Bridgeport Daze parade route hits roadblock

BRIDGEPORT - Traffic control during the Bridgeport Daze parade came under scrutiny at the regular meeting of the city council June 19, when Public Works Superintendent Stuart Dezellem raised the growing issues of public safety and city liability during the event.

"Our community does not respect the Public Works Department; they do not respect the employees; they do not respect road closed barricades," said Dezellem. "It's gotten to the point where the person who is trying to close down the highway for a safe route for the parade just throws up his hands; he can't get the traffic to stop driving down the road, or cars to move off the highway."

Dezellem added that drivearounds don't just happen during the parade but also when street crews are making repairs and drivers disregard traffic cones put in place for the safety of workers. He suggested that more public education is in order.

Bridgeport moves forward on second reservoir

By MIKE MALTAIS STAFF WRITER

BRIDGEPORT - Mayor Janet Conklin, Public Works Superintendent Stuart Dezellem and City Clerk/Treasurer Judy Brown held a recent conference with the Washington Department of Fish and Wildlife (WDFW) regarding the process needed to acquire a parcel of real estate where the city can site a second reservoir

In a report to the city council June 19, Dezellem told members that the conference call was productive toward the city goal.

Dezellem said the city next needs to find "appropriate inkind real estate acre-for-acre on a market value comparison" to trade with WDFW.

Dezellem said he contacted a surveyor to begin the process of getting topographic and elevation details to help determine how much area the project will require.

"Our second reservoir needs an overflow elevation of 1,100 feet," said Dezellem. "Once we get the base elevation just to the south of the current reservoir, we'll figure out what size tank we need and that will determine how much area we need."

Dezellem believes two acres will be more than enough to accommodate the second reservoir.

Dezellem said Douglas County also needs to negotiate a property swap with WDFW for a project it has in the works so there is a possibility that the county and city might join efforts to complete both property transactions in one process.

Dezellem next addressed a potential funding source for each end of the detour. Dezellem added that a consideration for extra volunteers may be the need to have them complete a certified flagging course so they know the proper procedures and conduct to staff a closed street.

Dezellem recalled that the community used to be more cooperative during the parade but "during the last three or four years it's gotten to the point where there is no respect at all. He said that from a public works standpoint he no longer feels comfortable putting his name to the parade as it's now conducted.

Mayor Janet Conklin said that in the past when the city issued a parade permit, a liaison from the Chamber of Commerce met with either the mayor or a representative from the council to provide an update on what was going on with an event.

Chamber president Zeke Martinez spoke on behalf of the chamber and said the issues raised by Dezellem were the first he had heard indicating there is a problem.

Martinez said the chamber is willing to work with the city to correct the issues and offered several suggestions toward that end.

Council member Anthony Jenkins suggested one possible solution might be shortening the parade route by having the entries assemble closer to the downtown stretch of Columbia Avenue, perhaps at the base of the hill at the intersection of 13th Street and Columbia. Jenkins said the parade line could form on either side of intersection and shorten the parade to a half dozen blocks where most of the spectators

City consulting engineers Gray & Osborne advised Dezellem that the state Public Works Trust Fund (PWTF) is again taking applications for city projects.

Dezellem said PWTF funds are low-interest loans and some of the best money available outside of a grant. That's why so many small communities like Bridgeport relied on PWTF dollars for infrastructure projof an earlier PWTF loan. "In the last two bienniums the legislature robbed those dollars from the Public Works Trust Fund and haven't been able to fund any projects or even take an application," Dezellem said. Dezellem told the council the loan was a budget item and needed council approval to make application for funds to design the second reservoir.

"We're going to meet the same criteria we met in the previous application," said Dezellem. "Our average income is below the Douglas County median so I think we would be considered a financially distressed community."

Dezellem said the interest rate on a five-year loan is .79 percent and 1.58 on five to 20year money.

