Davies tendered he resignation to the school district on March 28 after serving as superintendent for 10 years. With a background as both an academic and administration coach, Davies, a past president of the Washington Association of School Administrators, intends to pursue her interests in leadership and research. One of the projects Davies will engage is a guidebook for schools that have experienced disasters like the 2014 Carlton Complex wildfire that disrupted the Pateros school system when 25 percent of the city's residences were lost.

The school district enlisted help from the North Central Educational Service District (NCESD) to fill the superintendent's position. NCESD acts as a resource for the 29 districts within the Okanogan-Chelan-Douglas-Grant county area.

the previous year could not return, others like the nearly two dozen prancing horses, turned out in more numbers than ever before. Chelan Fruit sponsored a flatbed trailer and band playing live Mexican music. The Columbia River Quilt Guild, three Rivers Hospital, and Brewster's Mi Pueblo Market represented the diversity of groups, services and businesses that took part in the celebration.

As marchers, bands, business entries, motorcycles, horses, classic cars and more began to depart at intervals down Columbia Avenue at 11 a.m. spectators lining both side of the main street enthusiastically showed their approval of the music, tossed treats, smoking tires, dancing horses and other diversions.

Fireman Park featured everything from merchandise and custom crafts to the Bridgeport FFA's barbecue booth and other food vendors. Basketball hoops set up at Columbia Avenue and 10th Street were ready for teams of threeon-three players and several softball teams played in the own tournament nearby.

Bridgeport High School's Class of 2018 had graduated the day previous and the weather was perfect for a day of fun, relaxation and community.

Show some respect

Dear Editor,

As a veteran I was very moved by the recent 150th memorialization of those who have fallen in service to our country. I am 74 years old and am always moved by the stories of the fallen and the survivors. When my wife and I were in government service in Japan, we had the opportunity to visit Viet Nam. It is a beautiful if impoverished country. We had the chance to tour the Hanoi Hilton, where John McCain was imprisoned for five and a half years. There is little left of the original prison. most was razed to make way for a high rise. What is left is a museum and a grim place. Prisoner cells were comprised of small rooms with sloping concrete floors where prisoners were shackled hand and foot between bouts of interrogation and torture. There was also a guillotine, left over from the French occupation that was mounted on a trailer so it could be taken out to the field for summary executions. A moment of hope was a room dedicated to their most well known prisoner John McCain. It was spare, mostly newspaper pictures and magazine articles about the prisoner. I am pained that a former enemy shows more respect to Senator McCain than some members of our current administration. McCain and I are in different political camps but he is, and will always be, my hero. We must show respect to the fallen, veterans, and current service members whose only job is to preserve our freedom. God bless America and those who believe in liberty.

The Great Will Charlton Heston is not dead and buried

China has the Great Wall and we, our Great Will ... as in, "Will the new trade war bring back the Great Depression?

Locally, "Will tariffs on aluminum bring Alcoa back to the Wenatchee Valley? Will tariffs on steel bring back the glory days of American heavy industry? China has had the Great Wall for a few years now, say 2,300 of them. It is about 13,000 miles long when all its segments are added up. It took millennia to build. It remains today as perhaps the single greatest building on earth. It is viewable from space. After all of those accolades, make no mistake about it, the wall did not work to keep out the invading Mongol hordes.

Now we have a life with nothing but question marks. When will Johnny leave the basement for good?

When will the Seahawks get back into the Super Bowl? Will Dennis Rodman be selected as the first American ambassador to North Korea?

Will tariffs cause the Apocalypse Now or merely delay the inevitable ushering-in of the new Chinese Empire? Here is the real rub. Now we are attacking our closest allies - Canada and Europe. If you hurt your friends, are they still friends? Is this some perverse iteration of tough love?

Creating this unnecessary friction with our brothers will not sit well with the ghosts of Truman, Marshall or Reagan. We rebuilt Europe to the benefit of all and created NATO for the benefit of the world and it worked.

Now we have become the world as envisioned by Steve Bannon. The man who said, and is advising, to deconstruct the entire status quo. Destroy all semblance of sensible cultural norms so it can be brought back bigger and better than ever. In this case, we are witnessing the most explosive regime in America's history since the days of Lincoln and the Civil War.

