

One step closer to reconstructing the West Cashmere Bridge

In a 2012 study the 86-year-old West Cashmere Bridge, which connects Goodwin Rd. with Highway Two, was given a sufficiency rating of 25.18—according to Chelan County this means the bridge is “functionally obsolete and structurally deficient.” The study also identified 2022 as the year the bridge must be replaced in order to be safe for vehicles to cross. Since the study was conducted, state, county and city officials have been working hard to obtain the necessary funds to complete the $25 million-dollar reconstruction. They are now only $2 million away from their goal of beginning construction on the new bridge in 2020.

Last Wednesday, June 6, District 12 State Senator Brad Hawkins announced Chelan County was awarded another $3 million towards the project from a Washington State Freight Mobility Strategic Investment Board (FMSIB) grant. Hawkins has been working with local agencies on the matter since 2017 when he helped secure a $2 million-dollar appropriation from the 2017-2019 state transportation budget. Representatives throughout the community including Chelan County, City of Cashmere, Cashmere School District, Port of Chelan County, Chelan-Douglas Transportation Council and Crunch Pak, met with the senator in Olympia to advocate for the additional funding.

“At this point it’s really exciting because what appeared to be out of reach just a year or two ago is now basically happening,” Hawkins said,

The current bridge is weight restricted and only allows access to non-commercial vehicles. Because it is the only train track bypass in the city, this causes a disadvantage to large vehicles such as buses, freight trucks and emergency transport that need to get around passing trains. Jeff Wilkens, Executive Director of the Chelan-Douglas Transportation Council, said the bridge is far more important than it may seem to be.

“Its purpose is more than just a local street. It supports agriculture in the upper valley, regional economic development, public safety and a large company like Crunch Pak,” Wilkens said.

Engineering work and archeological assessments are already underway in preparation for the upcoming construction. The new bridge design will stretch over not only the Burlington Northern Santa Fe rail line, but Highway Two as well. The remaining funds necessary for completion are expected to come from either the county or another state grant application like the FMSIB grant. Cashmere Mayor pro tem Jim Fletcher said although it is a county project, the bridge holds a great importance to our city.

“We are extremely excited and pleased to hear the good news,” Fletcher said.

Mayor Gomes resigns, City Council to appoint interim mayor

By KYRA PLANETZ

After 35 years of service throughout Cashmere, Mayor Jeff Gomes officially resigned last week on Monday, June 4. Gomes started working for the city as a firefighter at Cashmere Fire Department in 1981. He then became a councilman for the Cashmere City Council in 2010 and has been serving our community as mayor since 2012. Although his resignation came as a surprise to some members of the council, Gomes said it is a decision he has been thinking about making for some time.

“I’m getting older, I’ve put a lot of years in and I think it’s time to point my attention to my family and my grandchildren,” Gomes said.

During his six years as mayor, Gomes said he has accomplished most of the projects he set out to complete such as updating city vehicles and equipment as well as getting buildings around town up to code. All of the projects the council has undertaken this year are either underway or already completed. Gomes said he is confident the administration will be able to tackle the 2019 budget and find a replacement for the recently resigned City Planner, Mark Botello, without him.

The council will have 90 days to appoint an interim mayor who will serve until an official mayor is elected in November, 2019. In the meantime, Councilman Jim Fletcher will act as mayor pro tem. He also hopes to be considered for the interim position and plans

Judge from Cashmere runs for re-election, helps create drug court

By KYRA PLANETZ

Following Chelan County Superior Court Judge Alicia Nakata’s retirement in 2017, Judge Kristin Ferrera of Cashmere was sworn into office in January of 2018. Since then, Ferrera has gained much experience in criminal law cases to add to her extensive resume. Running against Charles Steinberg, Ferrera will vie for Chelan County Superior Court Judge position three in the upcoming primary election this November.

Before becoming a judge, Ferrera worked in law for nearly a decade; most recently she practiced civil litigation at Jeffers, Danielson, Sonn & Aylward Law Firm in Wenatchee. She has experience with employment, family, construction and agricultural law as well as civil rights defense.

Ferrera is the only candidate in our county running for a Superior Court Judgeship with judicial experience and she hopes this will benefit her re-election.

“I’m a neutral person who walks into a situation and tries to look at it from all sides and hear everyone before making a decision,” Ferrera said, “people want to know that they’ve been heard and I really do think that they feel that when they walk out of my courtroom.”

