Bridgeport council closes in on workable junk vehicle ordinance

By MIKE MALTAIS
STAFF WRITER

BRIDGEPORT – If you think the presence of multiple, non-working “junk” vehicles sitting on private property within a city limits is simple to solve, think again. The City of Bridgeport has been wrestling with the conundrum for years and while the city council is closer to an ordinance that fits both residents and council members’ opinions, the issue remains a work in progress.

Council members Phil Lee and Anthony Jenkins have assumed the job of reviewing the existing ordinance and making recommendations to the full council of proposed changes and clarifications.

Council member Anthony Jenkins is concerned about the rights of private property owners.

Currently the Bridgeport Municipal Code (BMC) ad-resses junk vehicles in Chapter 10.36 under Title 10 Vehicles and Traffic. For a definition of a junk vehicle, reference is made to the Revised Code of Washington (RCW) statutes 46.55.010 and 46.80.010. In part, 46.55 defines a junk vehicle as one meeting at least three of the following four requirements:

- Is three years or older;
- Is extensively damaged with damage including but not limited to a broken window or windshield, missing tires, motor or transmission;
- Is apparently inoper-

Pateros Council adopts five-year Park and Rec Plan

By MIKE MALTAIS
STAFF WRITER

PATEROS – Council members approved the city’s five-year Comprehensive Park and Recreation Plan at their regular monthly meeting on March 19. The 62-page document, plus appendices will enable Pateros to maintain its eligibility for grants from the Washington State Recreation and Conservation Office.

According to an introduction summary the plan is designed to strike a balance between community demands for recreation activities, facility needs, environmental influences, and available resources.

The city’s first comprehensive update of the Park and Rec Plan comes on the heels of the 2014 Comprehensive Plan update and the Downtown Business District Plan that was updated in 2016.

The primary goals of the Park and Rec Plan include:

- Development of a comprehensive approach to recreation planning for existing facilities and programs that provide a basis for decision-making and budgeting.

- Encourage the development of future park and recreation programs and facilities geared toward meeting the needs of current and future generations.
- Establish priorities for capital improvements, program development, and land acquisition and disposal.
- Ensure conformance with federal and state policy requirements for shared revenues and grant assistance.

In other business council members adopted a resolution declaring an emergency state from Manganese contaminated wells that are degrading pump performance. The approved resolution authorizes use of a temporary well starting next May.

In a related issue, council adopted an ordinance that rezones the Pearl Street well site No. 3 from its current R1 designation to Public Use.

Council members also voted to grant a right-of-way easement to the Okanogan County PUD for electrical utilities for the new water reservoir.

Bridgeport City Council proposes fee hikes to address increasing numbers of loose dogs

By MIKE MALTAIS, STAFF WRITER

BRIDGEPORT – It is going to become more expensive for dog owners within the city limits to allow their canines to run free, unlicensed and unaltered, if a fee increase proposed at last month’s city council meeting wins approval.

During their regular monthly meeting, March 21, council members revisited the growing urgency of dog control in the city.

Public Works Superintendent

Stuart Dezellem advised council members that the current fees are too low to produce the desired deterrent effect and illustrated his point with a story.

Dezellem said that for years the city posted city bill late notices every month on some 30 residences around the city.

“I spent seven years going to one residence every single month,” said Dezellem. “The late pay only cost the customer $5.00 a month and

Next time, hide in the refrigerator

COMPILED FROM A REPORT BY
DOUGLAS COUNTY SHERIFF HARVEY GJESDAL

BRIDGEPORT – Douglas County Sheriff's deputies on routine patrol in the 400 block of 16th Street at approximately 6:46 p.m., on Monday, March 26, observed a male believed to have an outstanding felony warrant from the Department of Corrections.

"The suspect ran into an apartment and hid," wrote Douglas County Sheriff Harvey Gjesdal in an incident report. "A female at the apartment said the suspect had left. The deputies had seen no one leave."

The woman then told the deputies the person they'd seen run inside was her daughter, wrote Gjesdal. Clearly it was not. The female finally consented to allow the deputies to look inside. Deputies located the suspect hiding under a box spring.

