L&I issues Order of Immediate Restraint against Gebbers Farms

AN NCW MEDIA PUBLICATION

Housing violations cited

By MIKE MALTAIS STAFF WRITER

BREWSTER - An Order and Notice of Immediate Restraint effective July 22 has been issued to Gebbers Farms by the Washington State Department of Labor and Industries applicable to all the company's temporary worker housing locations following an L&I investigation in the wake of the July 8 death of a Gebbers worker from COVID-19.

The order specifically states that the company is directed to "come into compliance with the additional requirements to protect occupants in temporary worker housing from 2019 novel coronavirus (COVID-19) exposure (emergency farm worker rule), WAC 307-16102, for all of your locations."

The order adds that "the employer should strongly consider following the cohort provisions."

"There is no lack of clarity," said L&I Director of Communications Tim Church. "You are ordered to do it

The notice was issued following several inspection visits to Gebbers Farms housing sites where investigators cited non-compliance with the worker separation mandates as specified by L&I and the Health Department.

separate fields."

Gebbers Farms spokeswoman Amy Philpott said that Gebbers was proactive in early implementation of worker safety measures to meet COVID-19 restrictions.

Philpott pointed out that before the L&I emergency order was applied Gebbers had already created "pods" of workers who lived, ate, traveled, and even recreated together. Each pod was comprised of seven cabins with six workers per cabin for a total of 42 workers per pod, Philpott said.

"They allow one person per cabin to go grocery shopping," said Philpott. "Each cabin chooses that interaction and we strongly encourage and remind them

Gebbers Farms CEO Cass Gebbers hosted a July 15 telephone conference with Okanogan County Public Health officials, seven days prior to the L&I action to discuss the COVID-19 situation in the Brewster area, where positive cases of the pandemic have recently spiked.

In a July 18 letter following that conference call, health officer John McCarthy, M.D., credited Gebbers Farms for its proactive response to the COprotocols to address the disease before any other growers in the Okanogan area.

Director Lauri Jones informed him "that Gebbers Farms COVID-19 protocols and the implementation of those protocols have been impeccable.'

It is clear that Gebbers Farms has gone to great lengths and expense to keep its workers safe during the current COVID-19 pandemic," McCarthy said.

Church characterized the Order of Restraint as a rare action by his agency.

'We don't do this very often, maybe five to 10 times a year across a variety of businesses," said Church. "This one is different because it involves a fatality," Church said referring to the Hispanic farmworker who had been a Gebbers' employee for more than a decade.

With the number of positive cases in the county approaching 700 as of July 31, testing is a major priority for health officials. McCarthy cited two public health goals in his letter to Gebbers:

1. "To obtain increased COVID-19 testing of individuals in the Okanogan County area, specifically those who are asymptomatic.

2. Based upon the test results, to have individuals who test positive to be isolated from those that are not knowingly infected."

Philpott said Gebbers Farms has safety officers regularly monitoring workers, testing those showing symptoms and sending positive individuals to a dedicated quarantine area.

"If they refuse to be tested, they are automatically VID outbreak noting that isolated in a separate loca-"That means the group to maintain the pods during the company implemented tion for 14 days," Philpott

While she acknowledged said that Community Health testing positive was just unnature and level of the emergency.'

Gebbers Farms reports second COVID-19 fatality

BREWSTER - A second Gebbers Farms worker has become the latest victim of the novel coronavirus in Okanogan County after expiring Friday evening, July 31, while undergoing quarantine.

Earl Edwards, 63, a longtime guest worker and valued employee had returned to Gebbers Farms annually for the past decade, said Gebbers spokeswoman Amy Philpott.

Edwards reported that he was not feeling well on July 21, so the company took him to see a doctor. In accordance with state and federal health guidelines, Edwards was then placed under quarantine for 10-14 days, Philpott said.

"Mr. Edwards had been feeling well, indicating earlier in the day on July

"Those percentages out of our 4,500 employees and guest workers is significantly lower than the county ratio," Philpott said.

Church said that by law, L&I now has six months to complete its investigation and make its findings public.