Since the reservoir needs to be designed before it can be put out for bid Dezellem recommended the city apply for PWTF money "just to keep this project moving down the road."

The deadline for what Dezellem called a simple fourquestion PWTF application is July 12.

In response to a question from Brown about the waterutility fund that would pay back the loan, Dezellem said the account is on sound footing and he expects to see a $1.4 to $1.5 million combined reserve so the city could service the PWTF loan for the second reservoir.

Council member Matthew Schuh made the motion to go forward with the PWTF application to unanimous approval.

Tim Taylor hangs up Bears basketball whistle

By Mike Maltais STAFF WRITER

BREWSTER - Bears varsity high school basketball coach Tim Taylor is hanging up his whistle after nearly two decades as the helm of the program compiling a career record of 415 wins and 94 losses. Taylor will be inducted into the Washington Interscholastic Basketball Coaches Association (WIBCA) Hall of Fame at its 44th annual banquet on Thursday, July 25, at the Wenatchee Convention

Taylor grew up in South Bend, Wash, and played basketball there for Hall of Game coaches Don Koplitz (1991) at South Bend and later Don Zech at the University of Puget Sound where Taylor attended

Taylor said he had heard of Brewster basketball when the Bears were compiling their 82-game win streak at the same time he was playing high school ball in 1A South Bend.

"I made the All-State team when I was a senior," said Taylor. "Dick Olson was the coach and Dale Smith was one of my teammates."

Another of Taylor's teammates at UPS was John Pariseau from Brewster. After college Taylor accepted Pariseau's invitation to help in the local apple harvest, "and I never left." Taylor said. Soon after he met his wife Sonya (Gebbers) and began coaching Brewster C basketball in 1996. Taylor took over as head coach the following year. He coached from 1997 through 2008 when he took a break for four years and had the chance to watch his son Michael and daughter Martha play college ball.

The Bears had two undefeated seasons and went to the state basketball playoffs five consecutive years under Taylor. "We played five straight title games and won three of them," Taylor said. "I don't think anybody's ever done that."

In a bio prepared for the WIBCA ceremony, Michael, who also served as the Bears assistant coach, notes that his father coached him and sons Stockton, Timbo and Joe during his Brewster tenure and

"had many bus trips with his two daughters, Martha and Becky Mae who played for the Brewster girls varsity."

Taylor also coached nine nephews and many family friends over the course of his 19-year career.

In his spare time now, Taylor said he likes to hit the links at Gamble Sands "several times a week."

Along with Taylor, the WIB-CA, founded in 1974, will induct Mike Carlquist who coached at Almira/Coulee-Hartline, Goldendale, Cashmere and Okanogan through his career. Chelan native Joe Harris, now playing for the Brooklyn Nets and reigning NBA three-point contest champion, will be presented with the Ed Pepple Service Award for his efforts to improve high school bas-

Volunteers help to unload wood stoves brought in for recycling

SUBMITTED BY DEPT. OF ECOLOGY

TWISP - It may be hot outside, but that didn't deter folks in Okanogan County from taking advantage of a cashback incentive to recycle old, smoky wood stoves earlier this month. At $250 per stove, limited to two stoves per customer, each person could claim up to $500!

Reducing wintertime air pollution is a priority in the county, where poor ventilation traps wood smoke in mountain valleys, often for days on end.

Our Air Quality Program in Central Washington teamed with Okanogan County, the Methow Valley Clean Air Project and the Okanogan River Airshed Partnership, to sponsor the collection event at the I'wisp Transfer Station and the county's Central Landfill, June 5-6.

The results: A total of 74 participants turned in 105 stoves, leading to a payout of $26,250! Translating to a potential reduction of over 2 tons of PM 2.5 emissions, the small particles in smoke that when inhaled lodge in our lungs and can cause respiratory damage.

Participants will receive payment by check in a few weeks, and also got some cool outreach goodies at the events. Additionally, all the stoves turned in will be recycled! Funding was made available through the Woodsmoke Reduction Grant Program to improve air quality in our state's most vulnerable regions.

