Cashmere Middle School kicked off the end of the school year with a colorful blast.

The school held the fourth annual Color Run fundraiser on June 9.

While CMS students were the focal point of the event, a plethora of parent and staff volunteers helped organize the event.

During the event, the Cashmere Fire Department brought a four wheeler and fire truck to clean the color off students. Scott Milne set up water stations along the route.

Proceeds raised from the event will help the CMS leadership students fund extracurricular activities.

(From left) Ned Crisp and Zach Top and the rest of Ned Crisp and Bottomline were one the acts on night one of the 17th Annual Wenatchee River Bluegrass Festival at the Chelan County Expo Center in Cashmere. The band was just one of many acts in a jam-packed three-day weekend. In addition to the bands, the event featured Taylor's Camp, a two-day instrument workshop for kids established in memory of Taylor Richards. Camp attendees received TC scholarship awards.

The festival also included music workshops for adults, a live auction, band scrambles and jam sessions. There was a Gospel Show on June 16 at the Mary Starr Stage featuring Roosevelt Road, Rusty Hinges and Ned Crisp and Bottomline. The Wenatchee River Bluegrass Festival will return in 2020.

Cashmere Public Library branch launches summer program

By AL STOVER

The Cashmere branch of the North Central Regional Library (NCRL) district launched their summer reading program for children, teens and adults.

The NCRL's Summer Library Program, which runs until Aug. 31, encourages children to build their reading skills, as well prevent summer reading loss and prepare for the next school year.

It also encourages families to read together and engage in activities.

The summer reading program officially began the day after school. Children can visit their local library to receive a challenge pack, which includes a registration card. It also features a list of challenges, ranging from reading a book about a real person to learning a word in a different language. Patrons can turn in their challenge cards and be entered into prize drawings for dolls, books and toys.

There will also be fun craft events and programs at the various library branches throughout the region.

The NCRL is encouraging teens, ages 12-18, to be involved at their libraries this summer with participating in the program. Teens can sign up at their local branch and receive a challenge pack and earn rewards for completing challenges and reading books. They are also encouraged to attend one of the events at their local library.

Teens who are searching for a good book to read can try one of the items from the Teen Summer Reads 2019 list. The list includes nonfiction, fiction books, and graphic novels.

The NCRL also has a summer program for adults who want to model their reading habits for their children or want to access resources.

Similar to the Teens program, adults can sign up at their local library where they will receive a challenge pack and reading log to track their progress. Every three books they read earns them a prize entry, as do every Challenge Pack Orbit they finish.

Families who cannot visit their local library branch can check out the NCRL website for the library's Kids Summer Library Program for children 11 years and younger. There is also an online option for teens ages 12 to 18.

The online program allows kids play games and complete challenges. Patrons will be entered into a prize drawing for every three challenges they can complete.

For more information about the NCRL summer programs, visit <http://www.ncrl.org>.

Comprehensive Land Use Plan wins council approval

By KALIE DRAGO

Record Reporter

With a full quorum and an additional guest speaker, the Cashmere City Council meeting flowed seamlessly on Monday, June 10 at the usual 6 p.m. start. The council dived into the meeting with Cashmere Public Library librarian, Lisa Lawless, taking the floor.

"I wanted to come here tonight just to give a review of the wonderful things that the library can offer for everyone, including adults, and talk about our summer library program a little bit," said Lawless.

She presented the summer theme, which is 'Universe of Stories', along with highlighting summer dates to add to the calendar. For instance, there will be a performance of The Odyssey on June 24 and a collaboration with the Cashmere Museum to host Founders Day Alive! that will include historical artifacts on June 27.

On the heels of the library presentation, there was one public comment wedged into the public hearing portion of the Comprehensive Land Use Plan.

Flint Hartwig from Eider Construction brought two proposals regarding a piece of land that is in the county and adjacent to Cashmere city limits, and more specifically to the Urban Growth Area. According to Hartwig, the property is roughly 7.5 acres.

