Trejo to serve second Full field turns out for Pateros Chamber year as a member of of Commerce Golf Tournament WIAA's LEAP

BY MIKE MALTAIS, STAFF WRITER

BRIDGEPORT - For only the second time since 2009, a Quad City area high student is serving on the Washington Interscholastic Activities Association's (WIAA) statewide LEAP Committee. LEAP, for Leadership through Education Activities and Personal Development, is comprised of eight seniors and seven juniors representing the WIAA's classifications, from 1B through 4A, and nine districts.

Bridgeport High School senior Ana Trejo is one among 17 committee members representing morel than 225,000 student participants in the state.

"We meet a few times a year and discuss topics concerning student involvement in extra curriculars," said Trejo. "The other LEAP members and I essentially represent all Washington high schoolers on the WIAA."

Trejo is the only Quad City student to serve on the LEAP Committee since Bridgeport student Gloria Alameda was a member in 2014. Trejo was chosen during her junior to serve a two-year term that she will complete in the coming academic year. Trejo is also the BHS Associated Student Body (ASB) President this year following her office as ASB Secretary last term.

"I'm the president of my FFA chapter this upcoming school year and was the District Seven president last year," Trejo said.

Bridgeport High School senior Ana Trejo will serve her second year as a member of the WIAA's LEAP (Leadership through Education Activities and Personal Development) Committee.

Applicants for the LEAP Committee undergo an extensive evaluation process. In addition to an online application, students are required to provide letters of recommendation, an essay of why athletics and activities are important, plus a video about their school and why they should be chosen.

Trejo's senior peers include students from Shadle Park, Garfield, Spanaway, North Thurston, Renton, PATEROS - One of the local area's big sports events of the summer, the Pateros Chamber of Commerce Golf Tournament was held on Saturday, June 29, at the Alta Lake Golf Resort.

"We had a full field of teams, 17 in total, 68 players turn out," resort co-owner Leigh Anne Barth said.

The four-man, best-ball format began with a 1 p.m. shotgun start and included a hole-in-one-competition. and long drive/KP contest, and team prizes. Local wine tasting, silent auction, and team swag helped fill the schedule when teams were not on the links.

The winning team of Tony Block, Brian Condon, Tom Cox, and Zach Myers shot 14 under par to take first place.

Tournament sponsors included MVM Well Drilling, Zoretic Law, and Alta Cellars.

OKANOGAN - The Okanogan County Commissioners and members of the Okanogan County Fair Advisory Committee met last Monday, July 9, to discuss the welcome topic of how to channel $80,000 in grant funds awarded to the Fair by the Washington State Department of Agriculture (WSDA) last month.

Commissioner Andy Hover submitted two grant applications for capital improvement funds for upgrades to the fairgrounds and structures. One of those, a request to WSDA for $100,000 in matching funds, was approved in the amount of $80,000. The WSDA application requested funds to replace the running rail along the horse racing track, the rodeo arena, bucking and roping chutes, and construct a small grandstand and a 20-stall horse barn.

Hover stressed that the funds approved were under a safety grant that require Trejo said she has been able to apply some of what she has learned to activities at her school.

"I have borrowed ideas concerning homecoming week such as different spirit days or assembly activities," said Trejo. "Being on the committee has even changed the way I approach other students.'

Trejo participated in soccer, basketball and track during her freshman year, dropped soccer in favor of cross country as a sophomore and junior and will pursue basketball, cross country and track as a senior.

"I am on track to graduate WVC with my AA during next spring," said Trejo. "My GPA at the end of my junior year was a 4.0, however my cumulative is a 3.92."

Trejo is on her school's Honor Roll and is a member of the National Honor Society and has her eyes on some colleges on the East Coast.

"Last summer I was representative for Washington state at the Washington Journalism and Media Conference at George Mason University in Fairfax, Virginia.

