The ceremony started off in the Cashmere Cemetery, where many flags were raised in remembrance throughout the area.

There, the speakers began to honor everyone who had lost their lives during the act of terrorism that was 9/11.

Chelan County Commissioner Kevin Overbay was a guest speaker during the ceremony, who stood up by the Memorial to give a speech.

"September 11, 2001 will always be a fixed point in the life of America" Overbay said. "The loss of so many lives left us to examine our own and each of us were reminded that we are here only for a time. These kind of days should be filled with things that last and matter- the love of our families, the love of our neighbors and our country."

Overbay continued on to say that ever since the terrorist attacks, America has resolved to not only uphold the memories of those lost on 9/11 but also the memories of those who have fallen ever since then.

"Today we honor their memory," Overbay said. "The 2,606 who've died in war, 125 who died at the Pentagon,

FFA looks towards Nationals

BY MIKAILA WILKERSON Staff Writer

It has been a proud, successful year for Cashmere High School's FFA as they have just come back from their State competitions and are preparing themselves for the upcoming Nationals Conference.

There were 50 FFA students who participated in the State Conference events at Washington State University Wednesday, May 10 through Sunday, May 14.

At State, there were 15 people who competed in the Environmental Natural Resources competition and Cashmere's teams won 1st place.

The winners for Natural Resources included Isaiah Hall, Rainey Reed, Rhiannon Strutzel, Jade Jaspers, Hunter Duke and Lizzy Carney.

"They have the potential to be in the Top 5 (at Nationals)," Advisor Rusty Finch said. According to Finch, there will be around 6,000 attendees at Nationals, which will be a great challenge for the students. Within the Food Science event at State Cashmere's team also took 1st place. Last year's Food Science team won 3rd place.

The Food Science team included Dani Monroe, Rhiannon Strutzel, Hunter Duke, Reilly Schoening and Grace Kelly.

"It was a pretty solid year," Finch said. "It ended on a good note with two teams winning and going to Nationals.'

Saturday, October 21 through Saturday, October 28 of this next school year will be when the 1st place students selected head to FFA Nationals in Indianapolis, Indiana.

Senior Jade Jaspers, who competed in this year's Natural Resources competition, has placed in 12 contests in her high school career. This year Jaspers won her 4th State contest.

Jaspers, who will be in college at the time of the Nationals Conference, will be taking the time off of college to go and compete.

"Bar none she's the most successful FFA member I've ever had," Finch said of Jaspers.

Jaspers has also received the State FFA Degree for her $1,000 earned/ invested from FFA, $360 hours of One class of Cashmere High School students that has been especially hard at work since the beginning of the school year is the Yearbook Staff.

Diligently going around to get various, fun photos of their fellow classmates, these nine students have successfully put together this year's yearbook and filled it with some memorable moments for everyone to be able to look back on.

According to Linda Hightower, the teacher of the Yearbook productions class, everyone came into the class with no previous publications experience. But, despite their inexperience, the staff pulled together a fabulous yearbook.

This year's staff includes Sydni Betz, Hailey Hoffer, Wendy Mendoza, Lauren Kelly, Matthew Erickson, Summer Herd, Danali Landin-Cortes, Kylie Michael and Molly Robertson.

Lauren Kelly joined after hearing how much of a fun experience it was from her sister Grace Kelly, who was a staff member last year.

"I've had to sell ads to businesses in Cashmere and take pictures of sports and kids around school," Kelly said. "I've been in charge of the cheerleading pages and I also have my own student life page so I was able to design my own page in the yearbook."

For Kelly, the best part about being in the class was that it allowed her to become closer with her classmates.

"I've been friends with these people for a long time, but not as close as we've become through Yearbook," Kelly said. "It's been really fun to get to know them better."

Seeing how much of a positive environment this class provides gave Matthew Erickson the incentive to join.

"I just saw it as a great family to be a part of," Erickson said. "All the people are super nice and it's a very tightly-packed group of people, which I thought was pretty cool."

Being responsible for five pages in this year's yearbook, Erickson created a music page and a tennis page along with revising other pages.

Write-On, young writers

The Cashmere Middle School held a Write-On event on Thursday, May 25 to give students a chance to celebrate their love for writing. The event included writing workshops, an author's panel, sharing creative ideas and announcing winners for small writing competitions. Cashmere Middle School students gathered around ecstatically as they awaited the announcement for the winners of the school's Write-On competition on Thursday, May 25.

