Vale Elementary School students met some new friends of the scaled variety on March 12.

Scott Petersen, known as "The Reptile Man," visited Vale during two afternoon assemblies. During both assemblies, students learned information about various reptiles, such as the thickness of a tortoise's shell and the eating habits of gila monsters. Petersen also clarified some misconceptions about reptiles. He explained that snakes do not chase people, and will only attack

Cashmere's Hailey Van Lith was one of the 50 athletes from across the U.S. to be recognized as the Gatorade State Player of the Year for girls' basketball.

By AL STOVER

Cashmere High School's Hailey Van Lith added another honor to her growing list of accolades.

Van Lith, fresh off her junior season with the Lady Bulldogs basketball program, was named the Gatorade's Girls Basketball Player of the Year for Washington state.

A news release cites Van Lith's athletic accomplishments, which include leading the Bulldogs to a third-place finish in the 1A State Basketball tournament. This season Van Lith was named the Caribou Trail League Player of the Year, for the third time, broke the CHS record for most three-point shots in a single game on two occasions and scored her 2,000th high school career point.

Outside of school, Van Lith won gold medals with the U17 Women's World Cup Team and the United States' Youth Olympic team. She was also the Washington Interscholastic Activities Association's Athlete of the Week for Week 20 in girls' basketball.

Van Lith also works hard off the court, maintaining a 4.0 GPA in the classroom and volunteering her time as a peer math tutor. She also volunteers on behalf of her church's youth ministry.

As with every athlete who is named a state winner, Van Lith has an opportunity to award a $1,000 grant to a youth sports organization of her choice through Gatorade's "Pay It Forward" program. She will also have the chance to apply for a $10,000 spotlight grant for her organization.

The Gatorade State Player of the Year award was established in 1985 and recognizes outstanding high school athletes from each state across the United States in 12 sports: football, volleyball, boys and girls cross country, boys and girls basketball, boys and girls soccer, boys and girls track and field, baseball and softball.

Each state winner is chosen based on three criteria: Athletic Excellence, Academic Achievement and Exemplary Character. A Gatorade National Player of the Year from each sport is chosen from the state winners.

From the 12 national winners, one boy and one girl will be named the Gatorade High School Athlete of the Year.

Cashmere's Asa Trowbridge 'pages' in Olympia

OLYMPIA - Asa Trowbridge of Cashmere, a 10th-grader at Cashmere High School, spent a week working as a page for the Washington State Senate at the Capitol in Olympia. Trowbridge was one of 17 students who served as Senate pages for the ninth week of the 2019 legislative session.

He was sponsored by 12th Legislative District Sen. Brad Hawkins. Hawkins serves Douglas and Chelan counties and parts of Grant and Okanogan counties.

"Asa had a busy week," Hawkins said. "He was an excellent page and I am glad he gained some valuable insight from this experience."

The Senate Page Program provides an opportunity for Washington students to spend a week working at the Legislature. Students transport documents between offices, as well as deliver messages and mail. Pages spend time in the Senate chamber and attend page school to learn about parliamentary procedure and the legislative process. Students also draft their own bills and engage in a mock session.

"My favorite part was working as a courier in the Legislative Building," Trowbridge said. "Everything holds more weight when you can see it happening up close... the page program rejuvenated my belief in our system." Trowbridge enjoys playing video games and studying history.

Trowbridge, 15, is the son of Stephanie and Carey Trowbridge of Cashmere. Students interested in the City to work with Cashmere Food Bank on permanent location

The Cashmere Food Bank's current food distribution center is located at 109 Railroad Ave.

By AL STOVER

Both the city of Cashmere and the Food Bank Board of Directors took the initial steps in finding a new home for the organization.

During the March 11 meeting, the Cashmere City Council authorized staff to work with the Cashmere Food Bank to lease city-owned property to the organization.

The food bank is currently housed in a lease-owned warehouse on Railroad Avenue, which has limited space for storage and food distribution. The food bank exports 9,000 pounds of food per month and has 100 volunteers, with more people helping during the holidays.

"The needs and the clientele have expanded," said Dale Jones, who along with Sherri Wills, spoke on behalf of the food bank's board of directors. "We can only have three people in a room. This project is for the city of Cashmere. We envision a building that has purpose, and the pride of the city of Cashmere."