BY MIKE MALTAIS STAFF WRITER

BREWSTER-Several new attractions lead the list of things to see at the Fort Okanogan Interpretive Center located near the junction of highways 17 and 174 east of Brewster.

Director Kristen Heidenthal said a new addition to the exhibits is a detailed history of the architectural firm and building contractor responsible for designing and erecting the Interpretive Center in 1959-60

groups as to how their money

"They shrunk down the amount of money," said Hover of the WSDA grant, "but I'm not willing to just throw everything into one of these pieces because there are multiple interests here and I want to make sure that the grant that we wrote is representative of what we do."

Tunk Creek resident Andy Ade, who has 30 years of government contracting experience, presented a three-phase barn construction to the meeting to provide a rough estimate of site preparation, permit and building costs for an 80-foot by 120-foot covered barn with 24 stalls. Ade itemized the component services that must be considered. "It's not just the building; there's a lot of costs that come into that as far as permits, electrical, water," Ade said. "As long as you stay within 200 feet of the transformer on the north end, they can handle that," Ade said of the PUD hookup. "Anything beyond that and the price goes up considerably."

Hover said he has consulted with outside sources about rail kits and materials and approved grandstand features.

The discussion ranged from the barn's proposed location at the north end of the arena complex to the size and cost of the structure and what uses it would accommodate.

FAC member Sam Buchert said the Team Penners were not specific as to how their contribution was used so long as the group has a plan.

Sandy Buzzard representing the Boots and Saddles Club said if there was a nice facility with some stalls "we could start doing some race activities that bring people in."

Hover said that while the roup has less than a year to get the projects done, once the group nails down a plan then work can begin on permit acquisitions, site studies, and other requirements.

"From doing an application for the National Register and State Register, we did a lot or research and that's how this exhibit came to be," Heidenthal said.

The Interpretive Center was listed on the Washington State Register of Historic Place on March 8 this year and the official certificate designating the recognition hangs near the entry door. Heidenthal said she expects to hear from the National Register of Historic Places in a month of two.

Other exhibits include paintings for sale by Colville tribal artist Ric Gendron and works by Colville painter, sculptor, photographer and mixed-media artist Joe Feddersen.

Among new artifacts on display is a vintage cradleboard donated to the museum from the collection of the late Nat Washington, a Washington of the Seattle architectural firm Durham, Anderson & Freed designed the Interpretive Center; a vintage cradleboard from the collection of the late Nat Washington, a Washington state legislator from Ephrata, is a new addition to the museum display; T.A. Hermans of Hanson and Hermans Construction in Soap Lake was hired to build the fort Okanogan Center in 1959; rock images or petroglyphs are among the new displays at the Fort Okanogan Interpretive Center; and this chute gate from the dismantled Monse rodeo arena was a recent donation to the Interpretive Center by Mike Jones of Malott.

A new outdoor rock image or petroglyph display with interpretive panel and sheltered under a bright yellow lean-to sits near the path that leads to the Center's picnic area.

A recent donation from Malott resident Mike Jones of a bucking chute gate from the original Monse rodeo grounds prompted Heidenthal to apply for grant funds to add an interpretive panel to the piece.

Heidenthal said she is interested in gathering more information and possibly some photographs about old Monse and welcomes feedback from area residents who have details to share. She can be contacted at (509) 689-6665 or email kristen.

heidenthal@colvilletribes.

Arnold Cleveland, a Wenatchi band descendent and Colville Confederated Tribes member will highlight the end-of-season program on Sept. 29, with stories about growing up on and off the reservation.

With some research assignments and input from the funding interests, the group adjourned to consider the next steps in the process. The Fair Advisory Committee meets at 6 p.m. on the second Thursday of every month in the Commissioners hearing room.