The school's first Write-On night was put on to help young, aspiring writers pursue their passion and celebrate their love for writing. The event included writing workshops, an authors' panel, students sharing ideas with one another and the announcement of winners for writing competitions.

Shelly Milne, a teacher and librarian at the middle school, got a class to put together this fun, exciting event for fellow students.

"I said to them, 'you guys are going to plan a night to celebrate writing. What do you think we should do?", Milne said. "They started brainstorming. We should invite authors and we should have ice cream'. We ended up without ice cream but we ended up with the authors."

Contest ideas and script write-ups for the authors' panel were all made by the students who were involved.

All of the questions that were asked of the authors had been generated by students.

The authors for the evening included local author Dan Gemeinhart and Haley Whitehall, who shared their experiences with writing and answered any writingrelated questions that students had for them.

SHOP LOCAL

The overall theme for the evening was wilderness, which students wrote about in their stories and poems.

"This is the first time we've done this particular event," Milne said. "We have done other kinds of writing celebrations but this is the first time we did it this way."

While attending the event, students got to experience different writing stations to help them improve their writing and editing skills.

Lena Flagel, a 5th grade teacher, hosted a workshop that suggested editing ideas to the young writers.

Rose Shook, a 6th grade teacher, helped students with a prewriting session that she put on.

Chris Simrell and Jakob Tiedeman, both 7th grade teachers, had students who wrote 'This I Believe' essays, which were shared with their fellow classmates

In the library was where the school's newspaper club shared past editions that night.

A group of 6th graders shared their fractured fairytale stories that they had worked on previously.

'They were sharing their fractured fairytales with their friends in a very informal, 'listen to my story' kind of way," Milne said. "We wanted this to be a celebration of all kinds of writing and (celebrating) writing because we love to write.'

For the short stories competition there was one 1st place winner selected from every grade level.

SHORT STORIES-

1st place winners:
5th grade	Mia Clark
6th grade	Eli Lyons
7th grade	Jordan Holliday & Gracie Larson
8th grade	Raven Moran

In the Poetry portion of Write-On there were two winners chosen who were both from 5th grade.

Anna Johnson placed 1st for her poem titled Forest Walk.

Nature Song, written by Emmy Risdon, also received 1st place.

"Just having kids find their voice, to me, is what writing is all about," Milne said. "Tell your story, express yourself- that isn't always something that kids feel like school helps them to learn. So we wanted to make sure that we're celebrating all kinds of writing including just finding your voice as a writer."

Cracks appearing in the warming insanity. The problem is that our government and our media have become addicted to the concept that humans are causing irreparable harm to our environment. Harm they claim will inevitably make life on earth unsustainable. For government zealots it is a perfect storm. Only government can create the regulations and laws needed to protect us from this external threat to our existence.

The result is that many uniformed and fearful subjects have fallen prey to the tyrants, government zealots and their enablers around the globe.

If the science were solid they would have case to support their position. But the science is not settled. Climate change zealots claim a consensus of scientists agree, but science is not settled by a vote. Science is settled by incontrovertible facts.

A growing number of well

qualified scientists have begun to question

the science. Some have even gone so far as to call it a hoax. That includes Ian Plimer,

the University

Both Plimer and Moore have been vilified as misguided individuals who have turned their back on science to become paid spokesmen for the oil industry. Notice that they do not challenge the scientific facts Plimer and Moore use to make their case against global climate change.

First of all, Plimer and Moore both say carbon dioxide is not a pollutant. In fact they both make the case that carbon dioxide levels are at the lowest level in the history of the planet. Moore says that plant life is currently on a starvation diet when it comes to carbon dioxide. He points out that many farmers today have to pump carbon dioxide into their greenhouses to encourage the plants to grow.

Years ago basic high school biology taught us that plants breath in carbon dioxide and release oxygen. The climate zealots want us to believe that we must reduce carbon dioxide by abandoning our use of fossil fuels like oil and coal. Logically, that means reducing carbon dioxide will ultimately reduce the levels of oxygen as plants begin to die. If carbon dioxide levels were at historically high levels then the climate change folks would have a valid concern, but both Plimer and Moore dispute that underlying premise. Also, if greenhouse gasses were at historically high levels plants would be thriving without the addition of carbon dioxide as posited by Moore. Zealots ignore these serious challenges to their scientific facts.

