Cashmere man receives Purple Heart 50 years late

1968 marked a major turning point in the Vietnam War. That was the year of the Tet Offensive, a multi-pronged attack by North Vietnamese and Viet Cong on South Vietnamese cities and American bases.

Enter a young man named Ron Hoffman, machine-gunner, U.S. Army.

“I got my head blown off,” Hoffman said at a ceremony in his honor at the Wenatchee Convention Center. “Part of me is still back there in Vietnam,” states the 75-year-old resident of Cashmere. Hoffman’s discharge papers (DD214) show he was awarded the decoration on paper, but never actually received the real medal in any official ceremony. That is until Chelan County Veterans Service Officer Tony Sandoval notified Washington State Department of Veterans Affairs Director Lourdes “Alfie” Alvarado-Ramos and arrangements were made to fix a 50-year hole in Hoffman’s life.

What did he say in front of more than 200 other veterans once “Alfie” pinned on the medal?

The August 1 tribute to Hoffman came complete with Wenatchee American Legion Post 10 Presentation of the Colors. The Post’s Color Guard was there as part of the Third Annual “Serving Those Who Served” veteran resource provider conference.

The only thing the humble Hoffman said to the crowd besides the obvious tardiness of the award was that his truck “needed an alternator.”

Ask and ye shall receive, the old adage goes. As of this report, an alternator “donor” has been located and an auto repair company as well to do the labor for free.

Be sure to read the next edition of the Cashmere Valley Record for that story and photo.

Washington State Department of Veterans Affairs Director Lourdes “Alfie” Alvarado-Ramos pins the Purple Heart (given to those wounded in combat or posthumously to those killed in action) on Vietnam veteran Ron Hoffman.

Vehicular Heatstroke: A Cry for Help

By HEIDI KING

For many, warmer weather means trips to the beach and summer vacations. But with the sun comes heat, and the heat can be a killer - especially when it involves a child who has been left unattended or gotten trapped inside a vehicle.

When I became a mom some 29 years ago, I understood what it meant to have your heart walk around outside your body. My heart grieves for those who have lost a child, particularly when a few extra steps could have prevented a young life from getting cut short.

As the Deputy Administrator of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA), I, along with numerous other organizations, am committed to leading the public education campaign to end vehicular heatstroke.

Already this year, 29 children have died from heatstroke, and we are not even halfway through the summer. Last year, 42 children died, which is the highest number of deaths since 2013, when 44 children died. And over the past 20 years, 772 children have died – all from being left or getting trapped inside a vehicle.

What breaks my heart even

Free trade just another absurd political theory

Free trade promised that we could buy goods for less. Programs like Nafta promised to bring us cheaper products from our neighbors while opening the world to quality goods from America. It was the classic win-win. The problem is it doesn't work.

Sure we've been able to buy cheaper cars, cell phones and TV's but the problem is the best paying jobs moved from America to Bangladesh, China, Mexico and a hundred third world countries where wages were more like slave labor. All while American politicians argued for higher and higher minimum wages to help restore the middle class.

The problem is that even with lower prices if wages don't keep place with inflation then purchasing power declines.

Trump has it right. A little trade war may be exactly what is needed to balance the scales again.

In the third world wealth moves to the powerful not to the masses. So who do we think is getting enriched by "free" trade with America?

China is a classic case. They steal our intellectual property. Then recreate our products with cheap labor. Americans then get to buy our American designed products for less while American workers struggle to find work that pays a "living" wage.

Let's examine the basic premise. The assumption is the "free market" should be unfettered in order to insure the lowest priced goods to the market. But when the markets are not competitively equal, there is no balance in the market place. The result is that the products are not competitively priced. One "provider" gets a competitive advantage over the other.

The question is who ultimately benefits from this competitive imbalance? It's not the workers of the world!

As always it is the politicians and bureaucrats who produce nothing and do not create jobs.

Well, we have had nearly 30

BILL FORHAN

years of the global economy. The "free" market that will make all of our lives better with cheaper products.

The problem is if you don't have the money to buy the products because wages aren't keeping pace with inflation then the entire dream starts to unravel.

That is when the theory and the practice start to collide.

In a world where capitalism is a foreign concept; in a world where workers rights, child labor laws and minimum wages are not on the official government agenda, there is no level playing field.