Beware of contract slavery

"Freedom at Last" as three teachers were enjoying their coffee in Wenatchee shouted when the Supreme Court ruling concerning compulsory union WEA and agency dues was considered a violation of the First Amendment. This decision directly affects every teacher and employee who belongs to the WEA. No union dues would be subsidizing the Washington State Democratic party for those candidates and policies that directly affect their deeply held religious principles and values in violation of their First Amendment rights, relating to "compelled Speech."

There is no doubt there will be fewer WEA members after this decision. Teachers can opt out of the WEA immediately. Of course, the WEA will throw up all sorts of road blocks, such that they cannot accept a resignation from the union unless the school WEA representative is part of the process, and then "slow walk" the request to the State WEA who have their own set of "moon walking" behavior patterns. New teachers will be faced with a WEA contract who do not understand the significance of this momentous decision. Beware of the small print if you elect to join the union on your application. You have signed a contract that is legally binding for your entire teaching career in Washington state as a union member that prevents you fom withdrawing from the union at a later date. This is known as "contract slavery." You may resign from the union but they collect the dues from your paycheck. The Washington state SEICU is a mastee of this technique. Govenor "sleepy" Insley is working with oter labor unions to guarantee union dues from evey government worker by legislative initiative thru the Democratic

House and Senate. Just say "No" to the WEA representative at your school district when that issue of union dues is approached. Too often teachers and other government employees don't read the fine print, only learn later that they have signed away their First Amendment rights forever.

For those with an "agency shop" agreement wit the WEA, these individuals do not have to pay any WEA union dues whatsoever. Send a certified letter, and hold a duplicate copy, requesting that no WEA fees be deducted from their paycheck, and cite the most recent Supreme Court decision concerning "compelled speech" as a reason for your letter to the WEA. Send a cc to the Cascade or Cashmere school district HR section of your intentions.

If you are still having problems with the WEA, contact Washington Freedom Foundation, by phone or mail who may act on you behalf within the legal system.

The next case to hit the Supreme Court will be "compelled speech" in the private sector with union sometime in 2019.

Publisher twists the facts

In his latest editorial, "Facts trumped by crying babies." the Echo publisher began by labeling as "factually flawed" the recent Time Magazine cover that showed Donald Trump looming over a crving toddler. The articles that followed in Time outlined the controversy over the Trump administration's policy that has separated more than 2.000 children from their families at the U.S. border with Mexico. Most of these families are from El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, and other Central American countries.

The publisher claimed that since the child on the Time cover was never separated from her mother, the cover was an example of "fake news." The cover has inspired outrage, he wrote, by the "Trump Derangement Syndrome crowd," which "rarely" bothers to "examine the facts of any issue." Fact: Time Magazine never claimed that the child was separated from her mother. If the publisher had bothered to examine the facts, he would have found a clear explanation of the child's situation on page four of the magazine.

The publisher claimed that the parents whose children have been taken from them "have committed a crime by crossing into this country illegally." Fact: Most of these families seek asylum from domestic abuse and/or gang violence. Seeking asylum from violence is not a crime; it is a human right.

The publisher's rant diverged into a potpourri of subjects, from Stormy Daniels to Hillary Clinton's emails (can't miss that one). More of his claims:

-- "The voters have chosen to elect [Trump]." Fact: Voters nationwide chose Hillary Clinton over Trump by more than two million votes in 2016.

-- "[T]he anti-Trump media has (sic) fanned the flames of emotional unrest over ripping children from their mother's (sic) arms." Fact: It is Trump's policy of separating families, and not media reporting, that has created this controversy.

The publisher's most outrageous statement: Those he cleverly calls the "TDS crowd" don't "care about compassion for immigrant children." How dare he claim to know what millions across this county care about. Fact: According to polls by CBS, CNN, Reuters and others, two-thirds of Americans oppose Trump's policy of separating immigrant families. Fact: The children stolen and still separated from their families have been scarred for life.

Fact: The New York Times reported that according to officials of multiple agencies involved, when the Trump administration devised its "no tolerance policy" to separate families at the border, "[t] here was no system set up beforehand to link families and no plan on how to bring them back together." Where are the children and their families? This is a national tragedy.