Gebbers Farms takes its role as an industry leader seriously, and that is why it is committed to doing everything it can to help minimize the impact of this unprecedented pandemic on our community, Philpott said.

"We are profoundly saddened by this loss," said Gebbers Farms CEO Cass Gebbers. Responding to Crisis: Community Foundation Adapts Programming

By Denise Sorom, Director OF COMMUNITY PHILANTHROPY, COMMUNITY FOUNDATION OF

By April it became quite clear to the leadership at the Community Foundation of North Central Washington (CFNCW) that for the foreseeable future, it would not be business as usual, but rather "business unusual."

As the region's largest manager of charitable assets--offering grant funding and training opportunities for nonprofits, scholarships for students, and forging connections between donors and charitable causeshelping this region survive emergency relief funding for groups impacted by COVID, but more had to be done. Just as CFNCW had stepped up during the wildfires of 2014 and 2015, creating special emergency funds and stewarding the NCW announced a new helping Families in Need generous donations from suite of programming to people far and wide to help rebuild and recover, this as well, but what?

BREWSTER – Starting August 10, North Central Regional Library branches in Okanogan, Grant, and Ferry counties will reopen their book return services and start curbside pickup for library patrons. All three counties are in either Phase 2 of 3 of the state's reopening plan but precautions will still be followed to prevent spread of the novel coronavirus.

All returned materials will be quarantined for 72 hours before being handled or checked in. Masks will be required for all patrons utilizing curbside pickup.

Brewster library branch manager, Rebecca Zion has her own plan for book intake at her facility.

"I am placing a cardboard box outside the book return site," said Zion. "When the box is full, I will close it up, tape and date it and put it in a stack. After 72 hours have passed, I will check the materials in."

"Due to rising COVID-19 infection rates, NCRL is unable at this time to resume any services at its libraries in Chelan and Douglas counties, which are still in Phase 1.5 of the governor's reopening plan," said an NCRL media release. "The mail order library, which is headquartered in Wenatchee, also remains closed."

THE WASHINGTON OUTDOORS REPORT

Lake Wenatchee

By John Kruse, OUTDOOR REPORT

Anticipation is running strong for the Lake Wenatchee sockeye season opening August 3. This season is never a sure thing, always dependent on the number of salmon returning up the Wenatchee River to this wood-lined lake in the Central Cascades and there have not been enough salmon returning for a season to take place for several years.

That changed this year with a strong run of sockeye coming up the Columbia River, about 11 percent better than the ten-year average. Travis Maitland, a biologist with the Washington Dept. of Fish and Wildlife, says an estimated 35,000 sockeye are coming to the lake this summer, far surpassing the 23,000 salmon required to meet spawning escapement goals for this species. Because of this surplus we get a season running until Sept. 7 with a four fish daily limit.

There are a few things Will Lake Wenatchee sockeye Call Dan at fishery. First off, you won't be catching any sockeye out of this lake from shore. this is a boat show and unless you own property on the lake (or know someone who does) you've only got two options about where to launch.

The main launch site is at Lake Wenatchee State Park (Discover Pass required) and boats start lining up to launch when the fishing is hot as early as 3 a.m. There is a good launch here but it is crowded and this year, with Covid-19 restrictions at Lake Wenatchee State Park, that may pose a

Because of overcrowding, staff have been closing all entrance into the day use area of the park (by vehicle or foot) once the day use parking lot is full. Speaking with Park Ranger Trevor Wylie about whether this was going to be an issue for anglers and visitors he said he didn't think it would be because most of the anglers are launching at 4 a.m. and are off the water and leaving the park by 10 a.m., which is when the bulk of day use visitors begin to arrive. The one user group that could have a problem accessing the park would be anglers hoping to fish in the late afternoon or early

Another option if you have a car topper boat is to launch at Glacier View Campground (Forest Service Recreation Pass required). There is limited space to park at the day use area here but it is close to the northwest end of the lake where the fish, and most of the anglers, congregate.