Unless the masses in the third world have purchasing power that begins to approach American standards they do not have the resources to buy superior, and more expensive, American products. The myth of fair trade unravels.

The result is growing trade imbalances. Wealth transfers from America to other countries and societies whose values we do not always respect.

More importantly, who in those other countries actually benefits from trade with America?

There are so many ways we can help countries around the world improve their standard of living and the quality of the global environment. But pretending that "free trade" programs are working is delusional.

Like too many political solutions they fail the test of practicability. The problem is we are too reluctant to throw them overboard when they prove unworkable.

I for one am willing to consider ways that we can make free trade fair. But when the world is a jumble of competing political systems with unequal beneficiaries I am doubtful that it can ever be totally fair.

In that world it is the primary responsibility of our leaders to make sure they are looking out for American citizens first.

I for one am willing to pay a little more for American made products where higher wages to American workers can flow through the American economy.

The death of man's brain and spirit

The next generation of tyrants will be the corporations that run the computers and all the gizmos and control all the money while also giving the masses a new religion of self satisfaction and complete addiction ala interactive games of life posing as life itself.

Their hands are on the controls and they no longer fear God. That necessary dread died in the 1960's and our ideas have become muddled into disbelief ever since.

The Corporate MindBenders will control about 75% of all of us. Think how this is coming about... capitalism, overt racism and targeted demographics.

That's right, effeminate men have become the darlings of aggressive women. It has always been thus. There is one major exception: Donald Trump. Teresa May can kick your butt and so can Angela, but you just don't have any shame and so you speak your mind like most men wish they had the nerve to when they talk to their wives.

It throws the world into a tizzy, but since when has passive-aggressive behavior naivete become treasonous?

"The Donald" ate the Office of the President and then puked it back into the face of the status quo?

I might like this performance art masquerading as a Broadway Play.

This out of the box President who woke up in a different age and decided to make the best of it by faking it until making it. Then he made it.

This manic depressive, obsessive-compulsive beast let loose from the streets of Queens, Brooklyn and Manhattan, he, is now ours, but what are we going to do with him?

Reward his brilliance and put him back on television ... after he serves some time in the slammer?

Well, that's what some people think. I would rather let him explode naturally after another seven years in the Oval Office and 20 more years on earth as a retired entrepreneur. Our "Donald" will live to see his son Baron become a U.S. Senator.

Baron will eventually become the second of the Trumps to become president.

Only Baron will be a Gay Vegetarian who adores Melania and makes her the Ambassador to Slovenia.

The he dies in a fiery car crash while racing in the Grand Prix of Monaco.

It is ok when this happens, because Melania is then elected President as the Third Trump to hold the office.

She, in fact, becomes the first woman president.

By this time the Koreans are unified, Putin has been murdered by his own people and Cuba becomes the 52nd state after Puerto Rico finally becomes the 51st. Guam, Jamaica, the Bahamas and even Bermuda all become American states as our great nation takes full control of the Caribbean.

Bitcoin is fabulously corrupted by even more advanced cyber-mining techniques and the world returns to its true love of gold, silver, platinum and diamonds, pearls and other gems.

Bartering becomes incredibly popular and the Postal Service finally gets privatized by greedy anti-government forces who declare FedEx and UPS as the two winners of the postal service wars. Now a letter to Grandma in Alaska costs $7.95 and a box of cookies to the kid in the army in Germany is a $50 fee.

All babies born after 2040 will have their "social security" credentials implanted into their brains right after birth while the skull is still soft.

Modern music will consist of sharp bleats and flat drones aimed at the inner ear and undetectable otherwise.

Cars will also be obsolete because no one will ever travel anywhere anymore except by brain patterns set up and instigated by your local AAA. They can send you anywhere without you actually ever having to leave your couch.

Thank God I will be taking a dirt nap soon after all of this happens.

I will pass while living high in the hills, while in my sleep after a hard day's work on the homestead.

A smile on my face. No more games of the occult. When I'm gone the world will once again be sane, but only to the insane observers. Amen.

Community Foundation of NCW awards $50k to Wenatchee Valley Humane Society

The Community Foundation of NCW has chosen the Wenatchee Valley Humane Society to receive its $50,000 Endowment Grant.