Ferrera has been busy this year not only presiding over cases but was also instrumental in creating a drug court in Chelan county. At their meeting last month, on May 14, Ferrera told Cashmere City Council the majority of criminal

Those who really care: ‘Tough Love’ manifested

What is the benefit of being a “Compassionate Conservative”?

It shows that you understand those less fortunate who do certain things to get by in life, but some of those “things,” may be hard to swallow.

I am a dual Canadian-American citizen, but served in the American military and have spent 59 years in America and only three in Canada, yet I will always honor the intimate friendship Canadians and Americans have cherished for at least 100-plus years.

On the other hand, perhaps times for adjustment are ahead.

The cross-border trade is the greatest such relationship in the world. Both peoples benefit. However, the tough love I’m talking about leans towards Conservative fiscal policies and not Socialism as practiced in Canada, Great Britain and indeed most of our allies.

To me, that idea of Socialism or Communism is not an easy concept to simply dismiss without understanding the sheer power of giving people food, health care, shelter and other things.

These people quickly become dependent on the largesse of their, unbeknownst to them, tyrannical government.

They are hooked on this false “love” just as assuredly as our modern-day opioid addicts are hooked on the “love” of their lives—that drug that gets them by in life.

It is the duty of every conservative to illuminate those who ignorantly take government funds, grants and loans without understanding the repercussions of strict regulation when those monies are applied. The regulations are built into the loan, grant or even original budget. School Districts around the nation are a typical example of this syndrome. The grants, payments per child per school day attendance policies and the overall U.S. Department of Education attitude towards curriculum is anti-local government. When any of our school districts takes money from special interests, including tyrannical governments, they will have to pay back that entity with strict adherence to whatever regulations are imposed on them.

That is also the case with Canada, Great Britain and many other of our allies. We are allies culturally, economically, militarily and even religiously and that means an awful lot, but it doesn’t mean we are agreed on the day-to-day fiscal policies viv-a-vis helping our people.

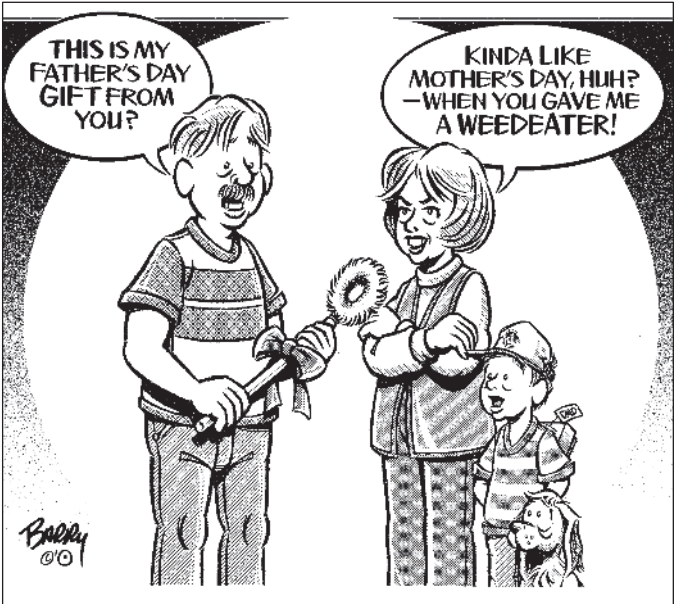

America is not the land of socialism, even though it is brimming with agencies that practice same. We are the “Land of Opportunity” and that cannot be achieved nor maintained through acts of socialistic largesse.

Please get your children off the couch now so they don’t get hooked on the concept of free room and board, free education, free health care, free champagne and caviar. America is, in fact, the land of the free, but as the cliché goes, “Freedom isn’t free.”

The youngsters who join the military are treated to many benefits, but make no mistake about it, they could die for their country at any time.

I cannot say the same for those on welfare or other programs where nothing is ever asked of them in return.

I am in favor of charter schools, private schools and religious schools because they aren’t all taking government money to exist. The parents of these children are paying the freight themselves and therefore not beholden to any government or private entity outside of its control.

We need to teach our kids and grandkids the value of hard work and learning skills for real life beyond the classroom before they land in college and all decide to study computer science.

Once that happens, they will be just as bad as anybody who has done nothing in life, but still expects to be taken care of by the greater society.

Enough with the constant infatuation with boxed intelligence, teach the young to explore and play and experiment with what they need to get to first base in the real world.

