipation is a common side effect of pain medicines like codeine, hydrocodone, and oxycodone. These drugs cause the movement of the muscles that line your intestine to slow down. Loperamide is closely related to these powerful painkillers. It relieves diarrhea by slowing down your intestinal muscles like its more powerful cousins, helping ease intestinal cramping and diarrhea.

Loperamide doesn't relieve pain like other opioid medicines. However, some people have discovered that if you take enough loperamide, you can get "high" or stave off the misery of narcotic withdrawal. The Food and Drug Administration has reported cases of people taking 4 times the maximum dose of loperamide experiencing euphoria, confusion, and heart palpitations.

Pepto-Bismol® (bismuth subsalicylate) is another medicine that I always pack when I travel. It reduces abdominal cramping, nausea, and diarrhea but is not quite as effective in relieving diarrhea as loperamide. Available as wintergreen-flavored chewable tablets, liquid as well as regular tablets, Pepto-Bismol® will turn your stools black.

Ask...

Some people recommend probiotics for diarrhea. I have found them helpful to reduce diarrhea in my dogs, but personally? I find Imodium-AD® MUCH more reliable.

Here Are 4 Tips on Treating Acute Diarrhea:

1. Be prepared.

I always keep Imodium-AD® (loperamide) tablets and some Pepto-Bismol® chewable tablets on hand, both at home and on vacation. I want to meet new people and see new sights, not spend my vacation seeking out or sprinting to the nearest bathroom.

2. If the first dose doesn't work, add Pepto-Bismol.

You can take Pepto-Bismol (bismuth subsalicylate) in addition to loperamide, even at the same time. I always pack the chewable tablets, but if you hate the taste of wintergreen, buy the non-chewable pills that you swallow instead. Beware: bismuth subsalicylate will turn your stool a dramatic

3. Don't overdose on loperamide.

The maximum dose of 8 tablets of Imodium-AD (loperamide) in 24 hours should be plenty to do the job. Take 2 tablets to start after your first loose stool and one tablet after each loose stool after that. You can also take both loperamide and Pepto-Bismol® (bismuth subsalicylate) together at the same time.

4. Seek medical attention.

Some types of diarrhea will need immediate medical attention instead of just an anti-diarrheal medicine. If you experience bloody diarrhea, vomiting, and diarrhea for more than 24 hours, have severe abdominal pain with diarrhea, seek medical attention right away.