The Endowment Grant is a competitive grant open every other year to 501c3 nonprofit organizations in Chelan, Douglas, and Okanogan counties. The grant provides the recipient with an annual stream of income through a permanent fund at the foundation, roughly 5% of the fund's balance. As the fund grows through investment and added donations, the annual income increases for long term support of the organization.

The Endowment Grant is awarded to a well-established, extraordinary organization that is making a significant impact in the community it serves, has experienced leadership at both the board and staff level, and is poised to take the organization to the next level.

"While the grant committee had a difficult time making its decision, it was clear that the Humane Society had positioned itself for this opportunity" said Claire Oatey, director of community grants. "As a finalist for the previous endowment grant, they demonstrated improvements, implemented new policies that set them up for success, and exhibited a strong board and staff. We feel confident they are ready to take advantage of the opportunities this endowment will provide."

Out of eighteen applicants, four finalists were chosen to give presentations to the Endowment Grant Committee, comprised of several board members. The other three finalists were: Methow Recycles, Women's Resource Center, and Upper Valley MEND.

"Each of these organizations were deserving of the award" said Ken Marson, past board chair. "Their presentations were very well prepared, and they are all providing vital services to their communities. We commend their efforts and are proud of the work they are achieving. We hope they consider applying again."

The next opportunity for the Endowment Grant opens February 1, 2020. For more information, visit cfncw.org/endowmentgrant.

Dwarf Mistletoe Field Trip

Join Jim Hadfield, retired forest pathologist, on Thursday, August 9, 2018, 9:00 a.m.- 12:00 in exploring the complex role our native parasitic plants, dwarf mistletoes, have on our forests and whether they are friend or foe. The morning outing will take place around the Bridge Creek Campground along the Icicle Creek road. Two of the Washington native dwarf mistletoe species, Douglas-fir dwarf mistletoe and ponderosa pine dwarf mistletoe, occur at this site. Jim will describe how to recognize the dwarf mistletoe and discuss infection, intensification, and spread of this native parasite. Dwarf Mistletoe infections have implications for wildfire behavior, forest management techniques and offers benefits to some species of wildlife. Wear light hiking footwear and long pants and dress for the weather, for this moderate activity. Bring plenty of water and lunch or snacks. To join this trip, please RSVP to Connie Mehmel at cjmehmel@gmail.com or (509) 322-0181. Meet at 9:00 a.m. at the Leavenworth Park and Ride just west of the Forest Service office. Extreme fire restrictions are now in place across Chelan County

The travel and activity restrictions, put in place by the Chelan County fire marshal, are the highest level of restrictions allowed by county code. Last Thursday, Chelan County Public Works crews installed some 70 signs around the county indicating the extreme conditions.

Under the extreme level, temporary barricades also are placed at 17 county roads for added emphasis and public awareness. The barricades do not mean the road is closed.

The restrictions are meant to help reduce the occurrence of fires that may be caused by recreational, residential, commercial and other activities. Area activity and road travel restrictions include:

- No operation of any motor vehicles off the road
- No fireworks
- No outdoor fires or outdoor open flame devices
- Use of charcoal briquettes is prohibited unless used in a commercially made, residential barbeque

Watch the Public Works website at http://www.co.chelan.wa.us/public-works/pages/traffic-alerts-and-

Alerts for any updates or road closures due to wildfires.

The website also has the Chelan County code (Chapter 7.52) and the declaration signed last Wednesday by the fire marshal.

Special Notice: Temporary Target Shooting Banned on DNR lands

In order to help prevent wildfires, the Department of Natural Resources (DNR) is temporary banning all target shooting on 3 million acres of DNR-managed lands. This includes state forests, community forests, and forested state lands. Commissioner Franz is encouraging private landowners to consider target shooting restrictions on their own lands.

“Current conditions require us to take reasonable steps to reduce wildfire risk,” said Commissioner of Public Lands Hilary Franz. “Within days we expect to surpass the average number of wildfires that my crews normally respond to within an entire wildfire season. Resources are stretched and we must all do our part to protect our communities and our firefighters.”

Shooting at targets poses greater risk in dry conditions as bullets pass through decayed wood, cause sparks off rocks, or break into fragments in dry grass. This temporary rule does not restrict hunting, as firearms are discharged less frequently.

Washington is extremely hot and dry, with ninety-six percent of the state in drought-like conditions. Vegetation is very dry and getting drier.