"I came in and talked to the Planning Commission, just kind of broaching the subject of how to short plat this property into the highest and best use," said Hartwig.

Hartwig is weighing options as to how to develop the piece of property and toying with two different ideas - one being a more affordable ($350,000) tight knit, dense, village-like community and the other being more expensive ($500,000), tailored to the white collar crowd with larger homes and bigger yards. Essentially, he pitched eight homes versus a neighborhood-esque development.

In order to fulfill the tighter density, less pricey home, 'village' option is where the Comprehensive Land Use Plan and having control on growth plays a role. Hartwig mentioned to move the Urban Growth Area, amend the Comprehensive Plan and annex the property into the city.

"We need to shrink the yards, shrink the houses, pack them in tighter. So thinking about urban sprawl and preserving what's around us, there's quite a bit of green space around the town, if you're going to keep that - and that's what people like. You can't really hold back the tide, people are going to move here. And if you approve tighter and tighter densities, they'll still move here, they'll just move into tighter spaces, preserving more area around you," said Hartwig. "Easier to afford, easier to maintain."

He stated he didn't have a personal preference as to which direction the community would point him in - just that he wouldn't want to fight an uphill battle with a community that doesn't want the roots he's trying to put down.

"To me, I'm okay with either one of these. I understand there's a process and I'm ready to go through that process, but I'm not ready to go through that process with a bunch of push back," said Hartwig. "I'm not trying to push one (option) over the other. I just need a little bit of direction."

Council member Scott Daniel posed the question how the two choices fall into what the town wants - referencing the community

Social ‘engineers’ and other geniuses that plague the land

I sometimes see the world as nothing more than an oxymoron which trisected into part Spanish means Ox y Moron (beast of burden and stupid). The analogies, metaphors and downright vaudevillian slaps in the face permeate our lives regarding our perception of reality even if we are oblivious to them.

Some say perception is everything, so I guess that means questioning the vision pushed into our faces constantly by advertisers on television, billboards, radio and print media?

One TV station was having a “D-Day Marathon” with incredible graphic film, some never seen before. There they were, our dads, uncles, grandfathers and great grandfathers including German, Russian, French, Canadian and British troops in a bloodletting frenzy.

After the smoke clears, enter a Mercedes Benz commercial: “The best or nothing,” spews its arrogant slogan. I’m sure they felt the same way when building Hitler’s war machine back in the 1930s when their weapons killed our ancestors on the beaches of Normandy. Ironic, eh?

I can say the same with Japan’s Mitsubishi. After building “Zero” fighter planes and millions of other weapons it turned its attention to sucking the life out of Detroit by building “better” cars consumed insatiably by Americans who can remember getting bombed by that same company under the imperial direction of Tojo and his puppet emperor Hirohito.

My oh my what clever former opponents we have. Start a war, lose after wrecking havoc on all humanity, then let the victors (us) rebuild your respective empires and turn a fat profit.

I forgot to add, Germany and Japan even “allow” our troops to protect them up until this very day and I’m sure for another decade or 20.

Talk about repeating ancient history - 121 years ago we beat Spain and captured gobs of land and even whole countries like Cuba, Puerto Rico, Guam and the Philippines only to give half of them back.

Cuba has been a pain ever since the “Castro Convertible” brothers took over 60 years ago. They leapt from a revolutionary people’s movement to a flat, gray, stagnant Communist sewer in just a few months after beating the U.S. backed dictator Generalissimo Fulgencio Batista, he of Godfather movie fame, in bed with the mob.

Because of the possibly faked bombing of the battleship Maine during Cuba’s fight for independence in 1898, America received the green light to pillage and plunder the weaker Spaniards on a variety of fronts.

Who’s laughing to the bank now? Guam and Puerto Rico are still sucking massive amounts of money from taxpayers as welfare states, the Philippines kicked us out after we poured billions into its economy and Cuba’s Raul Castro is still smoking cigars with his feet on our sofa.