On June 30 in Wenatchee, we joined millions of people across this country to express our grief and outrage at the national disgrace created by Donald Trump. This was our simple collective statement of fact: families belong together.

There will be riots in the streets

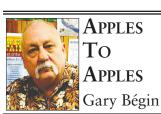

Part Two

Last week I mentioned how I thought both the extreme left and extreme right will basically beat each other up as they riot in the streets of urban America, but most rural folk won't really care and they will remain conservative as they have been for decades, even if the cities catch fire.

I am making the basic assumption that the cities are filled with leftist liberals anyway and that means the Democrats control them.

I said these riots would happen because of the Trumpkept promises of appointing conservative judges to SCO-TUS as well as his immigration and other policies.

BTW, I voted for Trump, but I will not participate in riots

It means nothing to me who runs the country as long as the Constitution is respected and the garbage truck shows up on time and the various promised obligations of the government are fulfilled such as the mail delivery, a standing army, gun rights and a short list of other essentials.

If you don't vote in August (primaries) or November then you are part of whatever problem you are complaining about. If your solution is to riot, then you belong in jail, but that won't stop the frustrated from rioting anyway.

If you didn't vote then you get what you get and that person must be respected. If you voted and your side lost too bad. Your party didn't do its job so change your leadership and try again in the next election.

When you were a kid, did you throw a temper tantrum if you lost a game of parcheesi? The adult within screams at you now to learn to play better and bide your time.

Can the college kids do this? I doubt it. Can the minorities stop their righteous indignation from manifesting itself as violent acts? I doubt it. Thus, we will have riots and counter riots.

on the minds of farmers were

Stay indoors and protect yourselves if you live in a city or just ignore the rest of America if you live in the country. It has always been thus. Polarization is a part of the problem and will continue to be so as long as we keep electing polarizing figures. That sounds like a no-brainer, but it is also difficult to stop from happening every two and four years.

Speaking of which, President Trump already has a new Supreme Court nominee to replace Justice Kennedy and this new appointee will be rushed through the process and be serving before anyone tries to impeach Trump. Probably even before the November election.

Hopefully this new person will be against Roe v Wade and that's all I care about. That's right One reason I voted for Trump is to destroy Roe v Wade just like Roe v Wade destroys babies.

Television and radio talk shows love to cite statistics, especially polls, to explain why 69 percent of Americans believe in leaving Roe v Wade as is and so that must be the right answer. That must be the "choice" of Americans, when in fact, it all depends whom you ask and under what situations their lives happen to be in at the time of the asking.

We, as a people, don't give adults the right to choose to kill other adults without consequences, but apparently it is okay to kill those with no voice to defend themselves?

I, like so many millions of evangelical Christians, believe this crazy fox with orange hair and a New York attitude aka, Donald Trump, was sent by God to rid us of Roe. Now this concept is coming to fruition.

I will gladly trade 11 million immigrants for 11 million new American babies.

Roe gives us the right to kill the unborn, but not even animals do that and hopefully, we are above the animal phase of our existence.