On average, DNR responds to 22 wildfires on DNR-managed lands each year caused by

Conservation Groups Move One Step Closer to Saving Nason Ridge

SUBMITTED BY WESTERN RIVERS CONSERVANCY

Fundraising campaign now underway to ensure permanent protection of Nason Ridge Trail and the fish and wildlife of Lake Wenatchee, the Wenatchee River and Nason Creek.

In a crucial next-step in the effort to conserve a forested mountainside above Lake Wenatchee and Nason Creek, Western Rivers Conservancy successfully purchased the popular Nason Ridge property from the Weyerhaeuser Company.

The highly visible property was slated for timber harvest and includes much of the 22-mile Nason Ridge Trail, as well as cross-country ski trails and over two miles of Nason Creek, a critical salmon spawning stream and a key source of cold water for the Wenatchee River.

“Conserving Nason Ridge will be a tremendous win for the Wenatchee River’s fish, for wildlife and for everyone who lives, visits and recreates in these mountains,” said Western Rivers Conservancy’s president, Sue Doroff. “It’s a special spot, and we’re glad we could step in and negotiate a deal with Weyerhaeuser that will allow for permanent protection of this important property.”

The desire to conserve Nason Ridge, which spans 3,714 acres, is deeply rooted in the local community. Wenatchee-based Chelan-Douglas Land Trust has been trying to protect the property for years and is now working in partnership with WRC to raise $1 million to fund the permanent protection of the property. This crucial phase of the project is now underway.

“We aren’t finished yet,” said Curt Soper, executive director of Chelan-Douglas Land Trust. “We have to raise

$1 million in private gifts to fund permanent conservation of Nason Ridge. So we need everyone’s support.” WRC will own the land until it identifies a long-term steward that shares WRC’s conservation vision for the parcel. During its ownership, WRC will allow public access just as Weyerhaeuser has done for years.

“Weyerhaeuser has been a member of the Wenatchee community for decades and we’re pleased we could work out a solution with Western Rivers Conservancy that will meet the needs of all involved,” said Scott Dahlquist, Weyerhaeuser’s senior director of real estate.

About The Project Partners

Western Rivers Conservancy acquires prime river lands along the West’s best rivers and streams to conserve habitat, protect key sources of cold water and provide public access for all to enjoy. It is the West’s only organization dedicated exclusively to saving rivers through land acquisition—an approach that is effective, tangible and permanent.

Its motto is “Sometimes to save a river, you have to buy it.”

In Washington, WRC has conserved dozens of miles of river land along the Hoh, Skagit, Columbia, Big Sheep Creek and Iceicle Creek. It created Robe Canyon Historic Park on the South Fork Stillaguamish and recently protected a critical hillside above Nason Creek, upstream of the Nason Ridge property.

WRC has protected hundreds of miles of frontage on other great rivers around the West, including the John Day, North Umpqua, Klamath, Gunnison, Salmon, Yampa, Snake and Madison. To learn more, please visit westernrivers.org. Chelan-Douglas Land Trust works with local organizations, businesses, and individuals to protect what we all hold dear: beautiful natural areas, a strong economy, clean air and water, abundant wildlife, and the freedom to enjoy it all.

The Chelan-Douglas Land Trust started in 1985 as a volunteer organization made up of Wenatchee Valley residents with a vision of a healthy and prosperous future for Chelan and Douglas Counties. Since then it has grown to over 2,500 members committed to preserving the region’s natural areas. Learn more at cdlandtrust.org.

more is that these deaths are completely preventable. In many of these cases, taking simple steps could have prevented tragedy. Whether you are a parent, guardian, or bystander, everyone plays a critical role in keeping children safe.

Here are just a few examples of ways we can bring an end to vehicular heatstroke:

Look Before You Lock. Every time you step out of your vehicle, check the back seat. You can also move an item, like a cell phone or a purse, to the back seat as a reminder.

Keep a stuffed animal in the child’s car seat, and move it to the front passenger seat as a visual reminder when your child is in his or her seat. If someone else is driving your child that day, check to make sure your child arrived at his or her destination safely. In short, do what it takes to keep your child safe from harm.

Keep the Keys Out of Reach, and Always Lock Your Vehicle. A car can look like a playground to young children. Approximately 80 percent of children who die in hot cars are 3 and under. Twenty-eight percent of the children who died in hot cars were not left, but became trapped in unattended vehicles.