Before I die I would like to see a free, democratic and prosperous Cuba and would also love to see a million or so American Cubans return to their Motherland and show those left behind how to run a democracy as well as build a few dozen Walmarts, 7-11’s and of course at least two car dealerships.

I recommend Mercedes Benz and Mitsubishi. If those two behemoths of the auto industry play their cards right, I bet the mayor of Detroit would let around 10,000 former auto workers get work visas and spend some serious time in the new Cuba building “foreign” German and Japanese cars.

They can collect Cuban food stamps, crowd Havana’s emergency rooms as uninsured patients and, most fun of all, bring their cousins, wives, children and grandmothers with them. The children of course get free education all the way through college (thanks to socialism) and then return to enrich Detroit --- maybe. Or maybe they just lie on a beach somewhere in Cuba, waiting for more relatives to join them.

Next on the list would be for them to collect the Cuban version of Supplemental Security Income just like they did back home in the Motor City.

Perhaps I’ll just go buy a Kia. At least the South Koreans never killed any Americans during the Korean “police action” War and I want to thank them for that.

After all, we are still protecting them too as their economy has boomed over the decades. Funny thing though, most Koreans I know actually still appreciate that protection, especially in the face of the madman midget king of North Korea.

The Germans and Japanese people don’t need us or like us much anymore, that is until the Russians come calling in Europe and the Chinese in Asia.

Then they will expect us to rescue them again.

Vale Elementary recognized for academic growth

Sean McKenna, Vale Elementary Principal, briefs the Cashmere School District on Vale’s progress on student learning.

By KALIE DRAGO

Record Reporter

Vale Elementary is where the youngest members of the Cashmere School District are introduced to academics. Monitoring and improving how the Vale Elementary students are growing academically is crucial to academic success short term and long term in their time as students. Despite being some of the smallest students in Cashmere School District, Vale Elementary students are making big strides. Washington State Board of Education has recognized Vale Elementary for significant annual gains on the Washington School Improvement Framework.

“We are very excited to be recognized by the state with such an honor,” said Sean McKenna, Vale Elementary principal.

Vale was selected after successfully closing opportunity gaps and pushing their students toward higher progress than expected. With 2,370 schools in the state of Washington, only 216 schools received this award, according to Linda McKay, Assistant Superintendent at North Central Educational Services.

“What it means to Vale students, is that not only are their students progressing at expected growth rates (for example, a student will grow a year academically from 1st grade to 2nd grade), they are surpassing that expected growth,” said McKay. “Students are making great gains in their learning and surpassing that expected rate.”

Being one out only 216 schools makes the recognition illuminate the degree that Vale Elementary stands out in helping students improve.

Elementary school universally is students initial leap into their learning experience, making that first step in public education, arguably one of the most important steps. Vale Elementary exemplifies the need to pay attention and propel students to reach that next level in order to foster a positive learning experience.

McKenna will be heading to Spokane to represent Vale Elementary and on June 6 for the award ceremony.

Land Use Plan

that attended the council's workshop and stressed the desire to preserve the small town feel. Hartwig assured that both choices preserve the feel of the town, just a different demographic to settle in each location. Otherwise, council members seemed generally receptive, but nothing concrete was put into motion.

Mayor Jim Fletcher reminded the council that the Comprehensive Land Use Plan is the big picture to help guide growth and developments like Hartwig presented.

"We're not focused on this particular development. This is an example of what could happen, but the comp plan is really tied into what is our goal. Later on in the year, we'll get into actual zoning and building standards that we could identify for certain projects," said Fletcher.

After reaffirming that the Plan is the overarching way to harness control of growth and steward which development direction the city is looking to go, the council approved it unanimously.

"What's the big picture that we want?" is what our comp plan is telling us," said Fletcher.