U.S. Agriculture Secretary hears our Central Washington farmers

I was delighted and honored that the 31st U.S. Secretary of Agriculture, Sonny Perdue, accepted my invitation to travel to Central Washington last week to hear questions and concerns from farmers and ranchers. Secretary Perdue showed himself to be very knowledgeable while answering questions from me and farmers in our area on how the Administration's policies are impacting them, and I appreciated him taking the time to engage with the agriculture community in the trade, agriculture labor, sensible food safety regulation, and an adequate water supply. In the Tri-Cities, at a breakfast hosted by the Washington Farm Bureau, Secretary Perdue fielded a question on how to tell the story of how important a reliable water supply is for our area. Secretary Perdue encouraged farmers to engage in a positive way to show people who may not understand the extent to which water is the lifeblood of our agriculture region and that we farm in a sustainable way. He made a great point that as fewer and fewer Americans are engaged in agriculture, the need arises to educate the public on what it takes to produce safe, abundant, and nutritious food for Americans. Asked about H-2A reform to make the legal agriculture workforce program work better, Secretary Perdue agreed that H-2A is cumbersome and pointed out that legislative reform is the best way to get that done, which is an effort I continue to push in Congress. Secretary added that USDA is also taking a "double track" approach to improve the H-2A process administratively and through better regulation. working with other agencies to be a "friendly face for farmers" to meet their needs. Secretary Perdue was cheered when making the point that farmers want to comply with federal regulations, but there are so many overlapping agencies charged with enforcing competing rules that compliance can be difficult. He sees the necessity of reforming agencies and rules to be more efficient to improve the ability of farmers to follow the law.

Secretary Perdue responded to a question saying that the Administration is actively working on measures to mitigate trade disruption that impacts agricul ture as the Administration keeps the pressure on China and other countries. He made clear that the President does not expect farmers to bear the brunt of trade policies, but he is willing to put other countries on notice. I will continue to advocate for the Administration to address this matter effectively. It was encouraging to hear from Secretary Perdue, showing that this is certainly a highlyengaged Administration that is paying close attention to the concerns of farmers and ranchers in Central Washington.

Newhouse statement on visit to southern border

SUNNYSIDE – Rep. Dan Newhouse (R-WA) released the following statement after touring the Southern U.S. border near McAllen, Texas and briefings by U.S. Customs and Border Protection (CBP) and U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) on Friday, June 29 and Saturday, June 30: "My tour of the Southern border to learn more about how federal agencies enforce our nation's immigration laws and the challenges they face every day was eye-opening," said Rep. Newhouse. "I heard compelling stories about how hard federal officers work to enforce the law for the protection of the American people as well as the well-being of immigrants.

Not only do these enforcement professionals need more technology, infrastructure, and personnel, but they need Congress to update our broken immigration system, which currently encourages illegal immigration. A whole-of-government approach is required to address every aspect of the crisis on our Southern border: from working with countries from which migrants leave to increasing border security to humane enforcement of the laws. After my tour, I am as determined as ever that border security and immigration reform must go hand-in-hand, which requires both sides of the debate to come to a legislative compromise."

Morris wants to be your Douglas County Sheriff

BY GARY BÉGIN

The Wenatchee Business Journal recently interviewed Douglas County Sheriff candidate Kevin Morris about why he wants to be elected as the next sheriff. He currently serves as the Undersheriff, but longtime Sheriff Harvey Gjesdale is retiring so he wants to step up.

Here is what Morris had to say about various subjects:

Wenatchee Business Journal: Why do you want the responsibility of managing a branch of government that impacts everybody on a daily basis?

Kevin Morris: I have spent my entire adult life serving our country and our community, from the U.S. Navy to local law enforcement. I am driven to continue to serve and protect. I have the experience, education, and knowledge it takes to continue to lead this amazing agency. In my current position as Undersheriff, I have been given the opportunity to test my abilities and continue to grow with amazing support and significant success.

WBJ: What drug problem or violent crime against fellow citizens is your focus going to be on if you win?

Morris: In the recent years we have seen a rise in Fentanvl, heroin, sexual assault and mental health problems. We have been working hard to address these issues through training, partnerships and open communication with our local mental health agency, advocacy programs, schools and drug task force(s). If elected I will continue to build upon and maintain our strong communication and relationships with all of our resources to ensure we can provide the very best in public safety.

WBJ: Does Douglas County have specific law enforcement issues unique to it or are we just average in most criminal categories?