Recent data shows Okanogan County residents are exposed to more smoke, due to wildfires and wood stoves, than people in any other county in the state. While we can't do much about wildfire smoke, it makes sense to reduce other sources of smoke and provide an incentive for cleaner burning alternatives, such as new stoves or switching to gas or electric heat.

Although this round of buybacks is over, everyone can make a difference. If you own a wood stove, burn only dry, seasoned wood, and consider replacing your older stove with a newer, more efficient model.

Homeowners can help reduce smoke emissions by composting and chipping instead of burning yard waste (which is illegal in urban growth areas throughout the state).

Please check out our community partner's pages. They helped by volunteering at this buyback, and are also working with us to sponsor future events and other programs. Use the links below to learn more about their mission and ways you can help keep the

Okanogan Democrats to meet

OMAK/TWISP - The Okanogan Democrats will be meeting at 12 Tribes Casino in Omak on Saturday, July 6, from 12:00 to 2:30 p.m. A simulcast will be held in Twisp at the Methow Valley Citizens Council office at 315 E Methow Valley Hwy. Monique Bourgeau will be the guest speaker. She is a recent graduate of the Institute for a Democratic Future where she brought an Okanogan perspective to the group of 32 fellows over the sixmonth intensive. Weekend trips throughout the state, a week in Olympia and five days in Washington DC helped Bourgeau build relationships and develop a network for progressive activism. She says; "We are all uniquely connected thru the universe and time to use our voices, hearts and minds to create change." Bourgeau's work at the Language House of Inchelium and her strong ties to Native traditions of storytelling contribute to her ability to articulate in a cultural context. As a Native, she hopes to bring an insightful voice to the climate change conversation. Roadway improvement work will create minor delays for travelers on Buttermilk Road

SUBMITTED BY USFS

TWISP - The Black Pine Lake area, located about 10 miles west of Twisp, Wash., is a popular place for people wanting to swim, boat, fish, camp, picnic, or hike. Road work may delay forest visitors when heading to this popular destination.

Starting June 21, forest visitors driving on Forest Service Road #43, also known as Buttermilk Road, may experience 30-minute delays while asphalt patching, roadside brush cutting, and culvert cleaning oc-

"The work will be occurring on a 2.4-mile segment of the road between mile posts 13.7 and 16.1," said Civil Engineering Technician David Colbert. "Depending upon weather conditions and other issues, such as wildfires, we anticipate this work will last up to 30 days."

"We recognize that many, many people will be using this area over the July 4 weekend, so no road work will occur during that time period," Colbert said.

Recreationists who do not want to experience delays may also access this site using Forest Service Road #43 from its beginning point about one mile south of the town of Carlton, Washing-

"This work is important in making roadways safe for forest users," Colbert said. "Roadside brushing improves sight distance for motorists. Culvert cleaning is critical as it reduces the likelihood of future runoff damage and road washouts. Asphalt patching helps extend the life of the road surface, plus drivers have the added comfort of driving on a smooth surface versus one with potholes."

This project was originally scheduled to occur in 2018, but was delayed due to wildfire activity in the area.

Agencies to begin second year of translocating mountain goats from Olympics to Cascades

SUBMITTED BY USFS

CHIKAMIN AREA - Starting July 8, a coalition of state and federal agencies, with support from local tribes, will begin the second twoweek round of translocating mountain goats from Olympic National Park and Olympic National Forest to the northern Cascade Mountains to meet wildlife management goals in all three areas.

This effort is a partnership between the National Park Service (NPS), the Washington Department of Fish & Wildlife (WDFW), and the USDA Forest Service (USFS) to re-establish and assist in connecting depleted populations of mountain goats in the Washington Cascades while also removing nonnative goats from the Olympic Mountains. Mountain goats were introduced to the Olympics in the 1920s.