Wills explained the food bank's goal is to lease property from the city and erect a building that the organization would own. The new building would meet city and county codes and be used as a warehouse and food distribution center. Volunteers would also utilize the space to sort the organization's food drives, prepackage food and provide other services to clients.

Jones said once the food bank board of directors determine the size and space of the proposed building, they will examine their needs, discuss grant and fundraising ideas for the facility and develop a timeframe for construction. Prior to the meeting, staff reviewed several city-owned parcels of land and identified the Railroad Avenue property, across from the city shop, as a good choice to house the food bank's new building. The proposed property is approximately .64 acres, and is zoned for warehouse and industrial purposes.

Mayor Jim Fletcher noted there are issues the city needs to take care of before it can lease the property, such as the determining the amount of space needed for the building and installing water and sewer to the site. The Railroad Avenue property is just one option for the food bank's new home.

Fletcher also thanked Food Bank Board Member Irene Gomes for expressing the idea of the city and the food bank working together.

Prior to the food bank's proposal, the council heard a presentation on the Chelan Public Utilities District's Service Center project at Olds Station Road in Wenatchee.

The objective of the new Service Center is to increase employee productivity and efficiency, while providing top customer service. Chelan County PUD Shared Services Director Dan Frazier explained the county is beginning the project's public engagement process.

He said the PUD began the project three and a half years ago and identified three goals: provide the most financial value and the best service to customer-owners, and enhance safety. Frazier noted that the county conducted a 50-year analysis on different methods with the best option being the consolidation of the PUD's Wenatchee area operations into one location. While consolidation has the highest initial cost, it will be the least in terms of long-term cost.

The proposed Service Center will be constructed on parcels of land acquired by the county. The center's operations located in the back of the property while crew spaces and customer service and administration offices are housed in the front. Frazier said the county will be gathering input from the cities to for the front building's design to determine decor and aesthetics that "speaks to all of the communities in Wenatchee Valley."

Residents can access information about the project through what Frazier described as a "virtual open house" on the PUD website.

They can also attend one of the local open houses throughout the county. The PUD hosted an open house at the Cashmere Riverside Center on March 19.

For the building's construction process, Frazier said the PUD is utilizing the General Contractor/Construction Manager (GCCM) method. He added the PUD hopes to interview a candidate by June, but will not proceed until the commissioners move forward with the project. As for the schedule, Frazier said the building is scheduled to be completed in 2022 and staff will occupy the structure in phases.

Council Member Daniel Scott asked how the project will be funded and was concerned about the potential perception from the public that the PUD will increase rates to "fund office spaces." Frazier explained the operational component will take up 70 percent of the project's costs while the office buildings will cost 30 percent.

"It's not so much about office spaces," Frazier added. "It's more about getting the crews and the materials in the right place."

Frazier noted that he cannot determine whether or not there will any rate increases, but noted the project is already accounted for in the PUD's system. He also emphasized that consolidation will cost less in the long-term as opposed to maintaining the status quo and spending money to fix facilities as problems arise.

Frazier added that the county commissioners have $50 million in a segregated account for facility improvements. A portion of capital improvement funding also comes from excess power sales to PUD's wholesale customers.

Chelan County PUD Commissioner Randy Smith noted the challenge the PUD faces, resulting from adopting a 9 percent rate surcharge about 10 years ago. Smith added that county has not raised rates in seven years and local rates are "paying a lower portion of the county's bills."

"If we want to continue to go out to the bond market and get good ratings, we have to show that our revenues are not all dependent on outside power sales," Smith said. "It's going to be difficult to separate the perception from reality.

My gut tells me, if we don't fix facilities it will increase rates more in the future than if we do them now. We're charged as commissioners to look at the long-term and not just the here and now."

In other action items, the council passed an ordinance that amends Chapter 5.04 for business licenses. Clerk-Treasurer Kay Jones brought a draft of proposed Ordinance and explained the Washington State Department of Revenue Business License Service (BLS) reviewed the code for business licenses for inconsistencies. She added that the BLS found the two issues that required clarification, one regarding non-profit organizations and whether or not they required to have a business license to operate within the city.