Political talk show hosts Rush Limbaugh and Mark Levin both pointed out this week that the programs promoted by the climate change lobby fall heaviest on the poor. Patrick Moore also has made the point that the solutions proposed by the climate change zealots hit the poor harder than the rich and powerful. Their programs result in higher energy costs, higher food costs and fewer job opportunities.

The reality is we all want a cleaner environment. We don't want polluted air or lead in the water supply. Levin says people who are better off financially are more likely to support real solutions to cleaning up our environment.

Quite frankly it is insulting when liberals accuse conservatives of destroying the planet for our children and grand children while they saddle our progeny with a debt they cannot possibly pay.

President Trump got it right when he stood up to the pressure and withdrew the U.S. from the Paris Climate change accord. Unfortunately he did not do it because the entire underlying global warming/climate change agenda is nothing more than an fraud perpetrated by liberal elites who want to steal your freedom.

Free, educated industrious people can find new creative solutions to the problems that we all face. Our founding fathers understood that government rarely does. Have government solutions gotten any smarter since they wrote the constitution?

Why is the stock market so resilient?

Despite the unimpressive economy and the drama engulfing the political world, the stock market is remarkably calm. But that's nothing new. Since the Financial Crisis, the markets have shrugged off a weak economy, the Fiscal Cliff, the Sequester, shutdown, multiple crises in Europe, and more... So why are the markets so resilient? Let's examine the most recent stuff first. Clearly, part of the recent stock market optimism was the promise of deregulation and tax reform. However, given the turmoil in Donald Trump's presidency, the markets have reason to the stock market would like more than for Mike Pence or Paul Ryan to take over as President tomorrow.

а

If that happened, the markets would get all of the positive parts of Donald Trump - without all the childish ignorance."

However, as happy as the markets would be with a President Pence, there's a real risk of a long, drawnout investigation that could slow the Republican agenda to a halt. The quicker all this can be resolved, the better. For now, it seems the stock market is betting on a quick outcome.

Beyond the political drama, the markets are also happy that Trump is playing nice with China and things are calming down politically in Europe. In addition, while the economy isn't booming, it is still growing, and the likelihood of a recession is low. Further, even if a recession comes, the Fed has proven it's willing to pull out all the stops to help the economy. In addition to all that, corporate earnings have been solid (which is what the markets care about most). So, despite all the scary stuff, there are plenty of excuses for the markets to continue rising.

However, I think there is something far more simple that is keeping the markets strong: Huge sums of money are flowing into the stock market every day. Consider how many more people are making monthly contributions to their 401K's and IRA's than they were 20 plus years ago. Because of that, there is a never-ending demand for stocks. If you remember economics 101, more demand means a higher price. There's another important aspect to this, which is the rise of index funds. Index funds aren't managed, which means there's no one choosing when to buy or sell, or when to be excited or scared about the markets. With index funds, no one is making those decisions. Whether the economic and political news is good or bad, billions of dollars still flow into the stock market month after month after month. So, perhaps the markets keep rising because investors are asleep at the wheel.

I'm not sure what to make of this phenomenon. Today's stock market is different than anything in history. It makes me wonder if economic and political discussions are completely irrelevant. As long as investors keep pushing money into the markets relentlessly, the markets might rise relentlessly. Obviously, at some point, it has to stop; but the old rules seem to have changed, so I have no idea when.

prisoners in China. What's the fuss? They have plenty of prisoners who owe society a debt and plenty of people who would still like to keep GARY BÉGIN living the dream in the fake communist society, which is teetering on capitalism run amuck.

By that I mean if a wealthy Chinese tov manufacturer, who has made his fortune selling cheap goods to Walmart on the backs of slave prison labor. needs a new kidney or heart or liver, then why not get it from the same demographic he has exploited for years anyway?

What's a few Wurlitzers (organs) among friends anyway? I make light of this PC cause made into an issue by the liberals because why should we care if these hapless souls that are headed for death actually give back a meaningful benefit to society before they go?

Well, it turns out the real issue is that these organs are being harvested without the permission of the condemned men.

Again, who cares? Did they give permission to be imprisoned or to be found guilty or to be caught in the first place? Of course not. So why are medical ethicists suddenly falling all over themselves demanding that nothing if not practical. They control the birthrate of the populace as best they can. They control which children can go TO APPLES to the best schools and which kids are destined for plowing fields. They recognize the best athletes and the best scientists and treat them accordingly.