"A project of this magnitude would be impossible without our partner agencies and the expertise and cooperation of hundreds of people," said Olympic National Park Wildlife Branch Chief Dr. Patti Happe. "The interagency collaboration and the support from everyone involved is extraordinary."

Area tribes lending support to the translocation plan in the Cascades include the Lummi, Muckleshoot, Sauk-Suiattle, Stillaguamish, Suquamish, Swinomish, Tulalip, and Upper Skagit tribes. Volunteers from the Point No Point Treaty Council, Quileute Tribe, Quinault Indian Nation, Skokomish Indian Tribe, and Port Gamble S'Klallam Tribe will also be assisting at the staging areas in the Olympics.

In May 2018, the NPS released the final Mountain Goat Management Plan which outlined the effort to remove mountain goats on the Olympic Peninsula. The population of mountain goats at that time was estimated at 725. Both the plan and the associated environmental impact statement were finalized after an extensive public review process which began in 2014.

The first two-week capture period in September 2018 removed 115 mountain goats from the population in the park. An additional twoweek period is planned for this year beginning August 19 through 30.

"Mountain goat relocation will allow these animals to reoccupy historical range areas in the Cascades and increase population viability, said Jesse Plumage, USFS Wildlife Biologist.

While some mountain goat populations in the north Cascades have recovered since the 1990s, the species is still absent from many areas of its historic range.

Aerial capture operations will be conducted through a contract with Leading Edge Aviation, a private company that specializes in the capture and transport of wild animals. The helicopter crew will use immobilizing darts and net guns to capture mountain goats and transport them in specially made slings to the staging areas.

While capture operations will be conducted throughout the park and national forest for both two-week periods, a few locations that are known to have a high number of mountain goats will be areas of focus for the capture crew. On the first two days of the capture period, the emphasis will be on the Klahhane Ridge and Appleton Pass areas. The Seven Lakes Basin area and the Lake of the Angels area in the southeast have a high number of mountain goats that the capture crew will be working to remove. In August, Mount Ellinor in Olympic National Forest will be an area of focus.

This year there will be two staging areas for each two-week period. For July and August, one staging area will be located on Hurricane Hill Road beyond the Hurricane Ridge Visitor Center in Olympic National Park. The other staging area will be located in Olympic National Forest in the Hamma Hamma area in July and switch to the Mt. Ellinor area in August. The staging areas will be closed to public access.

The animals will be cared for by veterinarians before WDFW wildlife managers transport them to staging areas in the north Cascades for release. To maximize success, goats will be airlifted in their crates by helicopter directly to alpine habitats that have been selected for appropriate characteristics.

Release sites

WDFW plans to release the mountain goats at six sites in the Cascades in July. Three of the release sites will be staged from the Mt. Baker-Snoqualmie National Forest (MBS). These release sites include the Chikamin area on the Okanogan-Wenatchee National Forest, Preacher Mountain on the MBS, and Hardscrabble Ridge on an inholding owned by Forterra. Two release areas are near mountain peaks south of the town of Darrington on the Darrington District of the MBS. The other is near Mt. Index on the Skykomish Ranger District of the MBS.

Mountain goats follow and approach hikers because they are attracted to the salt from their sweat, urine, and food. That behavior is less likely in the north Cascades where visitors are more widely distributed than those at Olympic National Park, said Dr. Rich Harris, a WDFW wildlife manager who specializes in mountain goats.

"In addition, the north Cascades has natural salt licks, while the Olympic Peninsula has virtually none," Harris said. "We'd expect salt hunger to be lower in goats that have natural sources available to them."