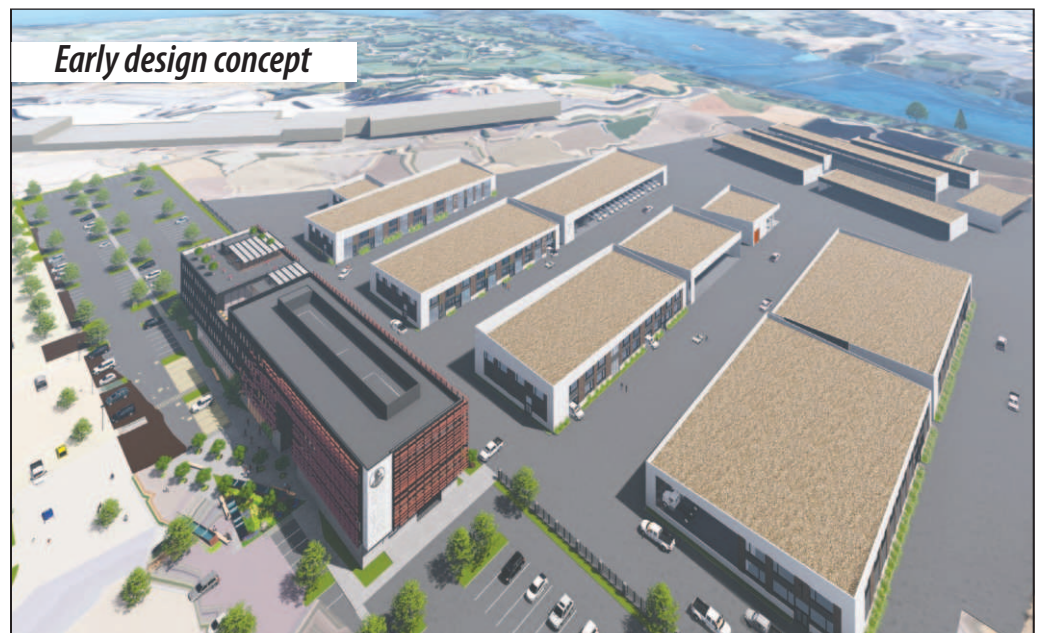

Jones explained the city attorney added language where nonprofits have to obtain a business license to operate within Cashmere, but are exempt from paying the licensing fee. Another amendment requires owners of multi-family rentals and storage rental facilities to obtain a business license. Owners of single-family units and duplexes are exempt.

Fletcher announced the leak at the local swimming pool is "getting significantly worse." He said the staff plans to bring in "someone who specializes in leak detection to determine the problem and see what can be done to fix it." He added that he is unsure whether or not the pool will be fixed before the summer season.

In other business: The council voted to schedule a public hearing on March 25 for the Comprehensive Land Use Plan Update.

They also approved an interlocal agreement between the city and Chelan County regarding housing inmates at the Chelan County Regional Justice Center.

Doctrine Divides

“Doctrine divides. Love unites.” is a common catchphrase among Evangelicals. Through years of doctrinal erosion for the sake of unity, the Church has been reduced to pithy little clichés and singing Kumbaya with those who adamantly reject everything orthodox Christianity teaches.

A WALK WITH PASTOR JOHN SMITH

For example, in the new ecumenical movement within the past decade, spearheaded by men such as Rick Warren and Pope Francis, we see “Christian” leaders joining hands with Buddhists, Muslims and other world religions, united in belief and in love.

Now please don’t misunderstand, Christians are commanded to love our non-Christian neighbors. Love is the supreme ethic within the Christian worldview and everything that we do as Christians should be fueled, undergirded and express our love for people.

Yet as important as loving people are, our love for God must come first.

And this is where doctrine plays a vital role within our faith because doctrine codifies the theology about who God is and how to love him in truth.

Christianity is based on doctrine. Doctrine can be broken up into three different categories: Essentials, Convictions, and Opinions. Essentials are those core non-negotiables that all Christians universally must believe and confess. For instance, essential doctrines would be: the deity of Christ (Jn. 1:1, Col 2:9), the triune nature of God (Matt. 3:16-17), the physical death and resurrection of Jesus (1 Cor. 15:17) and that salvation is by faith alone (Gal. 2:16, Eph. 2:8-9).