I saw this invented controversy on a PBS Newshour show last week and I am still baffled as to the big deal. Is the point that when a person dies the disposition of the body is up to that person and/or his family?

Is it unethical to remove a piece of the body so that another may live with or without permission from the donor? I have a small heart emblem on my Washington state driver's license denoting the fact I am willing to donate organs upon my death from a car crash.

It is a simple procedure and needs no further explanation.

I would much rather complain about the Chinese penchant for believing rhino horns are aphrodisiacs thus causing massive poaching in Africa and driving those poor critters into extinction, than to complain about a few organs being taken to allow others to live.

As usual, PC complaints are misguided. If the Chinese are that important to you then offer up your own organs and pay for putting them on dry ice and flying them to Beijing.

Are liberals so naive as to not realize only the wealthy among the Chinese are going to get these organs anyway even if they have to buy them from America?

If I should be crushed by a landslide on Highway 2 one fine day, but my heart is still good enough to be harvested and donated, I, just like these Chinese prisoners, will not have a choice as to whom gets my organs, nor will I care. Although one might say I cared enough to give permission ahead of time for the "state" to take the heart, so do I believe the prisoners in China are giving the state permission the moment they commit the crime which ultimately leads to their execution by the state.

Is this convoluted logic or the musings of one who understands the organist at a ballpark plays the same instrument as Beethoven, but probably gets more benefits and his own parking spot?

Such is lifeand death in our modern world.

Where are the men?

A WALK

WITH

JOHN

As speedily approaches, families all across the country will set time aside to celebrate Dads. Even many churches will devote that Sunday to speaking about the importance of the father in the home and how earthly fathers are to reflect the qualities of the Heavenly One.

Fatherhood is for men only. Now I know that might go against the prevailing egalitarian opinion of our day, where men and women are equal on every level. But we must remember equality doesn't mean sameness. Yes, men and women are equal in respect to value of personhood, but they are simply not the same. To be a father is only for men, not for women and certainly not for boys.

We are facing a crisis regarding the men in our society. That being: where are they? No it is not that the population of the male gender has suddenly taken a nose dive and there is a significant absence of an XY chromosome. The void is much more significant. Where are the men of character?

Manhood is often SMITH synonymous with tools. cars, guns and whoever can outdrink, out brawl, and out-play is often viewed as being more of a man. Hollywood and the media have only perpetuated this skewed perspective. Think of all the qualities that Hollywood celebrates and uses to define manhood; money, success, muscles and sex appeal.

What about integrity, courage, faithfulness even in the smallest of things, family responsibility? Why aren't those things celebrated? Because we don't really think those qualities are worth celebrating.

Have you ever listened to guys introduce themselves? I know that almost seems like a random thought, but stick with me here. Typically, when men introduce themselves they almost always include what they do in their introduction. As if depending on what their profession is determines their level amongst the surrounding peers. For example, if someone is a doctor then they are viewed more highly than let's say a custodial worker. When I am in those situations, I like to throw a wrench in the social dynamic and introduce myself with, "I am a husband and father." After the initial shock of me upsetting the rules of introduction, what follows is this: "Yeah, but what do you do?" As if being a husband and a father is less important than what I do for a living. The thing is, being a husband and father is a tremendously high calling and I would say, not for cowards or little boys. We have so many boys running around wanting the privileges of manhood without the responsibility or sacrifice. Anyone hear of the term "Adultolescence?" Where the age of maturity among men has been extended to the 30s.

I consider my role in the family far more important than my calling into the pastorate. In fact, so important that even if the ministries of the church becomes a great success and I have accolades to my name but my family is neglected, I am in disobedience of clear Biblical guidelines. The Scripture says if I don't take care of my family, then I have denied Christianity and am worse than an unbeliever (1 Tim 5:8).

However, being a man is much more than just bringing home the bacon, and this where I believe many men misunderstand their role in the family and fall short. Men are to lead their families, especially when it comes to the discipleship of their households. As the Puritan William Gurnal wrote that men are to be the priest and prophet of their homes, interceding on behalf of their family before God as well as calling the family into a deeper walk with Christ. They are also to be the king of their households. Now this doesn't mean that the wife and children are to be slaves but instead the man must provide, protect and lead in servant style leadership akin to the example that Jesus Christ laid before us.