After that, it’s up to them.

It has always been thus.

Vale custodian brings original song back to the classroom

By KYRA PLANETZ

As we age, many of us fall out of touch with our childhood sense of imagination – the ability to dream up all sorts of creative things with our brain. However, Vale Elementary custodian Richard Anderson not only continues to express his inventive mind as an adult, but encourages young students at his school to do the same.

Anderson has worked at Vale for nearly two decades and although his job is to ensure the campus is spick and span, he also enjoys playing guitar and writing music in his free time. In 2001, a music teacher noticed Anderson’s artistic ability and asked him to write a song for her second-grade class. The result was titled “My Imagination,” a “silly little song” about animals doing wacky activities – like a camel fishing in his underwear.

“It’s about thinking up crazy things in your mind, I wanted to write something kids could relate to,” Anderson said, “I’m just a big kid at heart.”

The second-graders soon fell in love with the song as Anderson taught them the lyrics and accompanying dance with his guitar in hand. For a few years classes around the school performed the song with Anderson but after awhile it seemed to be slowly forgotten. Then, several weeks ago, kindergarten teacher Kappy Schoening had a conversation with her daughter, Talen Schoening, who had attended Vale in the early 2000’s.

While sitting around the dinner table, the topic of kindergarten came up and after 15 years Talen began to sing “My Imagination” and even remembered the dance moves.

“It was something she never forgot, I thought it was really special. Iran to Mr. Anderson the next day and said ‘You’ve got to do this with our kids again.’”

Since then, Anderson has come in to Kappy Schoening’s classroom each week to practice the song with her students who truly seem to enjoy the zany verses. Anderson and the class performed “My Imagination” along with four other songs for the entire kindergarten staff on Monday, June 4, as a parting gift before the end of the school year.

Kappy Schoening said the performance brought fellow teachers to tears and she hopes Anderson will continue teaching music to students for years to come – and maybe even write another song.

Recent CHS grad receives free surgery to offset college costs

By KYRA PLANETZ

It’s no secret that oral surgeries, although necessary in most cases, can cost an arm and a leg. Wisdom tooth extraction is a common surgical procedure performed on young adults, usually between the ages of 18 to 24. Many folks this age have numerous costs to balance; between moving away from home and starting college, paying up to $3,000 for a surgery can put some in a financial bind. With this in mind, Central Washington Oral & Facial Surgery (CWOFS), a clinic in Wenatchee, decided to begin a program that gives back to the community.

CWOFS recently started advertising Wisdom for Wisdom throughout the community, a new program that offers free wisdom tooth extraction for one to two qualifying applicants per year. They asked for high school and college students requiring the procedure to send in a short essay explaining why the program would benefit them. CWOFS oral-maxillofacial surgeon, Tyler McDonald D.D.S., said the program was founded on the idea of saving students money on their medical bills in order to help them focus on paying for school.

“We were looking for a way to give back and support the community, hopefully the program will also help get people to think about their oral health,” McDonald said.

Out of nearly 10 applicants,

CWOFS selected one “winner,” Nikki Wisemore, to receive the first Wisdom for Wisdom procedure the clinic has gifted. Wisemore graduated from Cashmere High School on June 1 and will study political science and international relations at Seattle University beginning in the fall. The ambitious teen has three other siblings, two of which are also attending college. When all four of her wisdom teeth grew in last year, Wisemore had to put off an extraction, despite pain the erupting teeth caused her, because her family was worried about paying for the expensive procedure. Then an ad for the Wisdom for Wisdom program surfaced on Facebook, Wisemore sent in her application and finally got her bothersome teeth removed on Monday, June 4.

“This is such a fabulous offer, it provides a great opportunity for the family and child to get the surgery done,” Wisemore’s mother, Carmen Wisemore, said, “it allows for more funds to be available to put her through school.”

With her surgery complete—and more money in her pocket—the graduate looks forward to attending college without wisdom tooth pain. She will spend her summer as a camp counselor at Evergreen Girls State, a camp for young female politicians, before moving to Seattle in the fall.

Mayor Gomes

to run for mayor in 2019. Fletcher has been a member of the council for the last 13 years and said he wants to reassure the community things will run smoothly during this transitional period.

“I do have a pretty good understanding of the present condition and situation with the city,” Fletcher said, “I understand what Mayor Gomes was doing and basically want to continue things as they are very quickly and easily.”