Bannon's crazy policies are now being deployed by President Trump both in foreign and domestic affairs.

We will become best friends with Russia and we will become buddies with the Chinese and eventually we will form a modern-day Triumvirate to control the entire world - everything and everyone including Africa and South America.

The Europeans will finally realize their day has come and gone. They should still be happy since that continent and that group of "Royal" elites has been running the planet for at least the last few hundred years.

The China-Russia-America Triumvirate will gobble up several smaller neighboring countries and these three countries will eventually be known as Greater China, Greater America and Greater Russia.

Far into the future it will simply be known as "Greater CAR" and the age of Soylent Green (1973) will be upon us.

What do folks in Wenatchee really care about Steve Bannon? As much as he can be mocked as Satan's Choice, he is ironically aiding and abetting the new strongman with raccoon eyes from the tanning bed. "Make America Great Again" is the start of the new American Empire, but first we will suffer immeasurably in Blood and Treasure.

Your children and their children will fight endless skirmishes and perhaps another Great War before the dawning of the CAR Alliance. As with any birth, there will be pain before new life enters the domain of those of us mired in the status quo.

I remember watching the original Planet of the Apes (1968). At the end of the movie, we are back on the Earth of the future and it was in ruins. Don't expect the end of this reality show to be any different.

BTW - Charlton Heston starred in both movies and went on to become the President of the NRA. He was also a World War II veteran (Midway 1976) and a "man's man." Just like Ronald Reagan, Heston was a Democrat and social activist until the early 1960s when he became a conservative Repub-

Will Alcoa come back to Wenatchee?

If it does, I Will vote for Trump ... again ... and we Will all rejoice just like at the end of The Ten Commandments (1956).

Giving hope: Right to Try Signed into Law

What does 'right to try' mean? It refers to the ability of terminally-ill patients, who after having exhausted all other options and who are unable to participate in a clinical trial involving certain drugs, to access experimental drugs or therapy. The Right to Try offers the freedom to access medicine that is still in the investigational time to wait for drugs to gain full approval by the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) – an approval process which averages 15 years. The bureaucratic structure of the FDA has created a gridlock for life-saving drugs to be introduced to the market, and patients should not have to beg the federal government for permission to exercise all paths available to save their lives.

The legislation amends the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act to exempt certain unapproved, investigational drugs to a terminallyill patient who has exhausted approved treatment options and is unable to participate in a clinical trial involving the drugs.

I voted for the legislation, which first passed unanimously

Unfortunately, some patients do dler, Frank Mongiello, Jordan in the U.S. Senate and then by not qualify for clinical trials that McLinn, and Matthew Bellina a bipartisan vote in the House could save their lives or have the Right to Try Act of 2017, grants by 250-169. Washington state legislators unanimously passed similar legislation at the state level in 2017, becoming the 34th state to ensure the Right to Try. I was proud to support the Right to Try Act at the federal level.

In his 2018 State of the Union speech, President Trump supported the Right to Try, saying, "We also believe that patients with terminal conditions should have access to experimental treatments that could potentially save their lives. People who are terminally ill should not have to go from country to country to seek a cure — I want to give them a chance right here at home. It is time for the Congress to give these wonderful Americans the 'right to try.'

On Wednesday, May 30, President Trump signed the right to try legislation into law. I am proud that we were able to act to provide families who are in so much need of hope with the freedom to try what may help their loved ones.

Blakeney named 2018 Washington state small business 'Star Performer'

WASHINGTON SMALL BUSINESS DEVELOPMENT CENTER

SEATTLE, Wash. – Lewis Blakeney, a certified business advisor with the Washington Small Business Development Center, was named the network's 2018 Star Performer for his work with small business owners in North Central Washington.

The award was announced May 3 at the U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA) annual gala at the Renaissance Hotel in Seattle. Blakeney and the Star Performers from each of the 63 SBDC networks across the country will be honored at the America's SBDC conference in Washington, D.C., in September.

Blakeney joined the Washington Small Business Development Center as a small business advisor in Omak in 2000, where his work is supported by The Economic Alliance of Okanogan County, after having been a small business owner for more than a dozen years. Prior to that, Blakeney had held executive positions in large corporations for more than 15 years.