The suspect, 24-year-old Derrick Charley of Omak, was arrested without incident and transported to the Okanogan County Jail.

The female, 28-year-old Michelle Olvera-Cruz, was arrested without incident for Rendering Criminal Assistance and transported to the Okanogan County Jail.

Gjesdal termed the arrest as "admirable and tenacious police work."

The Easter Bunny had his hands full with Dennison Aparicio-Galvan, 4, and his sister, Leanna, at the Brewster Boys and Girls Club Easter Egg Hunt last Saturday, March 31. Hundreds turned out for the event and some even got to have their photos taken with the large, friendly hare.

911 hang-up results in meth arrest

COMPILED FROM A REPORT BY
DOUGLAS COUNTY SHERIFF HARVEY GJESDAL

BRIDGEPORT – a Douglas County sheriff's deputy on routine patrol on March 27 received a call from RiverCom dispatch at approximately 2:30 a.m. of a 911 hang-up call in the Douglas-Monroe street area of Bridgeport. The deputy located a vehicle in that vicinity with a female sobbing inside the car and a male standing outside of the vehicle.

The deputy contacted the subjects and determined that no violence had occurred.

"He did, however, find the male to be in possession of methamphetamine," wrote Gjesdal. "The subject, 23-year-old Adrian Ambriz-Valdovinos of Bridgeport, was arrested for possession of methamphetamine."

Ambriz-Valdovinos was transported to the Okanogan County jail and booked without incident.

they were comfortable with that.”

Over the course of a year the total late fees only amount to $60.

“We jumped that to $25 and now there’s a handful,” said Dezellem of the rapid reduction in late notice postings. “People will respond to financial pain.”

Animal control officer Bill Zweigle noted the uptick in loose dog numbers by advising the council that already this year he has picked up 20 dogs.

“We have a serious animal control problem in town,” said Dezellem. “I think we have to start going after these dog licenses.”

Dezellem also recommended that the daily kennel fee be increased.

Part of the current dog fee schedule includes $10 for a lifetime license for a spayed or neutered dog and $30 for unaltered ones. Mayor Janet Conklin suggested that current lifetime license holders be grandfathered in but that the lifetime option be cancelled in favor of an annual $10 license.

The cost to license un-sprayed or unneutered dogs would increase to $50.

“If the dog license for a non-sprayed or neutered animal is $50 and they can get a dog license for $10 for a neutered one, what do you think they’re going to do?” asked Dezellem. “They are going to get that dog spayed or neutered.”

The $5 daily kennel fee for impounded dogs would double to $10. The kennel fee covers heat and food to the animals in custody, Dezellem said.

Council member Matt Schuh asked if the council should consider increasing the daily kennel fee even more.

City Clerk/Treasurer Judy Brown, who deals with citizens paying their fines, cautioned council members that higher fees quickly add up to the point where owners are unable to pay the multiple costs required to recover their pets.

“When someone comes in they have to pay an impound fee which is $35 and the daily kennel fee,” said Brown. “Then they have to register the dog and that requires a dog license, but before a dog license can be issued the dog has to have proof of rabies vaccination; so, it starts adding up on them.”

In related dog business the Wenatchee Valley Humane Society contacted Zweigle and Mayor Conklin about free pickup of impounded dogs and a volunteer spay and neuter service.

The Humane Society recently collected two dogs from Zweigle and has offered to continue the service without charge. Conklin asked council members if they would consider donating an agreed sum to the Humane Society as a goodwill gesture to help it defray its expenses. Conklin said the Wenatchee shelter offers an alternative to euthanizing dogs that are transported to their no-kill shelter.

Zweigle said the estimated round-trip cost to transport a dog to Chelan for pickup is $70 to $72.

“And it costs about $50 to take dogs to Brewster for pickup,” Zweigle said.

Conklin asked council members to take a monthly donation under advisement while she pursues further discussions with the Wenatchee shelter over a working agreement with Bridgeport.

While Bridgeport does not have a cat ordinance in its Bridgeport Municipal Code, Conklin said she is becoming concerned about one residential property that is over-populated with cats. The mayor said she does not want to see an unregulated cat population rise to the level of Bridgeport’s dog numbers.