The next category, Convictions, although important and derived from Scripture, there can be some disagreement among Christians without being considered heretical or having abandoned the faith entirely.

Take the timing of the rapture as an example. Some hold to the conviction that it is before what is understood as the “Great Tribulation”. Others believe it to take place in the middle of that event or at the end. They all agree that the rapture of the church is going to happen but there is a difference in the timing. That conviction, while sparking a heated debate among Christians, is not something to divide over.

Lastly, are the Opinions. These would include types of worship music in church, Christians partaking of alcohol and the color of the sanctuary carpet. These and the like are what we call, adiaphora—the non-essentials and are considered spiritually neutral (the Bible neither forbids nor condones). However, it is an unfortunate reality that many churches split over opinions while at the same time compromising on the essentials.

As stated before, the essential doctrines are non-negotiable. If you or a church removes them or denies them, no longer are you consider in step with Historical Christianity and have grossly deviated from the “faith that was once for all delivered to the saints” (Jude. 1:3). Yet we see churches all over the nation abandoning doctrine for the sake of love and unity.

But I ask is abandoning the core doctrines for the sake of love, really loving?

The answer is “no”.

It is not loving to God. Think about it this way, God has written a book (the Bible) and in it contains His revelation of who He is, what He has done and what He is going to do. Instead of taking His word seriously, we shrug our shoulders and say “it really doesn’t matter” or even worse, consider it unloving to be uncompromising about the truth of God.

Nor is denying doctrine loving towards people because it is a form of deception. Acting like doctrine is unimportant while the Bible clearly says it is, hurts the Christian testimony and will lead people astray.

Doctrine does divide because it is meant to. It divides truth from error and Christians are concerned about truth.

Does this mean we become divisive in our attitude? No. But it does mean that there are some doctrines that are worthy of separating over. A Christian who believes the inerrancy of the Bible cannot in good conscience remain in

California manufacturer finds home in Cashmere Mill District

By KALIE DRAGO

Record Reporter

Cashmere residents that drive down Sunset Highway have probably gaped at the progress the Cashmere Mill District has made since construction began in September 2018. According to a press release from the Port of Chelan County, the first tenant has claimed a spot. Hurst International has signed a lease agreement for 6,500 square feet in the future business park.

“The town of Cashmere has a rich history, with its roots in agriculture,” said Alex Litchenberg, Hurst International representative. “Although we have been servicing this community and the surrounding areas for many years, we look forward to meeting our new neighbors and making an even larger contribution and more direct impact to the community.”

The company will fit in amongst its business neighbors - like a lot of Upper Valley companies, their products focus on fruit. Hurst International is a California based, fruit label manufacturer and will now be bringing their talent to Cashmere. More than bringing talent, the press release stated the company is expected to bring in new jobs and a private investment exceeding $1,000,000.

“They’re making significant investments in equipment and material that are going to go in the space. That generates sales and property tax for the city, the county and the state of Washington,” said Craig Larsen, from Port of Chelan County. “So there will be benefits to the area based on the investments this company’s going to make there.”

Hurst International isn’t unfamiliar with the area, despite being California based. The company already had connections locally due to regional customers such as Gebbers Farms, Chelan Fruit and Auvil Fruit according to the press release.

“We have been supplying apple, pear and onion packers with our cutting edge Print on Demand produce labeling technology for over 8 years in Washington” said Litchenberg. “Based on local demand for POD labels it became clear that we needed to invest more in our fastest growing market and better service our customers.”

Louws Trust Company is already on the mill site, according to Larsen. That company purchased 3.5 acres several years ago and have since built a manufacturing facility on Mill Road. And between the Louws Trust Company and Hurst International, there will be an influx of new jobs available locally.

“There will be manufacturing jobs in Cashmere. Between this company and Louws Trust Company, there’s probably going to have 30 to 35 jobs with more to come,” said Larsen.

The business park will be two buildings, each 16,500 square feet, according to the press release.

“They will be completed late this spring and we have other announcements coming soon for additional tenants in that space. So we’re very excited about the interest in it and Cashmere has been great to work with,” said Larsen.