"As the SBDC advisor in Okanogan County, Lew understands the specific challenges business owners in rural areas face," said Duane Fladland, state director of the Washington SBDC. "His work demonstrates that geography is not a barrier to success when small business owners have the tools and resources they need to succeed."

The Washington SBDC is a network of more than two dozen business advisors working in communities across the state to help small business owners start, grow or transition a business. The Washington SBDC is hosted by Washington State University and receives support from the U.S. Small Business Administration and other institutions of higher education and economic development.

"Lew has assisted many of the local businesses within our communities from the ground up," said Roni Holder-Diefenbach. "He is committed to every client that he works with and goes above and beyond to see them succeed. We are lucky to have Lew as our SBDC officer serving Okanogan County.'

Blakeney said he enjoys helping business owners succeed. "It's very rewarding to help someone be successful," he said.

Blakeney assisted more than 100 SBDC small business clients in 2017.

Those clients credited him with helping them raise more than $1 million in capital. Blakeney's career total for helping SBDC clients secure financing exceeds $34 million.

When a business is successful, especially a business in a rural community, the ripple effects can be significant, from the owner and his or her family to the employees to the community. "You've actually changed someone's life for the better," he said.

According to Blakeney, perseverance is the single most important quality in becoming a successful small business owner. "People who are not small business owners have no idea how stressful and allconsuming being a business owner is," he said

Blakeney earned an engineering degree from the University of Cincinnati and then an MBA from Stanford University. While at Stanford he took a class in small business that interested him, but with few resources or connections, that wasn't an option. Instead he went to work for IBM and then spent more than 15 years working in executive positions in large corporations.

Finally, in 1985, after six months of research, he purchased an injection molded plastic manufacturing company with 10 employees. Over the next dozen years he increased sales tenfold and added 30 new jobs.

"I had 40 people who depended on me for a job," he said, and that was both satisfying and daunting. After selling his business in 1998, he decided he wanted to help other small business owners succeed.

From restaurant owners to hoteliers to retail shop owners and professional services, Lew's clients talk about his ability to cut through the clutter and help them figure out what really matters.

For instance, Jennifer Tate, owner of Sky and Earth Studios in Twisp, has been working with Blakeney for more than 15 years. In 2016 she recently bought a real estate website design business in rural Central Washington, preserving more than 20 wellpaying jobs that might well have disappeared. She says that it wouldn't have happened without Lew's help.

"There were so many things that I needed to do and he helped me with every single one," she said. "He's just such an incredible resource."

In addition to the one-onone business advising Blakeney provides his SBDC clients, he has also taught nearly two dozen 10-week courses titled "Indianpreneurship—a Native American Journey into Business" over the past 10 years.

Brewster student places in national art competition

By MIKE MALTAIS STAFF WRITER

BREWSTER-Aubrey Thorn, the home-schooled 10-yearold daughter of Greg and Holly Thorn, just completed fourth grade at the Log Church Christian School in Brewster. One of Thorn's instructors at the school is Angelina Walker who teaches art to the third and fourth graders there. The medium appeared to be an ideal fit for the young prodigy who was encouraged to enter her work into national competition.

Thorn submitted a painting of the northern lights that she titled "Aurora's Majesty" to the Home School Legal Defense Association (HSLDA) 2018 national Art Contest. Out of some 150 entries for her 7-10-year age group, Thorn placed second. Her work will be on display outside Washington, D.C., for one year. Thorn's entry, along with other current and past winners, can be viewed on the HSLDA website at https:// hslda.org/content/contests/ Art_main.aspx.

Thorn is the second oldest of six siblings.

"In addition to art the three oldest girls enjoy singing and dancing," said their father. "They currently take ballet, tap and jazz through LFW Dance Academy in Omak."

Greg Thorn is the pastor of Calvary Baptist Church in Brewster and teaches physical education at the Log Church Christian School.

Hooked on Kids Fishing Derby will reel in kids June 9

By Mike Maltais STAFF WRITER

BRIDGEPORT - Hooked on Kids, the annual fishing derby sponsored by the City of Bridgeport, will welcome young anglers at the Marina Park cove at 8 a.m., Saturday, June 9.