Morris: Douglas County faces the same challenges as our neighbors do, which is one of the many reasons we maintain such a strong relationship with all of our public safety partners. Communication and cooperation with our about teamwork, communication and hard work. I fully believe in leading by example. I often use the phrase influential leadership versus positional leadership. To me the difference is key. A positional leader simply directs someone using their "position" as the motivating factor for compliance. An influential leader builds direction through teamwork and communication. This type of leadership embraces all who are involved, utilizing their experiences and expertise to help make the very best decisions. At the end of the day the Sheriff does make the final decision, but it is important to understand the process in getting to that decision and the success of its outcome relies on the people asked to perform.

WBJ: Will you make efforts at empowering the Hispanic community so more cooperation is given to the DCSO?

Morris: I will make every effort to continue to empower all of our citizens. With over 1,800 square miles and only 30 commissioned deputies, we often rely on our citizens to act as our eyes and ears. It is imperative our citizens feel comfortable, safe and trust their Sheriff's office. We accomplish this through transparency, approachability, and involvement.

WBJ: Does the DCSO already have a number of bilingual officers and an outreach program?

Morris: We do have several bilingual deputies and many more who may not be considered bilingual, but can communicate quite well through their own efforts to learn Spanish. I am confident these deputies have worked hard to learn this second language not only to make their job easier, but to embrace their community.

WBJ: Are there areas where you feel improvements can be made at the DCSO whether in enforcement or education of the public or in personnel?

Morris: I am very proud of this Sheriff's Office. I have over 23 years of Law Enforcement experience, 18 of those years have been with this Sheriff's Office. During my time here, I have served as a road deputy, Sergeant and now the Undersheriff, which is second in command. I know first hand the efforts taken to constantly improve and grow over the years. I believe any profession requires the constant drive to push forward and improve as improvements are needed. As Sheriff I will make sure we never become content, but rather constantly looking forward and staying open to change.

WBJ: Tell the readers about your life in law enforcement and any particular incidents or cases that may have motivated or even upset you?

Morris: I was born and raised in Brewster Washington. I graduated from Brewster High School in 1991 and enlisted into the United States Navy and served aboard the aircraft carrier USS Saratoga in the Mediterranean. I started my law enforcement career in Brewster in 1994 as a Brewster Reserve Police Officer and was hired as a full time Brewster Police Officer in 1995.

I also worked in the community as an assistant High School Track and Field coach for the Brewster School District. In 2014 I was appointed as the Undersheriff (second in command) and oversee the Administration Division managing the budget, assets, grant preparation, contracts and the emergency management program.

I have dedicated my life to service and duty and have embraced the county and the role of the Sheriff's Office in improving the quality of life for its citizens through public safety. I am well versed in the depth and scope of the office of Sheriff and am is eager to continue my service to the

Leeon Leyde wants to be Douglas County Sheriff

By Gary Bégin

With the retirement of longtime Douglas County Sheriff Harvey Gjesdal, Douglas County Sheriff candidate Leeon Leyde is looking to move up.

The 54-year-old single dad has spent most of career with the Washington State Patrol and is currently with the Wenatchee Police Department.

Wenatchee Business Journal Managing Editor Gary Bégin interviewed Leyde recently and this is what he had to say in response to various questions:

Wenatchee Business Journal: Why do you want the responsibility of managing a branch of government that impacts everybody on a daily basis?

Leyde: Being the Sheriff is a huge responsibility and should not be taken lightly. Being the chief law enforcement officer, the county demands a leader with a vast amount of experience. My experience has been diverse. State law enforcement, local law enforcement coupled with college level training and law enforcement management.

WBJ: Are you backing any candidate for judge?

Leyde: Since I am seeking the office of sheriff, I cannot recommend any candidate for judge. I would be working with judges and the judicial system frequently and therefore could not make a recommendation at this time.

WBJ: What drug problem or violent crime against fellow citizens is your focus going to be on if you win?