NCW Media Inc.’s Obituary and Memorial Policy

An obituary is a way for family members to commemorate a loved one’s life and to notify the larger community of the deceased. Obituaries are also used for historical and ancestral data. Memorials are another way of letting the community know about the life and memories of the person who has died. A memorial is different from an obituary. An obituary is usually current while a memorial can be written later. For publication in the Cashmere Valley Record or The Leavenworth Echo, an obituary or memorial needs to be typed and emailed to editor@leavenworthecho.com no later than 4 p.m. Friday for the next week’s issue. Funeral homes and chapels can submit obituaries by noon on Monday, except holidays. Obituaries are priced per word while the charge for memorial ads are by the column-inch. Cost of the obituary/ memorial is due at the time of placement. For information call 509-548-5286, or email editor@leavenworthecho.com fellowship with a group that denies the Bible or the Biblical testimony concerning Jesus. Although I love my Mormon and Muslim friends, we are not able to stand united because there is a fundamental divide concerning our worldviews.

I will close with two quotes from Augustine and Martin Luther that have been increasingly beneficial in my life. “In essentials, unity; in non-essentials, liberty; in all things, love” And finally, “Peace if possible, truth at all costs.”

Cashmere baseball goes 0-2 in opening doubleheader

By AL STOVER

ORTING. Washington -- The Cashmere High School baseball team opened their 2019 campaign with two losses against Naches Valley in a nonleague doubleheader on March 16.

The Rangers defeated the Bulldogs, 8-4 in game one, and 13-3 in the nightcap.

Both Cashmere and Naches Valley had five hits apiece in the first game. The Rangers managed to bring runners in scoring position while Cashmere struggled to add more runs in the later innings. In the final frame, the Bulldogs loaded the bases with the tying run at the plate, but failed to score.

Brooks Elliot was 2-for-4 at the plate with an RBI and a run while Nathan Sohn went 1-for-3 with an RBI. Duke Okenrider was 1-for-4 with an RBI and Corey Phillips collected a hit.

Sohn and Carter Alberts shared pitching duties to throw a combined five-hitter.

The Bulldogs gained some momentum in game two, jumping to a 3-0 lead in the top of the fifth inning, including two runs from Scott's single. Naches Valley took the lead in the bottom of the fifth with nine runs from batters who were walked or hit-by-pitch (HBP). The Rangers added four more runs in the sixth inning to force the 10-run merc rule. Naches Valley had a total of 13 batters who scored via walks or HBP by five Bulldog relief pitchers.

Starter Brayden Weatherman threw seven strikeouts and only allowed one hit in his first four innings on the mound.

Bryce Neu was 2-for-3 at the plate with a double and a run while Elliott went 2-for-3 with one run scored. Weatherman had an RBI double and Tyler Keogh collected a hit.

Cashmere traveled to Royal to play the Knights in a nonleague doubleheader on March 19. The Bulldogs and the Knights were originally scheduled to play a single on March 12 but the game was rescheduled due to field conditions.

The Bulldogs will play their first home game against Liberty Bell on March 23, then host Quincy on March 26.

Student Athletes, family and fans flocked to the Cashmere High School Community Center on March 13 for the first Spring Sports Ice Cream Social.

Sponsored by the Cashmere Booster Club, the ice cream social was an opportunity for fans who turned out for this year's spring sports teams and the coaches leading the various squads, as well indulge in free ice cream and cookies.

During the event, each coach and athlete introduced themselves to the Cashmere faithful. Booster Club President Kristen Knoll also encouraged the athletes to work hard this season and thanked the coaches for their dedication to CHS athletics. The ice cream social featured raffle drawings.

All proceeds from the event went to support CHS athletics. For more information about the Cashmere Booster Club, visit their Facebook page.

WENATCHEE. Washington — The Cascade High School Equestrian Team began their competitive season with the first WAHSET (Washington High School Equestrian Team) District 1 competition from March 14-17 at the Appleatchee Arena in Wenatchee.

Among the CHS riders was Ty Harris, who competed in several events throughout the weekend.

Harris finished 12th in both Working Rancher, scoring 43 points, and Steer Daubing, finishing with a time of 6.65 seconds. He also participated in Break Away Roping, and the Individual Flags event where he finished in 9.949 seconds.

In team events, he, Heidi Dougherty, Ava Holmes and Hailey Bermingham finished with 151 points in the Freestyle Fours event to take first place.

In the Team sorting event, Harris and Dougherty finished 21st, placing seven cows into the pen on their first attempt.