Trail Impacts and Road Closures

Hurricane Hill Road, beyond the Hurricane Ridge Visitor Center parking lot, will be closed to all access during both operational periods. Hurricane Hill Road will remain open up to Picnic Area A on July 5 and July 6 during the setup of the staging area. The road will then be closed completely beyond the Hurricane Ridge Visitor Center from July 7 through 20 for mobilization, capture operations, and demobiliza-

This closure includes the Hurricane Hill Trail, Little River Trail, and Wolf Creek Trail. The Klahhane Ridge area will close temporarily on July 8 and 9 for visitor and employee safety during capture operations. The area of Seven Lakes Basin/High Divide/ Heart Lake/ Hoh Lake/ to Cat Basin will be closed to hiking and overnight camping July 7 through 11. The area of Lake of the Angels, accessed from Putvin Trail #813 off Forest Road 25 in Olympic National Forest, will be closed at mile 3 at the park boundary from July 9 through July 18.

For the July release operations on the Mt. Baker-Snoqualmie National Forest, land adjacent to the roadway at the junctions of Forest Service Roads 49 and 4920 will be closed from July 9 through July 21, 2019.

For the August capture operations, the Mount Ellinor trails system and Forest Road 2419 to Mount Ellinor, as well as Forest Road 2464 leading to Forest Road 2419, will be closed to the public starting the evening of August 18 until the morning of August 30.

For more information about mountain goats in Washington State, see WDFW's website at https://wdfw.wa.gov/ species-habitats/species/ oreamnos-americanus.

Bribery being used to win 2020 presidency

Every Democrat presidential candidate has vowed to seek reparations for the descendants of American slaves, which may cost, let's guess, $1 billion dollars. This "solemn pledge," this litmus test for all Democrat candidates, is an outright attempt at bribing the African-American population, which usually votes for a Democrat anyway, to vote in even greater numbers as now there is money to be had adding motivation.

Money in a voter's pocket has always been the magic platform wand used to militate the base of both political parties.

As if that wasn't bad enough as an example of overt moral corruptness, how about the attempt on television last week to promise every illegal alien the same rights as actual American citizens?

Shameful for any politician to make these pledges, but even worse is the completely over the top national audience display of pandering to the entire Hispanic community.

Each candidate kept upping the ante on how incredibly nice they would be the all Latinos if only they became president.

They might as well have been screaming the benefits in a Spanish rap song, "Yo soy es mas beneficioso todos familia, Yo soy, yo soy!" meaning I am the most beneficial to families, I am, I am!

The promises kept coming as each wanna-be president shouted bigger and better benefits if only they were chosen by this majority-minority voter's block.

Democrats are shameless in their begging, but the worst part is, the benefits promised to illegal immigrants will cost far more than a mere one-time "reparations" payment to our recently co-opted minority -Blacks.

One billion dollars will look like chicken feed once the bill is tallied for all the promises of free education, free housing, free food, free health care and free rights as if to say, "you crossed the border illegally, but don't worry about it."

an expenditure they didn't like, but these promises will bankrupt our nation into Third World status.

'We'll just raise the taxes on "rich people" is the common mantra coming from the Left. Let's just guess at the potential cost of this kissing butt from the Left: $1 trillion is my guess. That's because this isn't a one-time payment, but a never ending so-called entitlement.

How to help senior skin heal

Caroline, 89 years old, fell on her left side on the steps to her home while returning from church two weeks ago. The emergency department nurses put Steri-Strips® across it and told her to "keep it clean". Yesterday she showed me a deep red 4-inch long open area on her left forearm oozing clear fluid, and asked me, "Why isn't it healing?"

"What have you been using on it?"

"I clean it with peroxide twice a day, and put a bandage over it at night to protect my sheets. Why it isn't healing? Is it because I'm older, or on a blood

"No, not necessarily." "But I'm keeping it nice and clean. Isn't that what hydrogen peroxide is supposed to do?

"Cleaning your skin using hydrogen peroxide works fine unless it's scraped, cut or skinned off. After that, using hydrogen peroxide to clean your wound creates a problem. Hydrogen peroxide interferes with bacterial growth along with any other new tissue trying to grow.