Never Leave Your Child in a Car Alone – Not Even for a Minute. It doesn’t matter if the sky is cloudy, or if the window of your vehicle is cracked, or if it’s a cool 60 degrees Fahrenheit outside – none of these things can protect your child.

The temperature inside a vehicle can soar to deadly levels in minutes, and a child’s ability to regulate their body temperature isn’t as effective as an adult’s. It rises three to five times faster.

Take Action. Don’t mind your own business. Don’t turn the other way. Don’t keep your mouth shut. And don’t assume someone will be “right back.” Take action if you see a child alone in a vehicle – a young life could depend on it. If the child is responsive, call 911 and stay with the child until help arrives. If the child is in distress or not responsive, call 911 and get the child out of the car immediately! Once the child is out of the car, spray them with cool water. Do not submerge them in an ice bath.

As temperatures around the country continue to rise, and summer schedules change routines, we recognize, tragically, that the heatstroke death toll is only going to climb. It’s up to everyone – parents, guardians, and even bystanders – to end these senseless and preventable tragedies.

Join NHTSA in spreading the message. Let’s stop this troubling trend, stop the heartbreak, and stop children from dying in hot cars. Always Check for Baby.

Heidi King, Deputy Administrator of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, is passionate about public safety and keeping people safe on America’s roadways. To learn more about child safety and heatstroke, visit NHTSA.gov/heatstroke.

How to Avoid Getting Harmed by your Medicine

One of the most common preventable causes of death in the United States is having a bad reaction to taking a medication.

You can be harmed by getting the wrong medicine, having a bad reaction to a new medicine, or suffer the effects of combining certain medicines together.

Not all of these bad outcomes can be prevented, but many can.

In nearly 40 years of being a pharmacist, I have found the 2 most effective strategies for preventing problems from medications gone wrong is making sure your doctors have the latest information about you, and not being afraid to ask questions.

Strategy Number 1: Make sure your doctor has the latest information about you.

I feel that the most frustrating feature of the American medical care system is how fragmented it is. It's very hard to get and keep a patient's medical information collected together when they see different medical providers.

When you see a specialist, the details of what they find and how they're treating you is rarely communicated directly to your other doctors, which means the next doctor that sees you is working blind, unless you take the responsibility for providing that information to them directly.

And the best doctor in the world can really harm you if they don't know what's already been done for you and the treatments that have already been given to you.

Unfortunately, the more sick you get, the more doctors take care of you, while at the same time you are less able to keep track of it all to make sure your doctors are talking to each other.

Strategy Number 2: ASK. Don't be afraid to ask questions.

Prescribing, dispensing and administering medicines involve humans, and humans can and will make mistakes.

No matter how hard we try, mistakes will be made, and the best way to keep yourself or your loved ones safe is to catch a medication error before it gets to you or to them.

Let's be honest here. Because we are human it's not possible to completely eliminate medication errors.

The best we can do is to recognize an error and correct things that aren't right before they harm you or your loved one.

The last link in the chain of a medication error is YOU, and the best way to discover a potential medication error is to always ask questions.

Poor hearing, limited understanding and feeling intimidated are common barriers to asking questions.

Elders who don't hear very well (or forget their hearing aids) may feel embarrassed to ask their doctor to repeat themselves. Further complicating this is the influx of physicians and pharmacists with accents that can be hard to understand.

Many older Americans feel intimidated by their doctor or pharmacist and assume that "they know what they're doing", following directions whether they make sense to them or not.

Having someone whom you feel comfortable asking questions is a very important factor in choosing a doctor or pharmacist to care for you or your loved one.

Using a local pharmacy gives you the opportunity to develop a relationship with a pharmacist or pharmacists.

If you see something that doesn't make sense to you, you are more likely to ask the pharmacist you know and trust than call the mail-order pharmacy for help.

6 Tips for Preventing Harm When Taking Medicines:

1 Keep a complete list of ALL of your medications, and take it to every appointment with your dentist, chiropractor, and to each pharmacy that you use. This helps avoid dangerous duplication or risky combinations of medicines.

2 Whenever you get a new prescription, make sure you know if it is ADDED to the ones you currently take, or REPLACES one you have been taking.