The remaining results and final team scores of the WAHSET District 1 competition were not available as of press time.

Bulldog tennis teams sweep Royal

By AL STOVER

The Cashmere Bulldogs boys and girls tennis teams got their season off on the right foot as both squads picked up nonleague wins against Royal on March 16.

Head Coach Trevor Kert appreciated Royal's hospitality in preparing their courts for Cashmere in what was the first match of 2019 for both teams.

Like all local teams, the Bulldog tennis squads had to spend the first weeks of the season practicing indoors because of the snow.

"Our players were also excited to be swinging tennis rackets instead of swinging shovels as we did all last week in trying to get our courts playable," Kert added.

The Bulldog boys swept the Knights, 5-0. Kert said he was impressed with the No. 3 doubles team of Michael Christensen and Grant Kopp, who earned a 6-3, 6-4 win over their Royal opponents. Both Christensen and Kopp were playing the first varsity match of their high school careers.

The Cashmere girls also shutout Royal, 5-0.

Kert was also pleased with varsity newcomers Sophie Graybill and Teagan Igne, who defeated their Royal opponents, 6-0, 6-2, in their doubles match.

Cashmere was scheduled to play Central Washington Athletic Conference's East Valley-Yakima on March 18, but the match was canceled. The Bulldogs returned to their home court on March 19 to face Caribou Trail League rivals Cascade in the first of a three-match home series.

Cashmere will host Central Washington B League's Tonasket on March 22, then play CWAC's Quincy on March 25.

Heavyweight champ Joshua faces toughest opponent – the American audience

By AL STOVER

Boxing heavyweight champion and Britain's own Anthony Joshua has seemingly conquered the European landscape and is set to face his next challenge on American soil.

Joshua, who is 22-0 with 21 knockouts, will fight for the first time in the United States on June 1 when he takes on Jarrell "Big Baby" Miller at Madison Square Garden.

However, it's not Miller who many believe will be Joshua's toughest obstacle in his American debut. Many believe – and hope – that he will cruise through Miller like had his previous opponents. They believe his next challenge lies in getting over with the U.S. fanbase.

Joshua, along with Deontay Wilder and Tyson Fury are leading this new golden age of boxing's heavyweight division. Even with an impressive resume and a good look, pundits wonder if Joshua can be a fighter who American fans will gravitate toward.

It's no secret that boxing's popularity has waned in the United States for the last several years. There are numerous factors in the sport's decline in America, such as the rise mixed martial arts, and the high price of tickets and pay per view fights. You could go further and note that there is a lack of boxing awareness among casual sports fans.

Boxing has big names like Saul Canelo Alvarez and Gennady Golovkin, who hardcore boxing fans know and love. Yet very few boxers in recent years have achieved the levels of fame that legends like Muhammad Ali and Mike Tyson enjoyed in their heyday. The closest two would be Floyd Mayweather Jr., who goes back-and-forth between retirement and active, and Manny Pacquiao, whose popularity has slumped since his loss to Mayweather.

There are rising stars like Olympic gold medalist Claressa

THE RED CORNER
AL STOVER

Shields, who is good but not at that superstar level – not yet anyways.

While boxing has taken a dive in the U.S., the sport continues to thrive outside of America, especially in Europe.

Joshua, an Olympic gold medalist, was a notable prospect early in his professional career, but he took a step toward stardom after his 11th round knockout of Wladimir Klitschko in 2017.

Critics will note that Joshua being from Europe might affect his potential popularity with American fans. While it is difficult for a fighter born outside of the U.S. to become popular with American fans, it's not impossible. Pacquiao is from the Philippines and he was a superstar, generating more than $1.2 billion in revenue from his pay per view bouts.

Former UFC champion Conor McGregor is the biggest draw in MMA history, despite being born in Ireland. His boxing match with Mayweather also drew 4.3 million pay per view buys in North America, the second most in the sport's history.

Pacquiao's popularity comes from his humility and speaking highly of his opponents. On the other side, McGregor's popularity stems from him being loud and over-the-top, especially in the build-up to his fights, being unapologetic in his behavior and talk talking his opponents.

There are reasons for fans to gravitate toward Joshua. Like many fighters, he has humble origins and struggled during his youth, something many fight fans can relate to. He is well-spoken and ambitious. He also has solid punching power.