At their meeting Monday night, June 11, the council met with their attorney to discuss the process of appointing the interim mayor. Gomes said now that he is completely retired, he will have more time to continue volunteering at the Cashmere Museum and Pioneer Village, while spending time with his family; including a trip to visit relatives in Arizona at the end of the year.

Judge re-election cases she sees involve some type of drug use, mainly methamphetamines and opioids. The drug court begins tomorrow, June 7, and follows the national model which is practiced around the state and across the country.

“We are hoping that this drug court is going to combat some of the problems that we’re seeing with addiction in our community,” Ferrera said.

Participants of this program will spend a minimum of one to two years completing courses in order to graduate from drug court and avoid a conviction on their record as well as jail-time. Those eligible are people with a drug addiction who commit minor crimes, such as petty theft, not violent offenders. Participants that qualify will not only undergo drug treatment but must complete steps for getting proper housing, employment and their GED. The drug court is by no means an “easy way out,” Ferrera said, those who don’t meet requirements during the long process face sanctions, the most severe results in removal from the program. But the Chelan County Superior Court, including Ferrera, believe the drug court will eliminate repeat offenders.

“We’re helping them achieve life skills in addition to staying clean,” Ferrera said, “It’s for people who really struggle with wanting to get clean, but if they don’t have those skills to actually be successful in life then there’s a chance they might come back [to court].”

With the experience she will gain presiding over the drug court, Ferrera hopes to be re-elected this year in order to maintain consistency for participants in the program. She believes it is important for Cashmere citizens to vote in the upcoming election as many folks will eventually end up in the Superior Court whether for a civil case, such as divorce and custody hearings, or a crime. Ferrera maintains people want a fair and honest judge when attending their court date and seems to truly appreciate the community in which she lives.

“I love it here. Having lived in other places and traveled around, there is really no better place than Cashmere, in my mind,” Ferrera said.

Kyle Endelman will oversee Chelan County PUD park operations in Chelan and on the Rocky Reach reservoir

SUBMITTED BY CHELAN COUNTY PUD

WENATCHEE – Kyle Endelman, a parks professional with more than 20 years’ experience, has joined Chelan PUD as a new superintendent in the Parks Department. He’ll oversee PUD parks in Chelan and on the Columbia River above Rocky Reach Dam.

“I fell in love with parks in college when I worked as a summer seasonal employee for King County Parks Department,” Endelman said. “Ever since I have enjoyed the variety and challenges the parks department has to offer.”

Endelman comes to Chelan PUD from the city of Sammamish where he was parks deputy director. He is a graduate of Central Washington University.

Endelman is filling a vacant position. He’ll oversee District parks at Rocky Reach, Beebe Bridge, Chelan Falls (and Powerhouse Park) and Riverwalk Park in Chelan.

Endelman joins the leadership team with fellow Parks Superintendent Ray Heit and Parks Manager Ryan Baker. They work with about 40 seasonal and full-time staff to manage activities and maintain facilities offering trails, sports fields, swimming, boat launches, picnicking and camping.

Chelan PUD’s 15 parks along the Columbia River and on Lake Chelan welcome about 3 million people a year.

“Kyle’s passion for parks and his ability to mentor others were apparent as we talked with people he’s worked with,” Baker said. “He has experience in the field and in leadership in public parks, providing a great fit for our customer-owned utility.”

Endelman and his family are moving to the area from Monroe. “My family and I are really excited to move to the dry side of the state and to work and live in such a beautiful area,” he said.

In and Out of Love

“I don’t love you anymore.”

Those words hit Joanne like a mac truck. Two decades of marriage and three children, to hear Gary say such a thing instantly sent her mind reeling, scrambling to piece some cohesive response.

Before Joanne could recover, through a flat and unsympathetic tone, Gary reinforced his feeling or lack thereof.

“I am not in love with you, Joanne.”

How often conversations just like this one occurs today. A one-time starry-eyed couple hopelessly devoted to each other finds themselves after a few years or decades, that they have simply “fallen out of love”.

Why does this happen? Perhaps, we have a wrong understanding of what love is.

Love to most people is simply an emotional feeling they receive when something pleases them. For example, I love pizza. The reason is that it tastes good and I love it because it does something for me. How many people, if they were honest, would say the same thing about the one they’re with?