Council members are trying to strike a balance between the nuisance level to neighbors and city image with the rights of private property owners who have junk vehicles parked on their premises.

Lee proposes that junk vehicles in Bridgeport be covered under the city’s nuisance ordinance rather than under vehicles and offered his own definition of a junk rig.

“If it’s not legal on the street, it’s a junk vehicle,” said Lee and suggested allowing only one such vehicle that would be stored out of public view.

“If people want to keep an old rig like that they should put it under protection anyway,” Lee said.

Jenkins opposes setting a limitation and said he wants to find a way to allow owners to legally keep more than one junk vehicle without violating city code.

Council member Sergio Orozco owns an old pickup that he is restoring.

Council member Sergio Orozco used his own situation as an example of an owner of a vehicle that could fall under the city’s definition of a junk vehicle. Orozco said he is in the process of restoring an old pickup and does not have an enclosed structure to store in it during that renovation.

Jenkins said people move to rural communities like Bridgeport where they have more freedom and independence.

Mayor Janet Conklin took another view and suggested that some relocate to a city like Bridgeport with less regulations, so they can “dump their stuff here.”

Conklin said she also sees the issue from another perspective since she is often in meetings and discussions with individuals and businesses outside Bridgeport.

“We have been working really hard trying to attract new business to Bridgeport but have received complaints about the numbers of junk vehicles here,” Conklin said.

One of the issues revolves around acceptable parking areas such as driveways or graveled areas on private property as opposed to lawns.

“One of the big issues people have is vehicles parked on grass,” Lee said.

Vehicles visible from the street or a neighbor’s property presented another problem with screening options.

Public Works Superintendent Stuart Dezellem advised council members that according to city code, “wood fences can only be 48 inches high.”

Jenkins suggested that areas of a property that are graveled or otherwise converted to code-compliant parking surfaces might offer one solution to multiple junk cars.

Conklin wanted to know what the city’s position would be if a property owner decided to gravel his entire premises and turned it into a parking area?

“What about a car cover?” said Dezellem suggesting that covers might mitigate the eyesore factor.

Dezellem also reminded council members that some residents are very possessive when it comes to their attachment to particular vehicles.

“They are not going to do anything with them and they are not going to sell them,” said Dezellem, “and some people just don’t know how to get rid of them.”

Lee said that a junk car is worth about $300 in scrap metal value.

Jenkins and Lee agreed to continue to work on the core issues of an updated and more comprehensive junk vehicle ordinance and bring their recommendations to a future council meeting. In the meantime, owners of junk cars in Bridgeport may want to revisit their options in advance of any new city ordinance aimed at their contested “treasures.”

BREWSTER – The Bears varsity softball team claimed its latest victim last Friday, March 30, as the visiting 3-0 Waterville-Mansfield Lady Shockers lost a pair of games in a doubleheader, 13-0 and 16-1 to the undefeated host.

With the spring softball season less than a month old and eight games already in the books, the Brewster girls have thus far allowed their first four opponents a combined total of five runs while the Lady Bears have racked up 162 for their side with double-digit scores in every encounter.

Undefeated Brewster has yet to meet second place Tonasket (5-0) or third-place Lake Roosevelt (5-1) but will host the Lady Raiders in a home doubleheader on Friday, April 13, after an April 10 road trip to Liberty Bell. The Mountain Lions, currently 2-2 in the Central Washington 2B league stand in sixth place, one game behind the Lady Shockers.

Bears take a lopsided lead into early season competition

BREWSTER – While the Bears varsity baseball team remains one of only two unbeaten teams in the Central Washington 2B so far this season, the figures the 2017 state veterans have posted so far give some indication of the challenge their opponents face to pull out a win in the regular season.

In the 10 games the Bears have played to date, they have held their opponents scoreless in seven of them. Brewster has allowed a total of 10 runs while hammering their rivals for more than 100 during the same period.

With their tougher league opponents still ahead, the Bears may have to work a little harder to remain undefeated, but momentum is in their corner. The Bears only losses this season have been to non-league 1A Caribou Trail League opponents Okanogan in their season opener and Cashmere last Thursday, March 29.