Leyde: Opioid addiction is a major concern and problem in our county as well as all over the country. One of my platforms is to place a deputy into the Columbia River Drug Task Force. Since 2005, the current administration elected not to assign a detective to the Columbia River Drug Task Force. The city of East Wenatchee, Wenatchee, Chelan County Sheriff's Office and the Washington State Patrol have been participating and continue to support the Task Force. Last year there were only six cases in Douglas County generated by the Columbia River Drug Task Force. With a proactive approach, the citizens of Douglas County will see a decrease in crimes that are drug addiction driven, such as vehicle prowls and burglaries. WBJ: Does Douglas County have specific law enforcement issues unique to it or are we just average in most criminal categories?

Leeon Leyde

Sheriff's Office does participate in major crimes that occur in Chelan and Douglas County. We are fortunate to live in an area where major crimes are few and far between.

Leyde: I have received many honors in my career as a law enforcement officer, including receipt of the Law Enforcement Medal of Valor while a member of the East Wenatchee Police Department and three time recipient of the Chelan/Douglas County Traffic Safety award for Top DUI Officer while a member of the East Wenatchee Police Department. Too many times I have seen what domestic violence, drugs and other factors have played in the needless suffering of so many who live in our county. Again, this is why I am passionate about getting a member of the Douglas County Sheriff's office back into the Columbia River Drug Task Force.

The hardest thing that I have ever had to do in my professional career is go into someone's home and tell them one of their loved ones was killed in a traffic accident. I still remember each one like it was yesterday. No one should have to hear those words spoken.

WBJ: What is your management method in regards to subordinates?

Leyde: I am not a micromanager. The sheriff's office personnel are motivated and well qualified to do their jobs. I will expect personnel under my administration to interact with the public professionally and respectfully. The citizens of Douglas County are our eyes and ears to what is happening in our county. I expect all of us to be held accountable for our actions or failure to act. WBJ: Will you make efforts at empowering the Hispanic community so more cooperation is given to the DCSO?

Leyde: If anyone wants to be more involved in assisting our office, I would be more than happy to bring them on board in our quest for a better Douglas County. There are several Hispanic deputies and I would encourage their involvement with the Hispanic community. They would have my full support.

WBJ: Are there areas where you feel improvements can be made at the DCSO whether in enforcement or education of the public or in personnel?

Leyde: My campaign platform has several critical issues I wish to address. Protecting your schools, Constitutional Rights and safety within our community are just a few. Right now protecting our schools is at the top of everyone's list. Constitutional Rights, including the Second Amendment and the "individual" right to bear arms is sacred and affirmed by our Supreme Court Heller decision. We are blessed to live in a great area and it shows in our communities. As I travel around the county and talk to Douglas County citizens, they are friendly and attentive to what is happening around them. Those same citizens are concerned that no one from the Sheriff's office has actively been a part of the Columbia River Drug Task Force for so long. I also want to work better with the local law enforcement agency leaders to build relationships and opportunities for our officers to train together. We cannot go at it alone nor should we being trying to. Combining resources and personnel will only lead to quicker services and assure the safety of all citizens in both Douglas and Chelan Counties.

WBJ: Anything about your hobbies or personal life you care to add?

Leyde: I enjoy golfing, reading, travelling and taking the boat up to Lake Chelan, camping with the kids. I grew up in Sultan, Washington and moved to East Wenatchee in 1996. Over the years I learned to be humble as I worked most of my career by myself with backup a long way away. Treating people professionally and with respect was critical during my career. I bring that professionalism with me wherever I go and expect those under my supervision to treat others like they would want to be treated. Let my experience work for you.

partners is a key element in being successful in the mission to maintain quality of life through public safety.

WBJ: What is your management method in regards to subordinates?

Morris: I am passionate

Opioid prevention campaign kicks off in Washington

Initiative shines light on the risks of prescription opioid addiction and overdose

SUBMITTED BY WASHINGTON STATE DEPT. OF HEALTH

OLYMPIA -- The Washington State Department of Health will launch a statewide campaign this summer to warn about the dangers of opioid prescriptions.