Every time you clean a wound with peroxide you're poisoning your all new cells trying to heal it. That's why it's not healing."

"Should I use rubbing alcohol, instead?"

because using rubbing alcohol on cuts or open wounds isn't any better than using hydrogen peroxide. Rubbing alcohol doesn't clean wounds any better than plain or soapy water, but it sure can cause problems. There are two types of rubbing alcohol you can buy in the store, ethyl alcohol and isopropyl alcohol. Both of them can clean intact skin, but if you use them to clean open cuts or wounds not only do they burn like fire, they actually damage your skin and tissue cells, interfering with and slowing down your healing process."

Our skin becomes more fragile as we age, with seniors finding that, when they scrape their arm or shin on something, instead of creating an abrasion, the top layer of their skin peels

If your cut or scrape is deep or bleeding you should profusely, seek immediate medical attention. Otherwise, you can usually treat a simple skin tear successfully by using pressure to stop the bleeding, cleaning it using plain water, and applying moist, transparent dressing.

To aid wound healing, a little moisture is a good thing. For skin that rips easily, a thin transparent dressing like Tegaderm® often works amazingly well. Cleaning well at the time of the injury, then using a transparent dressing over the injured area can actually save that "peeled back" layer of skin and speed the healing process.

Tegaderm® and other special dressings available in most pharmacies and in all medical supply

> 7 Steps to Speed Up Healing Skin Tears:

1. Clean by flushing with plain or soapy water.

Avoid using chemicals like hydrogen peroxide or rubbing alcohol to wounds; they don't clean or disinfect any better than plain water or soapy water, and can instead damage the exposed tissue.

2. Apply direct pressure with gauze or towel to control bleeding.

Apply pressure with gauze or a towel over for least a minute. Resist the temptation to peek because this lets up on the pressure, allowing it to continue to bleed. Direct pressure jumpstarts your clotting factors to stop bleeding more quickly, but applying cold packs and elevating the arm or leg can also help.

3. Lay any ripped skin layer back down, matching the edges as best you can. This prevents creating an open wound, which takes 3 to 4 times as long to heal. If the skin flap is still attached, laying the skin back down where it ripped from will often heal beautifully, without scarring.

4. Cover with a transparent dressing like Tegaderm®.

This type of dressing keeps the skin flap in place, protects it from dirt and bacteria, and keeps it moist, promoting healing.

5. Wear the transparent dressing for at least 2 to 3 days before changing it.

Unless you see lots of blood or fluid pooling underneath, don't remove the transparent dressing for several days. Slowly peel off the old dressing, pat the area gently with clean gauze or towel if needed to blot away excess fluid or blood.

6. Add loosely wrapped gauze if needed to protect from being bumped.

Wrap gauze loosely for padding to provide protection for forearms, elbows or shins that can bump into things.

7. If your wound isn't healing normally, seek medical attention.

If you notice pus or excessive fluid or collecting under the dressing, or it becomes painful, seek medical attention. You may need stitches or an warm, but many locations can get quite chilly at night. Since the bulk of the time you'll be spending in your sleeping bag and tent is after the sun's gone down and temperatures take a nose dive, it's important to ensure these items are designed to keep you comfortable in the chilliest temperatures you expect to encounter. Likewise, you will probably do most of your hiking, kayaking and other active pastimes during the hotter parts of the day. Be sure you pack equipment and clothing for both of these extremes. • Get there early: Some sites have a first-come, first-served policy, making an early arrival a necessity.

However, even if you reserve a site in advance, you'll still want to make good time and get there before sunset. This can help ensure you get a good lay of the land so that you can pitch your tent on level ground that's free of extraneous debris which will make sleeping uncomfortable. It's also a good way to ensure you get all your items unpacked and organized so you know where everything is. Finally, if you only have a couple nights to camp, you don't want to miss even one spectacular sunset stuck in traffic.

With a few strategies and tools, you can make Great Outdoors Month the greatest yet.