Some goals weaved in the comp plan included encouraging appropriate land use, preserve natural beauty, encourage forming neighborhoods and community units and lessen traffic accidents and congestion.

Other business tended to:

- An agreement between the city of Cashmere and Station 2601 for irrigation responsibilities to keep that stretch of land green by the antique mall next to the highway.
- Those on the 300 block of Chapel Street will be having water and sewer lines replaced this summer along with the road being repaved by Hurst Construction of East Wenatchee. Starting June 17 until August 30 from typically 7 a.m. until 5 p.m., Monday-Thursday, occasionally stretching 'till 7 p.m and Fridays. The city will alert home owners of specific dates of water outages when the individual home is connected to the new system.

Dealing with Abuse Honestly and Lovingly

Rachel was a bright and spirited 15-year-old and when she became a Christian earlier in the year, she found a home in a local church. She had a gift for singing and when she was approached by the music minister for an opportunity to join the worship team, she was beyond elated.

Little did she know that what would happen would be years of sexual abuse by this minister. Finally, after building enough courage to approach the leadership about the abuse, the church did little to help. Instead, they quietly urged the minister to resign and remained silent on what happened.

The truth is “Rachel” could be anyone. It could be you, me, your son or daughter. Victims of sexual abuse do not come from one specific demographic. To be sure, most reported incidents are from women but anyone can tell you, there are scores of incidents that are unreported because of shame and embarrassment and many victims are men.

In our recent day, thousands of reports of individuals who have suffered sexual abuse within the church are finally coming to light. Tragically, in almost every instance the church and its leadership were unwilling or incapable of handling the situation appropriately which left these victims feeling deeply betrayed.

The feeling of betrayal is understandable. The church is meant to be a sanctuary and haven for the downtrodden and abused, but instead it has become a place where we are silent about sexual abuse and are unwilling to minister to its victims. Why? because it is uncomfortable to do so and may give the church a bad reputation.

Absolutely abominable. Things have to change and in my own denomination (Southern Baptist Convention), things are changing in regards to handling incidents of sexual abuse.

A couple of days ago, I attended the Southern Baptist Convention’s annual meeting where we voted on to make an unprecedented change in our denomination’s governing documents. The changes include the condemnation of all acts of sexual abuse and harassment and procedures to ensure that all SBC churches are proactive in making sure they are safe.

Please understand this isn’t just talk or a publicity stunt. This is a clear sign of repentance for our denomination—a willingness to say we were wrong—and a massive step forward to minister the gospel to the people who need it most: the brokenhearted and crushed in spirit.

Sexual misconduct and abuse are never okay and neither is being silent about it. The Church should and must be the most vocal about this issue and most committed to advocacy and safety of those suffering.

I want to stop here and speak pastorally for a moment, because undoubtedly if the statistics are true, there are some reading this that have been victims of some type of sexual abuse. What happened to you was not your fault nor does it mean that there is something wrong with you.

Whatever the incident, what happened to you was evil perpetrated by a sinful human being and will be made right by a good God.

How? By giving you hope and showing you His love.

That incident of abuse does not define who you are, God does. God has defined you by creating you in His own image and loving you so much that he sent His own Son to purchase, by his own blood, healing and grace.

He has given you a benefit of the gospel which acknowledges the past and it’s evil but says to you there can be a brighter day presently and an even more glorious future.

Lastly, God moves very near to those who are hurting and provides not only His Spirit which comforts but also a community that does actually care. Although the visible church and some of its leaders have grossly failed in this area, the people of God who have experienced the very compassion of Christ are there to weep with and walk through the journey of recovery with anyone who has been hurt.

As a pastor I want to say you are not alone and nor will your voice be silent. Your pain is our pain and your tears are our tears and because of the love of Christ, we are compelled toward mercy and understanding.

A lot has been said of the failure within the church in recent days but I believe that the church is still a sanctuary and those who are hurting are welcome there.