Since 2000, over 10,000 people in Washington have died from an opioid overdose and there have been more than 17,697 opioid overdose hospitalizations.

"This crisis is tragically affecting our family members, friends and communities. We need to do everything we can to make sure people understand that prescription opioids can quickly lead to dependence, addiction, and deadly overdose," says Dr. Kathy Lofy, state health officer.

Through compelling personal accounts, the campaign helps make everyone aware of the risks and dangers of prescription opioids and delivers a thought-provoking message: "It only takes a little to lose a lot."

With funding from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), the campaign will focus on the hardest hit and most rural counties. Find more information on Washington's Opioid Response Plan, overdose prevention, or treatment resources or the upcoming campaign.

Citizens sought for Resource Advisory Committee vacancies

Three to four meetings held each year at the forest headquarters office in Wenatchee

SUBMITTED BY ROBIN DEMARIO, USFS

WENATCHEE - The Okanogan-Wenatchee National Forest is looking for nominees to fill two vacancies on its 15-member Resource Advisory Committee (RAC).

"Since 2000, the Okanogan-Wenatchee RAC has been able to help select more than 260 projects totaling over six and a half million dollars. These projects have helped provide access, eradicated noxious weeds, benefited the infrastructure of the National Forest, improved watersheds, and a lot more," said Deputy Forest Supervisor Erick Walker.

The RAC consists of members representing a wide array of interests. Their duties include coordinating with land management agency officials and providing opportunities for interested parties to participate in the project development process. RAC members review proposed Title II projects to benefit national forest lands in Chelan, Okanogan, Kittitas, and Yakima Counties and make recommendations for priorities for funding those projects. Committee members are sought who are committed to working collaboratively with other interests for the long-term benefit of national forest system lands.

"Currently, there are two vacancies on the RAC. These vacancies are in the organized labor or non-timber forest product harvester groups category and in the archaeological and historical interests category," Walker said. "Once we have a pool of candidates, their names are sent to the Secretary of Agriculture to consider for appointment to the RAC."

Prospective members are advised that membership on a RAC calls for a commitment of time and energy. Generally, there are three to four meetings held each year at the forest headquarters office in Wenatchee.

Committee members serve a four-year term without compensation, but may be reimbursed for travel and per diem expenses. In addition to a pre-meeting review of proposed projects, a project monitoring field trip is often scheduled during the summer and fall months in each county.

Members must reside within Washington State, and to the extent practicable within the RAC boundary. The geographic boundaries of the RACs are aligned with National Forest boundaries, and for the Okanogan-Wenatchee National Forest, they include lands within Okanogan, Chelan, Kittitas and Yakima Counties.

To obtain an application packet or additional information, please contact Robin DeMario, Okanogan-Wenatchee National Forest, 215 Melody Lane, Wenatchee, WA 98801, phone 509-664-9292. Completed application packets should be sent to DeMario at the same address as soon as possible.

RAC application forms may also be obtained on the forest's web site at https://go.usa.gov/xQuAy. Information on Title II legislation is also located on the Pacific Northwest Region Forest Service web site at https://go.usa.gov/xQuAn.

Nominees will be evaluated based on their education, training, and experience working with the interest area they represent, their knowledge of the geographic area covered by the RAC, their demonstrated commitment to collaborative resource decision-making and their contribution to the balance and diversity of the RAC. Letters of support from the interest to be represented are helpful, but are not required.

Equal opportunity practices, in line with USDA policies, shall be followed in all membership appointments to the committee. To ensure that the recommendations of the committee have taken into account the needs of the diverse groups served by the Department, membership shall include, to the extent practicable, individuals with demonstrated ability to represent minorities, women, and persons with disabilities. RACs are authorized under Section 205 of the Secure Rural Schools and Community Self Determination Act (Public Law 106-393).