As for catching sockeye here the first two weeks of the season are definitely the best and early morning is the time to be fishing for them. Bob Loomis with Mack's Lure out of Wenatchee knows this fishery well and recom-

1. Looking for the sockeye around 40 feet deep to start and going deeper as the morning progresses.

2. Troll slow. If you are trolling at 2 ½ miles an hour you are going way too fast. Cut that speed in half and you'll be in the zone.

3. Use a dodger. An 8" dodger will provide not only plenty of flash, but also give action to the lure. Loomis recommends a silver or pink dodger.

4.The traditional offering behind your dodger is a bare red hook (selective regulations are in effect with only a single barbless hook allowed and no bait). However, Loomis recommends fishing a Mack's Lure Double Whammy Sockeye Pro which adds beads and a red mylar Smile Blade spinner to that red hook or a Mack's Cha Cha Sockeye lure with a squid body for better success. The go to colors? Red and hot pink.

5.One other trick specific to this fishery is to use a short leader. Loomis recommends a leader length of only 7 to 18 inches between the dodger and the hook to combine the most attraction and lure action.

Put it all together and you've got a great primer on how to catch sockeye salmon this August in one of the more scenic areas of the state to do so!

State launches new grant program to conserve community forests

OLYMPIA-Communities wanting to conserve forest lands now have a state grant program to help, the Recreation and Conservation Office announced today. Beginning Sept. 1, communities can apply for grants of up to $3 million in the newly created Community Forests Program.

The grants must be used to buy at least five acres of forestland and the land must be maintained as forestland forever. The land must be actively managed to include timber harvest and other income generating activities. Grants also may be used to restore the land or provide recreation opportunities, such as trails, when combined with land purchases. "Forests in Washington serve many purposes. We use them for timber for our homes and as places to hike, mountain bike and do a whole slew of other outdoor recreation activities," said Kaleen Cottingham, director of the Recreation and Conservation Office, which is administering the grant program. "In addition, forests provide important wildlife habitat and other benefits such as clean air and clean water. Conserving forestlands ensures they remain part of our heritage for generations and that Washington stays the Evergreen State."

From 1978-2001, 700,000 acres of forestland in Washington were converted to suburban development, rights-of-ways, and agriculture.

"The loss of these forestlands diminishes a reliable source of forest products and jobs. It also threatens to impair important habitat for fish and other wildlife," Cottingham said.

More than 1,700 forest products-related businesses call Washington home, supporting 101,000 workers and gross business income of about $28 billion a year.

"The new Community Forests Program provides another tool in the toolbox for communities like mine, where timber is an important part of our economy, culture and history, but commercial forestry is challenging due to population growth and consolidation in the industry," said Kate Dean, Jefferson County commissioner. "Community forest grants will allow for all the benefits of forestry-standing trees, environmental benefits like improved water quality, open space for recreation and revenue-while giving local decision-making on stewardship and harvest.

Jefferson County looks forward to the opportunity to create a community forest for all of the myriad benefits they bring to our timber county."

"What's unique about this program is that it's not another parkland acquisition or pure conservation program," said Jason Callahan, director of Government Relations for the Washington Forest Protection Association. "It's a program to help maintain the state's base of managed working forestlands. Actively managing forests also will help forest health, the rural economy, log supplies for mills and other aspects of the community. These values are only obtained when working forests are kept working.'

"I am really excited about Washington's new community forest grant opportunities," said Ray Entz, director of Wildlife and Terrestrial Resources for the Kalispel Tribe of Indians. "These opportunities create special places to engage and enrich the communities that they serve. From the fiscal, educational, recreational and environmental perspectives, these community forests are nothing but untapped potential."

The Recreation and Conservation Office will accept applications from Sept. 1-Oct. 1. More information about the Community Forests Program is available online. "Community forests provide the opportunity for citizens to have a direct stake in how Washington's vital and iconic working forestlands are used and managed," said Nick Norton, director of the Washington Association of Land Trusts. "I have seen community forest projects in Washington already allowing local communities to create jobs and revenue through creative, cross-boundary forest management, serving as educational centers to cultivate the next generation of natural resource professionals and civic leaders, and providing outdoor hubs that connect tens of thousands of recreationalists to the benefits of working forests. This work will have a tremendous benefit to rural communities across the state now and for future generations."