It is easy to view relationships that way. Take most young couples, as they begin their relationship they are at the height of their romance. Everything is great, the excitement of this new budding relationship is intoxicating, they can’t wait to see each other after class, they talk for hours on the phone. Is any of this sounding familiar? Then they get hitched and get older. Changes, though often subtle, start to appear and the once feisty and inspiring woman he fell in love with in college now has become an older, less energetic housewife who is more accustomed to wearing sweats and sneakers and likewise, the husband she married, who was the picture of virility and fitness, has gained a few pant sizes and a more cynical attitude about life to boot.

They don’t make each other feel good anymore and as a consequence, they fall out of love.

Biblically speaking, love is not solely an emotion you feel. We have unfortunately been duped into this notion that love is only romantic in nature and therefore when that emotion fades or becomes unpleasant that means it is time to split.

In contrast, although in the Bible love does have an aspect of romantic emotion attached to it, it is not ruled by feelings alone. Why? Because feelings change. Remember the earlier illustration or even better yet look at your own life. Love according to the God’s Word, is not fickle or finicky rather it is unconditional, unselfish and perseveres to the end.

In Paul’s letter to the Corinthians, he gives one of the clearest definitions of love ever written. He writes in 1 Cor. 13:4-6, “Love is patient and kind, love does not envy or boast; it is not arrogant or rude. It does not insist on its own way; it is not irritable or resentful; it does not rejoice at wrong doing, but rejoices with the truth.”

Do you see anything different as opposed to the commonly understood concept of love? The love that Paul is describing is outwardly focused. This is made even more clear in the phrase “does not insist on its own way”. How many marriages end because of “irreconcilable differences”? In other words, you have individuals insisting on their own way and stubbornly refusing to give in to make things work.

The purest form of love is unselfish and unconditional at its essence, not driven by self-serving emotion. Again, this is in direct opposition to our widespread misunderstanding of love. We stop loving someone when they quit meeting our conditions or we respond negatively (as in being rude or resentful) when they stop making us feel good. This is wrong and relationships are paying the price.

Also, the very activity of love Paul says “bears all things, believes all things, hopes all things, endures all things” (1 Cor. 13:7). Biblically speaking, there is not one moment that love will cease to persevere. Even in the most difficult of circumstances, according to the 1 Cor. 13:8, “love never ends.”

Juxtapose that to what we see and we hear in our world today regarding love. True love, of which many obviously do not understand, is not merely a feeling that comes and goes rather it is demonstrative of something truly great and eternal.

To the Garys and Joannes and to everyone else reading this, let’s get back to the Biblical standard of love because as the heartbreaking evidence shows, our ignorance has cost us.

NCW Media Inc.’s Obituary and Memorial Policy

An obituary is a way for family members to commemorate a loved one’s life and to notify the larger community of the deceased.

Obituaries are also used for historical and ancestral data. Memorials are another way of letting the community know about the life and memories of the person who has died. A memorial is different from an obituary. An obituary is usually current while a memorial can be written later.

For publication in the Cashmere Valley Record or The Leavenworth Echo, an obituary or memorial needs to be typed and emailed to editor@leavenworthecho.com no later than 4 p.m. Friday for the next week’s issue. Funeral homes and chapels can submit obituaries by noon on Monday, except holidays.

Obituaries are priced per word while the charge for memorial ads are by the column-inch. Cost of the obituary/memorial is due at the time of placement.

Chelan PUD plans helicopter flights over area transmission lines

SUBMITTED BY CHELAN COUNTY PUD

WENATCHEE – Chelan PUD customers will see a helicopter flying along PUD transmission lines for several days starting Monday, June 11, similar to the work that was done in spring 2017. Bad weather canceled these flights originally scheduled for last fall.

Flights will cover lines in the upper Wenatchee Valley between Cashmere and Lake Wenatchee, followed by the Chelan Valley from Lake Chelan Dam to Manson.

Crew on the flights will take pictures and gather high-tech survey information to help PUD engineers maintain reliable electric service in the county.

Jim Caldwell, senior transmission system engineer, said the information gathered during the flights is used for detailed computer models of the PUD’s transmission system that are vital tools for making sure the high-voltage lines continue to provide reliable service for PUD customer-owners.

Caldwell said it could take up to two weeks to complete the flights over both areas. The helicopter will fly twice along the transmission lines. A high-level flight to take wide-angle aerial photos will be done first, followed by low-level flight at less than 500 feet above the line, to gather the survey data using LiDAR technology (Light Detection and Ranging sensors).