He has the tools and the look to be popular with American fans, he just needs to take more high profile fights and do a good job in promoting those bouts.

I hope Joshua gets over with American fans. Boxing needs more stars and a champion like Joshua could pave the way for a new crop of Sweet Science superstars.

58th Annual Poison Prevention Week

Celebrated March 17-23

At 11:05 a.m. on a February morning in 1992, I heard the pharmacy door shut behind the evening shift staff, leaving me alone in the pharmacy for the next six hours. When the tomb-like quiet of the basement level pharmacy was shattered by a loud buzzing, I recognized the ringtone of our community's Poison Control phone. Hurrying past shelves of medicines to the small office housing it, I picked up the phone's bright red receiver on third ring. "Hello, this is Poison Control. I'm Louise; how can I help you?"

Every 12 seconds, someone in the United States calls a Poison Control Center, where 90% of callers get the help they need without having to go to the ER or to a doctor's office. Poisoning is the number one cause of injury-related death in the United States, with children younger than six years old accounting for over 50% of calls to poison centers. According to Stephen Kaminski, JD, the CEO and executive director of the American Association of Poison Control Centers, most cases are treated at the site of the poison exposure, saving about $1.8 billion every year in direct medical costs, prevention, lost wages and productivity.

My caller that night was a distraught young man whose girlfriend got up that night, opened her medicine cabinet and took a swig from a bottle of what she thought was cough syrup but turned out to be something completely different. Like over 90% of poisonings, this occurred at home. Luckily, I was able to identify the offending substance quickly and start appropriate treatment, keeping her from needing additional medical care.

March 17-23 is the 58th observance of National Poison Prevention Week, one of the longest continuously running health and safety programs in the United States. Established in 1961 by Congress, the third full week of March calls attention to the vital role Poison Centers play in public health and safety. The very first Poison Control Center in Chicago celebrates its 67th anniversary this year, one of the 55 regional poison centers around the country.

On that February night back in 1992, I was at Yakima Valley Memorial Hospital, one of four hospitals in the state of Washington that housed a poison center back then, the others being St. Luke's Hospital in Spokane, Mary Bridge Children's Hospital in Tacoma, and Children's Hospital in Seattle. While state funding originally

CITY OF LEAVENWORTH

On the 12th day of March, 2019, the City Council of the City of Leavenworth, Washington passed the following ordinance. A summary of the contents provides as follows:

Ordinance 1584: An ordinance of the City of Leavenworth, Washington adopting the City of Leavenworth Comprehensive Plan Map as amended for lands owned by the City of Leavenworth.

A copy of the full text of the ordinance is available at Leavenworth City Hall or will be mailed to you upon your request to Chantell R. Steiner, Finance Director/City Clerk, City of Leavenworth, PO Box 287, Leavenworth, WA 98826.

covered 60% of those poison control centers' operating costs, as demand for services increased, state support stayed flat, and by 1992 the 4 hospitals were footing 60% of the bill to keep their Poison Centers open, a total of $1.3 million dollars annually and financially unsustainable. The state legislature voted to consolidate the centers, and by 1995 the transition to a single Poison Center for Washington State was complete.

Our state was not unique; most other community poison centers were forced to merge into regional ones as state funding continued to lag significantly behind the cost of providing poison management services. Finally, in 2005, a Poison Center Stabilization Grant from the federal government helped poison centers throughout the country bridge some of that financial gap, and today, federal funding continues to supply about 13% of the annual budgets for the 55 Regional Poison Centers across the country.

One enduring landmark of the 2005 Poison Center legislation was simplifying access. Instead of a having to find a local phone number to call for help, one toll-free number nationwide connected callers to whichever poison center was nearest them.

In addition to providing expert management for poison exposures, data on the types of exposures poison centers handle is collected by a database called TESS (Toxic Exposure Surveillance System), providing up-to-date monitoring of poisoning patterns, chemical exposures and emerging threats to public health.

3 Ways to Be Prepared for a Poisoning Emergency:

1. Keep the toll-free Poison Center hotline handy.

Add the national toll-free Poison Help number (800) 222-2221 to your mobile phone by texting "poison" to 797979, and saving it in your contacts.