3 Look for non-order options in your benefit plan and choose local pharmacy service whenever you can. Local pharmacies provide face-to-face explanations and communicate more effectively with your physician's offices when there is a concern.

4 Use only one pharmacy if at all possible. With all of your prescriptions at the same pharmacy, problems are more likely to be detected BEFORE they can harm you.

5 Establish relationships with your family doctor and pharmacist so that you feel comfortable asking questions. If they won't answer your questions, find another provider who will.

6 If you see something you don't understand about your medicine, like a different color or shape or directions, please SPEAK UP. Ask your pharmacist about it. Don't overlook the opportunity to discover a mistake before it gets to you.

Rhein Haus Restaurant Goes Über German: Biergarten to Open in Leavenworth this Summer

Popular Seattle beer hall heads over the mountains with Bavarian-inspired food and drinks

RHEIN HAUS NEWS RELEASE

SEATTLE – Rhein Haus, a German-inspired restaurant with two Puget Sound locations, today announced it will open a massive outdoor patio and double-decker dining hall in Leavenworth this August, serving up beers, schnitzels and sizzling brats to residents and visitors of Central Washington's famous Bavarian village.

Located smack in the middle of Front Street (707 Highway 2) – next to the Maypole and mini sledding hill – the newly constructed, family-friendly restaurant and Biergarten can hold up to 300 guests, making it one of the largest in town. To stay up to date on opening plans or to enquire about group reservations, visit rheinhausleavenworth.com.

“From visiting each summer growing up to working as a river guide and fundraising for avalanche victims, each of the Rhein Haus owners has a strong connection to the Leavenworth community, making it an obvious choice for our next location,” said James Weimann, co-owner of Weimann MacLise Family of Restaurants.

“In addition to modern, playful and crowd-pleasing German fare, the deck is the crowning jewel. It will have heated floors, oversized tables with built-in fire pits, and unobstructed mountain views – the perfect place to enjoy a giant pretzel, frosty Kölsch, and the company of friends.”

In all, the 3,000 square-foot Biergarten deck will hold up to 170 people, including an 18-person bartop. A row of Bavarian and German flags along Front Street and overhead festoon string lights complete the outdoor ambiance, and flow seamlessly to the interior.

The 3,700 square-foot two-story indoor space will seat 128 guests and will boast a lodge-like feel. Décor includes pine façades, ceiling and railings, plus a mixture of wood and stained concrete floors.

A full taxidermy elk, four mounted elk busts and lighting sconces made from vintage wooden skis add interest. The dining area will have an indoor bar on each level, plus table-side service at all tables indoors and out.

Channeling the bars of Bavaria, Rhein Haus will offer a carefully curated German beer list with 12 beers on draft including a Rhein Haus lager from Bayern Brewing, Pfungstädter Schwarzbier and Spaten Oktoberfest.

Additional offerings include local favorites like Icicle Brewing Company Bootjack

IPA and Bad Granny Hard Cider, along with a full bar.

Backing up the beverage options, Rhein Haus will serve a variety of options, ranging from appetizers and salads to sandwiches and gourmet brats, giant pretzels and classic schnitzels along with a kids menu.

Signature dishes include: the Munich, a house-made kielbasa with Beecher's cheddar beer fondue and crispy sweet onions; the Pork Schnitzel, a pork cutlet with a pretzel breading and served with lemon, caper, parsley and shallot sauce and a Granny Smith apple slaw; and the plant-based IMPOSSIBLE burger with arugula, royale dressings, onion, tomato, dill pickle, Tillamook cheddar cheese all on a brioche bun and served with fries.

Like all Rhein Haus locations, the new restaurant welcomes all ages, and can accommodate large groups by reservation, making it a good choice for bachelor and bachelorette parties, work outings, weddings, reunions and more. The first Rhein Haus opened in February of 2013 in Seattle's Capitol Hill neighborhood, quickly followed by locations in Tacoma and Denver. Each Rhein Haus enjoys its own take on the German theme, with unique food, beverage and entertainment in each.

Rhein Haus is part of the Weimann MacLise Family of Restaurants, which also counts among its collection Ballard's Bastille, Stoneburner and Macleod's hot spots, Capitol Hill's Poquitos, and White Center's Beer Star. For more information visit rheinhausleavenworth.com or follow on Facebook or Instagram.