The flights will start Monday, June 11 and be done during business hours.

Chelan PUD is alerting residents near the lines about the flights, as well as city officials and law enforcement.

New permit for wineries helps protect water quality

DEPT. OF ECOLOGY NEWS RELEASE

OLYMPIA – Washington’s wineries and the Department of Ecology have collaborated to develop the first statewide water quality permit that will help the industry prevent pollution and protect water quality.

The new Winery General Permit adopted this week establishes practices that help wineries manage their wastewater. The general permit will benefit both the state and permittees by providing broad, efficient, and consistent coverage for wineries across the state. The permit is scheduled to take effect July 1, 2019. The delayed start gives winemakers time to assess their facilities and develop a compliance strategy that best suits their business.

“We worked closely with local winemakers to develop a permit that provides environmental protection in way that lightens the financial and operational hardship on wineries, especially for smaller wineries,” said Heather Bartlett, Ecology Water Quality Program Manager. “Most of Washington’s wineries already have good practices that protect clean water. This permit will continue that standard of eco-friendly wastewater management as this industry rapidly grows.”

Washington is the second largest wine-producing state in the nation. The byproduct of making wine is a corrosive wastewater that, if not properly managed, can damage soil and crops, kill aquatic life, degrade the infrastructure in wastewater treatment plants, and pull metals from the soil into groundwater that can harm people.

Ecology has worked closely with the winemaking community, stakeholders, and public since 2014 to develop this permit. The permit incorporates the best practices from wineries that already successfully manage wastewater, and time-tested practices from California’s regulations. A guiding principle was to provide flexibility for wineries covered under the permit, and provide options for winemakers to comply. This will allow wineries to manage wastewater in the way that best suits their business.

Wineries may need coverage under the permit if they discharge more than 53,505 gallons of wastewater in a calendar year. Specifically, these wineries will need coverage if they discharge winery process wastewater:

- As irrigation to managed vegetation.
- To a lagoon or other liquid storage structure.

- As road dust abatement.
 - To a subsurface infiltration system.
 - To an infiltration basin.
 - To a wastewater treatment plant.
- In the coming year, Ecology will hold workshops to provide guidance to winery representatives about how to apply for coverage, inspect their facilities, document their progress, implement best management practices, and report their monitoring data to the agency.

Learn more at www.ecology.wa.gov/winerypermit. Join Ecology’s winery email listserv for updates.

This permit can be appealed to the Washington Pollution Control Hearings Board within 30 days of becoming effective.

Medicines for Motion Sickness

I avoid boats. My first seagoing experience on a salmon fishing boat 30 years ago was spent hanging over the stern “feeding the fish” instead of catching any. Years later, a dream cruise to Alaska became nightmare of nausea. Fifteen years has passed since that disaster at sea, so when my husband’s cousin Ron suggested a one-day wildlife cruise in Alaska, my recent success with meclizine made me want to try it again. At least I wasn’t alone; Ron’s wife, Patricia suffers also gets seasick. Last Sunday, our 150-person catamaran Orca Odyssey cruised smoothly through Resurrection Bay on the way to Aialik Glacier, while we enjoyed seeing a pair of bald eagles, several whales, and a baby mountain goat next to her mama. Venturing out into Prince Edward Sound, however, lazy rolling swells shifted to a choppy side to side rocking motion, attacking the equilibrium of my tummy. Luckily, the side to side motion changed back to a smoother rolling action before I lost my breakfast.

Patricia wasn’t as fortunate.

On our way home that night she asked me, “Is there anything else I could try that might work better, like a topical product?” “Scopolamine patches are a prescription-only medicine that you wear behind your ear for 3 days at a time. Unfortunately, they require a prescription, so you might need a doctor’s appointment to get one, and only the brand name is available right now. With a high deductible insurance plan, a box of 3 patches of Transderm-Scop® can cost close to $90.00.” “Ginger isn’t topical, but it’s pretty effective.

It only lasts for 5 hours, though, and I’ve forgotten to re-dose before, when crossing multiple time zones. But you can safely take it along with meclizine, and it’s not expensive. I prefer candied ginger root, but you can get ginger capsules in the health food section of most grocery stores.”