Dad, you are not called to go bow hunting or bass fishing but to train up your family in the discipline and instruction of the Lord (Eph. 6:4). There is no greater enterprise and no higher calling than that one. Again this endeavor is not for little boys pretending to be men, but for those who are willing to sacrifice, labor for their families and go to bed tired after doing all they can do for the glory of God. Where are you men? This world and your families need you.

people to come pick up their yearbooks I was trying to think of what would catch people's eye," Erickson said. "I kind of resorted to what the teens are into these days- the memes and all that stuff. It was a big hit so that's pretty good."

The opportunity to connect with new people and gain new experiences is what prompted Sydni Betz to get involved.

Betz worked on getting photos from sports and working on pages dedicated to all of the school's sports.

"We get along pretty well and we're all having fun," Betz said. "That's just been great." Wendy Mendoza has covered many sports and various events for Yearbook and interviewed people along with taking their pictures. Mendoza began working alongside the others in the class because of her interest in photography and wanting to be a part of something as important to the school as the yearbook.

"The best part is when we have nothing to do we just laugh and joke," Mendoza said of her and her classmates.

Hailey Hoffer also chose to become a member of the Yearbook class due to her fondness of photography.

Hoffer really loves how everyone in the class all works well together and how ready they are to help each other with in-class work.

"It's always fun to organize something that you have to look at at the end of the year," Hoffer said. "Everyone looks forward to it.

NCW Media Inc.'s Obituary and Memorial Policy

An obituary is a way for family members to commemorate a loved one's life and to notify the larger community of the deceased

Obituaries are also used for historical and ancestral data. Memorials are another way of letting the community know about the life and memories of the person who has died. A memorial is different from an obituary. An obituary is usually current while a memorial can be written later.

For publication in the Cashmere Valley Record or The Leavenworth Echo, an obituary or memorial needs to be typed and emailed to editor@leavenworthecho.com no later than 4 p.m. Friday for the next week's issue. Funeral homes and chapels can submit obituaries by noon on Monday, except holidays.

Obituaries are priced per word while the charge for memorial ads are by the column-inch. Cost of the obituary/ memorial is due at the time of placement.

part of FFA has helped her to work on her public speaking and not be as timid about doing so.

"Through FFA, through these competitions, team activities and presentations I've really been able to project my voice more and walk through stuff better," Duke said.

Rhiannon Strutzel participated in the Food and Technology Science events.

"I really like the team involvement in Food Science," Strutzel said. "We do individual competitions all morning and then in the afternoon you do a team activity. That's probably my favorite part of the competition because you get to work and depend on others and have them depend on you."

Dairy was the competition that Rainey Reed took part in at State but Natural Resources is the event she will participate in at Nationals.

"I've been to State before but for this particular competition we got second place and first place was obviously the goal so I just think that I should study more and be more focused when I'm there," Reed said. "That's what I took away this time."

Dani Monroe, a Food Science event participant, loved being able to develop friendships and make connections during her time at State.

"I learned that you can prepare as best as you can and still go in there not knowing if you're going to do good," Monroe said. "It grows you as a person and you come together with people you never really thought that you could be best friends with and you get closer."

Monroe encourages anyone to get involved in FFA if they ever get the chance to.

According to Finch, the cost for taking part in Nationals will be around $1,000 per kid. This price includes airfare, hotel and food.

Ideas for fundraisers are currently in the works.

"We'll hopefully do a prime rib dinner and maybe a pig raffle," Finch said.

Pioneers lie in North Road Cemetery

The headstones the North Company Road are a "Who's Who" of early-"Who's day Leavenworth. Doctor, railroad man, saloon keeper, homesteader- all found their last resting place in this early burial spot.

Plotted by the Leavenworth Cemetery Association, headed by Petrel Davis of the Mill Co., the six acres for the first official cemetery here were purchased from M. F. Peake who had a brick-making yard nearby

The ground was laid out in 12 and 24-foot plots with a large center square, a long row of small plots to the right of the entrance along the property line, and a C-shaped line of large plots ringing the center square. On the plot recorded with the county, 30-foot street right-of-ways were permanently willed to the people who would use the cemetery.

Jane Mrs Cromwell, mother pioneer of а Chumstick Valley family, was laid to rest in the cemetery in January 1910. In 1911. Mrs. Mary Briskey, wife of another early homesteader, joined the growing number of those interred in this burial spot. A member of the prominent Iowa sawmilling family, who founded the Lamb-David Mill here, Lyman Lamb, died after moving his family to Cascade Orchards. Like Petrel Davis of the same firm, he did not live in his new surroundings a decade, before his death in 1913.