The cove will be stocked with 400 trout provided by the Washington Department of Fish and Wildlife and its narrow entry channel blocked to give fishermen from ages four to 14 years plenty of opportunity to catch a fish. Twenty-five of the trout will wear special tags that kids can redeem for prizes like bikes, fishing rods, and other treasures.

"We have lots of prizes, more than last year," Bridgeport Mayor Janet Conklin said.

The derby fee is $3, and a waiver signed by a parent or guardian is required for each participant. Entry is limited to 250 anglers and those under 10 years of age must be accompanied by an adult.

There are no catch-and-release requirements and each youngster can keep up to 10

Only one pole per angler is allowed. An adult may help a youngster cast for and net a trout, but the child must be the one who catches the trout. Allowances will be made for handicapped children.

A life jacket is required for all youngsters fishing from the cove dock.

The derby coincides with WDFW's Free Fishing Weekend, June 9-10.

Hooked on Kids was originally the brainchild of former Bridgeport resident and council member, Neil Jacobson. Jacobson even held a competition for Bridgeport school students to come up with a design for the derby logo.

The winning design, showing a large trout holding a bent fishing rod that is hooked onto the collar of a dangling youngster, remains the official logo.

Native American Studies specialist will speak at Confluence Gallery June 15

TWISP - Confluence Gallery and the Methow Valley Interpretive Center, together with Humanities WA, present Dr. Laurie Arnold, Director of Native American Studies at Gonzaga University, for a free presentation on indigenous Columbia Plateau art at the Confluence Gallery, 104 Glover St., Twisp at 6:30 p.m. June 15.

Dr. Arnold's address, Indigenous Columbia Plateau Art Historical and Contemporary Contexts, is in conjunction with the Snk'lip Nc'aps: Coyote Winked: Native Art from the Indigenous Plateau art exhibit at the Confluence Gallery that runs until June 30.

"I love the title of this exhibit, "Coyote Winked!" said Mary Yglesia, Executive Director for the Methow Field Institute/Methow Valley Interpretive Center. "Coyote figures prominently in the stories of the Native Americans sometimes representing the power of creation and sometimes as a messenger carrying important information."

Dr. Arnold's talk will provide a framework for contextualizing the Columbia Plateau. It aims to orient listeners to the ancestral past - lifeways, cultural practices, social formations - to interpret the present. The discussion will reflect on how changes during the last 200 years interrupted tribal lifeways but did not destroy them. It will consider how cultural continuity is present across the Columbia Plateau, if observers know how to recognize it.

The Columbia Plateau has been an Indigenous space for at least 10,000 years. For the last 200 years, it has been a co-occupied space, a region shared by descendants of ancestral Plateau peoples and the settler society which grew during the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. Today, Native American communities throughout the Columbia Plateau engage in cultural revitalization ranging from language restoration to writing tribal histories to creating art, including traditional and modern art forms.

Dr. Arnold speaks about how the contemporary landscape still offers representation of the Plateau culture. and she teaches the context to understand the representation.

made from a traditional design floating down a river, a Spokane Indians baseball jersey with the team name written in Salish, or a painting or drawing or photograph made by Plateau artists," said Dr. Arnold. "These objects tell stories and share histories, if we know how to view them."

Laurie Arnold is an enrolled member of the Sinixt Band of the Colville Confederated Tribes and is Director of Native American Studies at Gonzaga University. Her first book, Bartering with the Bones of Their Dead: The Colville Confederated Tribes and Termination, was published by the University of Washington Press in 2012. She holds a PhD in History from Arizona State University and a Bachelor's degree in History from Oregon State University.

In 2017, Laurie together with a colleague at Whitman College, won a National Endowment for the Humanities Summer Institute award for "The Native American West: A Case Study of the Columbia Plateau." The institute will be held at Whitman in June 2018. Laurie's next project, The National Indian Gaming Association and Intertribal Activism: Community Leaders, National Impacts, is a study of Indian gaming told from the beginning, through the lens of leaders who advocated on behalf of tribes and who continue to advance tribal goals three decades later. Laurie previously held positions at the D'Arcy Mc-Nickle Center for American Indian and Indigenous Studies at the Newberry Library sity of Notre Dame.