NCW Media Inc.’s Obituary and Memorial Policy

An obituary is a way for family members to commemorate a loved one’s life and to notify the larger community of the deceased. Obituaries are also used for historical and ancestral data. Memorials are another way of letting the community know about the life and memories of the person who has died. A memorial is different from an obituary. An obituary is usually current while a memorial can be written later. For publication in the Cashmere Valley Record or The Leavenworth Echo, an obituary or memorial needs to be typed and emailed to editor@leavenworthecho.com no later than 4 p.m. Friday for the next week’s issue. Funeral homes and chapels can submit obituaries by noon on Monday, except holidays. Obituaries are priced per word while the charge for memorial ads are by the column-inch. Cost of the obituary/ memorial is due at the time of placement. For information call 509-548-5286, or email editor@leavenworthecho.com

We are here to serve families in Leavenworth, Peshastin, Plain and the entire Upper Valley.

Cashmere hosts youth basketball camp

Many successful high school sports programs will work as hard - if not harder - during the offseason - to prepare for the upcoming year. The third-place state finisher Cashmere High girls basketball team is no exception.

While they are spending the majority of the summer gearing up for a successful 2018-19 campaign, the Cashmere girls took some time to pass their skills, knowledge and experience to future Lady Bulldogs. The six-time Caribou Trail League and District 6 champions hosted a youth camp for incoming Cashmere 3-8 graders at CMS, June 10-12.

CHS Lady Bulldogs Head Coach Brent Darnell has been running the Cashmere youth camp for seven years. He noted that the $35 registration, nor the format has changed in the time he has held the camp.

During the camp, the older campers worked on skills like vault drills and offensive cut drills while the younger ones worked on fundamentals such as shots, passes and communication. Darnell noted that many of the moves, lingo, and offensive and defensive strategies kids learn in the camp are the same ones he uses with the Cashmere High girls team.

"For example if we say 'jump stop' to a third grader, they will know what it means by the time they reach high school," he added.

In addition to learning and developing their basketball skills, athletes also received important lessons from Darnell, such as making eye contact during conversation, paying attention to coaches, be willing to learn new skills and hustling between drills.

"If you're walking on the basketball court, something is wrong," Darnell said during the huddle on the first day of camp. "When you watch high school basketball, there's no walking on the court."

Another lesson Darnell emphasized to the campers was one they can utilize throughout their lifetime - be on time. During his speech, Darnell acknowledged the Lombardi Clock stationed outside of Lambeau Field in Green Bay, Wisconsin and how it is set 15 minutes earlier than the other clocks in the city. The Lombardi Clock was built in honor of the legendary coach who stressed to his players to be 15 minutes early to games, practice and bus departures. If players were not early, then Lombardi considered them "late."

Darnell explained that showing up 15 minutes early to practice provides players opportunities to get in some extra shots or stretching before the first whistle.

The Lady Bulldogs head coach was just one of the coaching components of the camp. Assisting him were his assistant coaches like

Cashmere tennis courts open on Tuesdays and Thursdays

By AL STOVER

Cashmere kids who are contemplating joining the CHS Bulldogs tennis teams, or just want to get in some time on the courts, may want to make room on their schedule during the next couple of months.

The Cashmere Middle School tennis courts are open on Tuesdays and Thursdays in June and July, beginning at 7 p.m.

CHS Head Coach Trevor Kert said the Bulldogs have spent the last couple of summers practicing on the courts in an effort to keep active in the offseason. He noted that some athletes who participate in summer tennis are younger Bulldogs who will return like Ellie Martin and Grant Kopp, who played JV and might move up to varsity next season, as well as Lexi Neu and doubles state champion Lauren Kert.

While many of the athletes on the court are experienced Bulldogs, local youth, especially incoming eighth-grade and freshman, are welcome to come play and work with the athletes.

Coach Kert said the tennis on Tuesdays and Thursdays are more relaxed and less formal than practices during the spring season, though he, along with JV Coach Bill Schmidt are on hand to give instruction to athletes if they request it.