An old resident of the Beaver Creek Valley in the Lake Wenatchee area, A. E. Dickeson, was laid to rest in the cemetery after his death in 1915. A prospector and trapper who had come west in 1856, Mr. Dickeson settled on his homestead in 1889, and had reached his 80th birthday veterans, lie buried side by side beneath white crosses near other old timers of the area. Ole fought in the Spanish American War. He came to Leavenworth as a railroad electrician, then opened a saloon in pre-prohibition days. His wife, Rissie, and her father, George Hood, are buried in the same plot. George Hood was the operator of an early restaurant when railroad crews built through Leavenworth in 1893. Beryl, the son, was a World War II veteran.

COOKING WITH TERI

Happy Trail

By Teri Miller

Last week, I had the opportunity to meet up with my daughter Rachel and fellow riders that have been riding the John Wayne Trail. This is an annual event that starts in Easton and ends at the Idaho border. The trip is 18 days long and attracts horse riders, teamsters, and mountain bikers from all over the United States and Canada. My daughter did half of the ride last year with Morey Grosse and this year she is riding the entire 365 miles. The group varies between 150 to 200 riders at anyone time. The terrain varies from green forest, sage brush and the wheat fields of the Palouse. I meet up with Rachel in Warden where they had a rest day and helped replenish supplies. This trip is not for the faint at heart, as you need to take just about everything you need with you at the start of the trip.

Outside the main burial area at the upper end of the cemetery a "Potter's Field" was designated for the unknown and indigent. Almost at once it was put to use. Jerome Crick, a young round house worker, fell from the walkway across the top of the mill dam and drowned. Many weeks later his body was discovered, but no relatives for the young man were ever located. Undertaker Keating buried his body in the "Potters Fileld."

From summer of 1906 on, burials were made in the North Road Cemetery. At first, most were made along the entrance road to the right. Several young railroad men who died in mishaps are buried there, two girls with the same family name, and several infants.

August Gläeser, an old and respected resident, born in Germany and a resident here since the town began, was buried there in 1907. His wife, "Grandma" Glaeser, mother of Mrs. Emil Frank, and Mrs. Max Kringle joined her husband in death twentythree years later.

a few months prior to his death.

One small tombstone pays tribute to a lasting friendship. Partners and inseparable friends, these two men prospected the placer beds near Blewett for over twenty years and were seldom seen apart. When death separated the pair, John Heavner marked his friend's last resting place with the words, "John Johnson. Burned in the Overland Hotel. Erected by his old partner, J. F. Heavner.'

Other headstones in the cemetery bear a variety of inscriptions: "Gone Home," " In Memory of our Beloved Son," "Our Darling,", "Though lost to sight, still to memory dear."

Some 31 known veterans' graves are marked by white crosses. At least one Civil War soldier lies there. Isaac Elston, brother of Mrs. Charles Cromwell, saw service with the North as a member of a Minnesota regiment. Later, he homesteaded in our area, near his sister.

Father and son, Ole and Beryl Sands, both war

You need to have food and water for you and your horse. There are several places along the way that you can eat in a restaurant or buy food to prepare. Rachel is cooking on a camp stove. At Warden, we went into Moses Lake for dinner, laundry and a shower. I had prepared some meals ahead and took them over as well to use later.

Meeting up with this group was a great experience that I hope I can do again. The people, the camaraderie and the horses were awesome. In the short time, I was there I was impressed with the folks that do this trek through, wind, rain, heat and dust. It is very physically and mentally demanding but the riders are having a once in a life time experience, and creating memories and friendships they will cherish. I came home exhausted and I never even sat on a horse.

So this week I am sharing a recipe for you to prepare on your outdoor adventure. Enjoy!

Campfire Tacos

- 4 6 bags of corn chips or Doritos
- 1-2 cans good quality canned chili with beans
 - 1- cup shredded cheese
 - 1 -cup shredded lettuce
 - 1 tomato chopped
 - 1 small can chopped olives

Sour cream, taco sauce and chopped green onion if you like Heat canned chilli, open the bag of corn chips and spoon in the chili, layer the other ingredients on top of the chili. Serve in the bag and you will have no dishes to wash. Adults love these as much as kids. Enjoy!