2. Use the online Poison Help Tool.

There's an online tool at Poisonhelp.org which gives you specific instructions quickly on what to do based on the compound involved, victim's age, and type of exposure.

3. Call an animal poison center for pet poisonings.

If your pet ingests something they shouldn't, one of the dedicated pet poison information hotlines gives expert help: the Pet Poison Helpline at (855) 764-7661 or the Animal Poison Control Center supported by the ASPCA (Association for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals) at (888) 426-4435. There's a fee of about $60 per incident.

'Bleeding red' for a cause

By KALIE DRAGO
Record reporter

On March 8, the community and students alike were invited to drop into the Cashmere High School gymnasium - and not for the usual reason to take in the record setting basketball teams, but rather to give back. From 9:30 a.m. until 2:30 p.m., there was a window of opportunity to donate blood for the American Red Cross blood drive.

2019 was the second year in a row the school has paired up with the American Red Cross. Formerly an annual event, after a lull in participation the drive was discontinued at the school, according to the National Honor Society Blood Drive advisor, Scott Simmons. The previous year's successful drive caused the blood drive to resurface at the school.

"Last year, at about this time, we saw a need and an opportunity for our chapter to serve. After last year's very successful two day drive, it was obvious we needed to continue this drive. We are very grateful to the American Red Cross for their leadership, support and enthusiasm," said Simmons. "They are an outstanding service organization."

A poster facing those waiting their turn in the chairs, reminded donors that one pint of blood can save three lives. Along with the incentive to save a life, students also receive community service hours. The program is hoping to encourage students to develop the habit of annually donating.

Simmons reported that the Cashmere community and Cashmere High School managed to donate 54 pints that Friday. Over 80% of the CHS National Honor Society members donated or pitched in by helping put the event together.

"We can't thank Katie Martin, Blood Drive Chairperson, Aimie Martin, National Honor Society president, Kyler Keogh, Ryan Cooper, and Gavin McCabe enough for organizing this year's very successful drive," said Simmons.

Cashmere Community Concerts Welcome Eli West and Ben Winship

By CINDY JACKSON

Cashmere Community Concerts is excited to welcome two most respected and eclectic musicians found in the Northwest, Eli West & Ben Winship, on Saturday, March 23rd, at 7pm. This dynamic duo is sure to tickle your music bones with nothing short of the best in great musicianship, tunes and singing. Separately they can entertain a crowd and together they are sure to keep you spellbound.

Eli West. One of the most tasteful and innovative musicians, Seattle-based Eli West has become a highly regarded figure in the Americana music scene over the past few years. Old and new, folk and jazz, vocal and instrumental, odd and accessible, subtle and virtuosic, his skill makes music that sounds completely natural. Eli is a multi-instrumentalist, a songwriter and singer, at the top of his game. Aided by guitar, bouzouki and clawhammer banjo, and an addiction to syncopation, he brings jagged, angular arrangements based in bluegrass and old-time, but refracted through a 21st century lens.

Ben Winship. A self-made musician who has carved out a niche for himself behind the potato curtain, or better known as Idaho's Teton Valley and under the radar of commercial music. His routine is a constantly shifting mix of performing, recording, engineering and teaching. Mandolin is Ben's primary ax, but he is also a well respected songwriter, singer and multi-instrumentalist. Ben's version of string band music is an exploration of crossroads; where raw meets refined, original meets traditional, weird meets familiar, organized meets free ranging. The Boston Globe called his sound "A further leap from traditional hill country music." While Tim O'Brien refers to him as "One of the acoustic music scene's best writers."

This music event is brought to you by the good folks of the Cashmere Community Concerts, a non-profit organization whose mission is to provide live, affordable, high quality entertainment to the Wenatchee Valley. A cover charge of $3.00 per person at the door will help to cover expenses. Refreshments are provided.

The musicians will be paid by a onetime Hat Pass; a suggested donation of $8 to $11 per person will be greatly appreciated. Enjoy great bluegrass music in an alcohol free environment with concert seating.

Located at the Riverside Center; 201 Riverside Drive Cashmere, WA. Doors open at 6:30 pm. For more information call Marie (509) 548-1230 or (509) 421-0494. The Cashmere Community Concerts series can also be found on the web at www.cashmereconcerts.com.