Later, I found 3 topical motion sickness remedies at Amazon’s website:

1. Sumifun’s Motion Sickness Patch, or MQ Patch. Made in China with at least 7 mostly Chinese herbs, 3 of which are possibly effective. Hairy Datura flower is another name for Jimson weed and contains the same active ingredient as the Transderm-Scop® prescription patch for motion sickness. Pinellia is used as an antiemetic in China, but also contains ephedrine, which is banned in the United States because it can cause palpitations, high blood pressure, heart attack and stroke. Dahurian angelica root is used orally for nausea, but it’s not clear if using it topically would help.

2. Emesyl® nasal spray is marketed as a homeopathic remedy and contains very small amounts of ipecacuana (ipecac), tabacum (tobacco) and moderate amounts of Zingiber Officinale (ginger root).

Homeopathic formulas consist of very, very dilute concentrations of compounds that can CAUSE the same symptoms that it’s intended to relieve, usually in a sugar pill dissolved on the tongue. The lower the concentration, the more potent it is considered to be. There is no scientific explanation for this, and the Food and Drug Administration considers homeopathy harmless because there are barely any molecules of ingredients in traditional formulations. Homeopathic products are not regulated and do not have to comply with safety and effectiveness standards that govern other medications because of protective legislation passed in 1938 that was championed by a Senator who was also a homeopathic physician. This law protects any product containing ingredients listed in the United States Homeopathic Pharmacopeia, which is why the names on most homeopathic remedies are different than common names used today.

The amount of ipecac and tobacco in Emesyl® is 6C, which means that a 1:100 dilution was made and then diluted again and by 1:100 each time, six times, resulting in very few molecules of the original ingredients left in the product. Emesyl® also contains ginger at a concentration of 1C, meaning that it was only diluted to 1:100 once. This is against the principles of homeopathy because ginger works directly to relieve motion sickness, but is probably effective for nausea if ginger is absorbed when sprayed up your nose.

3.MotionEaze® is an herbal product with 7 different essential oils in it, including lavender, peppermint, chamomile, frankincense, myrrh, ylang ylang and birch. Lavender may decrease anxiety but it hasn’t been shown to be helpful for motion sickness. When drank as a tea, peppermint and chamomile can calm stomach upset, but it’s not clear how much is absorbed through your skin. The other 4 essential oils are used in perfumes and are probably not active ingredients.

Retirees: Rent/own your in your ‘Golden Years’?

EDITED NEWS RELEASE

Home ownership has long held an honored position as an integral part of the American dream, but when retirement time comes, rethinking that dream could be in order. Sometimes renting a house or apartment is the better bet both financially and in terms of the retiree’s changing lifestyle and health.

“When people plan for retirement, they focus on things like how much they have saved, how much Social Security will pay, and whether they have pension,” Eric Kearney says. “But as you get older, you also need to think about such issues as whether you can keep mowing the lawn or handling other day-to-day chores that homeownership requires. If you must hire someone to do them for you, how much will that eat into what may already be a tight monthly budget?”

The truth: There’s no answer that will fit everyone’s situation, he says. So retirees, or those approaching retirement, should weigh their personal pros and cons.

“There’s a lot to think about,” he says. “Should you sell the house you raised your family in and downsize to something more suitable for just the two of you? If you’re planning to move to somewhere else in the country to enjoy your retirement, is it more prudent to buy in that new location, or is leasing the way to go to give you more flexibility if it doesn’t work out?”

Some things retirees should think about as they ponder the own vs. rent question include:

- Maintenance issues. When you own a home, every leaky faucet, electrical problem or faulty appliance is yours to handle as best you can. If you can do it yourself, great; but often, these household repairs mean calling in a professional at a sometimes exorbitant cost. When you rent, it’s up to the landlord or the property management company to take care of the repairs.
- Mobility. Selling a house can be a long and complicated process, and you never know what the market might be like when the time arrives. Whereas breaking a lease is much simpler. “If your children are scattered all over the country, you may want to move closer to one of them,” Kearney says. “Also, if your health takes a turn for the worse, selling a home can be a significant burden on your family.”
- The inheritance. For many people, a house is the most valuable asset in their estate and they might want to leave it to their children in the will. Once again, it’s a matter of weighing the pros and cons. “Having a home to pass down to the children is a noble gesture, but it is not always feasible,” Kearney says.
- “Before considering whether owning or renting is the right option,” Kearney says, “it’s essential to review all the intricacies of your situation and decide based on your finances and your overall health and well-being.”