He also understands that many Cashmere high school students are already attending multiple sports camps during the week, or have summer jobs and work during the day. The 7 p.m. time slot allows kids time to go home, eat dinner and come out to the courts.

"It's more of a relaxed format," Coach Kert said. "Sometimes we'll play doubles or singles. We do what we can to help and we like to keep it fun."

Coach Kert noted that Cashmere will not host any local tournaments. He added that Bulldog athletes can compete in the LocalTel Jr. Tennis Tournament in Wenatchee, which takes place during the second weekend of July.

While summer tennis is more relaxed compared to the spring, it does provide some team building opportunities. Coach Kert explained the Bulldog athletes and coaching staff to work on new skills and technique, or refine strategies that are already in place.

"Summer is a great time to try something new," Kert said. "It's hard to teach something new during the spring because you are so focused on the season and winning, you can't make the time to tweak something."

For more information about summer tennis on Tuesdays or Thursdays, email tkert@cashmere.wednet.edu.

Stan Evenhus and Evenhus' daughter, Wenatchee Valley College player and Tessa Bromley.

The bulk of the coaching staff was made up of the 9-12 graders on the Lady Bulldogs team - all of whom had attended the camp when they were younger.

Darnell said having the CHS players coach during the camp allows them to teach work with younger athletes who were in the same position as they were years before.

"It also helps them learn our system better when they have to teach it," Darnell added.

Grace Hammond, who will be a senior next year, is one of the Lady Bulldogs who has attended Darnell's basketball camp all the way back to when he coached at Eastmont High School. Hammond credited her years attending the camp in helping her develop her passion for basketball and working with a team. She noted the camp is also a great way for her and her teammates to give back to the community.

"Seeing so many girls willing to play basketball, that just shows with how great Coach Darnell runs the camp," Hammond said.

Hammond added that her favorite aspect of the program is seeing all of the campers work on their overall basketball game and learn the skills that will help them when it is their turn to wear a Cashmere Bulldogs jersey.

Three future Bulldogs who attended the camp were Lily Erdmann, Allie McKenna and Ellie Bessonette. All three girls were a part of the Cashmere girls sixth-grade AAU basketball team who finished third in the 2019 Washington State Middle School Basketball Championships.

The trio explained they enjoy attending the camp because it allows them to play basketball with one another, and their future CHS teammates and work under the tutelage of the CHS coaching staff and the high schoolers.

The trio have also learned valuable lessons from their time at camp, such as being a good teammate and making good decisions on and off the court.

"(We also learned) to make good decisions on and off the court," Erdmann added.

All three girls plan on attending next year's youth camp.

Club bike repair event

Cashmere Middle School teacher and Bike Repair Club adviser Jeff Cravens works on a bike during the club's bicycle repair, donation, give away event on June 1 in the middle school parking lot. During the event, locals brought their bikes for repairs and donated their own wheels to be given away later. Bikes were also given away during the event.

Stormi O'Keefe warms up her arms at the beginning of the softball team's May 31 clinic. O' Keefe was one of the Lady Bulldogs who polished her skills during the clinic. The event was an opportunity for the team to not only prepare for next season but also help local youth. The Lady Bulldogs will hold practices during the summer, as well as compete in a couple of tournaments.

The Cashmere High softball team hosted a free softball clinic on May 28 and May 31 for local youth. During the clinic, coaches and athletes worked with future softball players. Volunteer coach Stan Evenhus (left) gives some pointers to incoming freshman Zoe Brown. Brown was one of the future Lady Bulldogs who attended the clinic.

Several athletes from the Cashmere softball team is putting in some extra work during the summer to prepare for next year, including starting pitcher Peyton Brown (pictured), who practiced some hitting and bunting in the batting cage. Brown was one of many Lady Bulldogs who participated in both days of the team's free softball clinic.