While the Cashmere Bulldogs won the game by a run, 4-3, head coach Todd Phillips said, "this was one of the first games I have ever coached where I think we truly outplayed our opponent and hundred percent beat ourselves."

Phillips called the Bears' base running "atrocious" and game focus "minimal."

While Phillips acknowledged that his players hit the ball well and his pitchers had good command of the game "we just ran ourselves out of innings and made too many errors."

And the Bulldogs took full advantage of the mistakes.

BRIDGEPORT – The Mustangs varsity soccer team, undefeated 2-0 in Central Washington 2B league soccer, are just one game out of first place with wins over Liberty Bell and Tonasket and late last month.

Bridgeport defeated the Mountain Lions, 4-0, at its home pitch, March 22, and followed that victory with a 5-4 home win over Tonasket on March 27.

The Tigers scored first in the ninth minute and were answered by Bridgeport's Alex Zarate with the Mustangs' tying score two minutes later, reported head coach Gabe Gonzalez.

Tonasket scored again in the 21st minute to carry the lead for seven minutes until Keven Cervantes found the net in the 28th minute to again tie the game, 2-2.

Bridgeport took the lead on a Hugo Santana score in the 30th minute but the Tigers caught up just before halftime to knot the game at three apiece.

Tonasket scored goal number four in the 50th minute and an Alexis Valdovinos goal in the 90th minute to take the tie game into overtime.

A scoreless overtime came down to a shoot-out that gave the Mustangs the one-goal victory.

Goalkeepers Edgar Meza and Carlos Ruiz had 10 and eight saves respectively for the Mustangs.

Bridgeport will be back on the pitch when it hosts Oroville at 4:30 p.m. Tuesday, April 10.

first and early, said Phillips.

"Jeff Sonneman led off with a single and Joe Taylor walked, after a bunt miscue - which is something else we really need to get better at," said Phillips. "Quincy Vassar singled to load the bases and Corey Jarrell drove in two."

A base running miscue and an infield pop-up ended the rally, said Phillips, and Cashmere rallied to even the score with two unearned runs.

Brewster regained the lead in the second inning after Cade Gebbers walked and Turk Riggan doubled.

"Logan McGuire reached base on a fielder's choice and Jeff Sonneman hit a sacrifice fly to bring a run in," said

Phillips. "A base running error brought this inning to a close as well."

Cashmere rallied once again for two runs in the bottom of the fourth that would put a lid on the game.

The Bears host third-place Lake Roosevelt in a doubleheader starting at 11 a.m. Thursday, April 5.

Raising the alarm to save our dams

One of the most urgent issues we face right now in Central Washington is the ongoing threat to dams on the Columbia and Snake rivers. Just this week, a 9th Circuit Court panel rejected arguments for an injunction to pause a forced spill order by an Oregon federal judge. The Oregon judge's order requires an increase in spill for the eight lower Columbia and Snake River dams and now goes into effect as of April 3. Increasing spill comes with a $40 million price tag for ratepayers this year alone. That price is too high, and it is only a fraction of the cost that removing our dams would have on our economy. Breaching the dams should not even be an option.

Dan Newhouse

We already know how Seattle interests feel about dams on the east side of the mountains: They want them breached, despite billions spent on improving fish survival rates to 92%-96% at the four lower Snake River dams. A federal judge from Oregon wants studies of breaching the lower Snake River dams to continue. My constituents disagree. Residents of Washington's Fourth Congressional District know how important these dams are to our livelihoods, and we see things differently because we will have to live with the consequences.

I surveyed thousands of constituents across Central Washington, and the responses I have received have been overwhelmingly supportive - 85 percent - of protecting our Snake River dams. In the Tri-Cities this week, I stood with community leaders, county commissioners, PUDs, and representatives from agriculture, labor, and transportation to support safeguarding our dams.

Rep. Cathy McMorris Rodgers and I joined with lawmakers across the Pacific Northwest to introduce bipartisan legislation to prevent increasing spill or breaching our dams. There is progress to report: On Monday, Rep. Cathy McMorris Rodgers and I received a commitment from leadership of the U.S. House to mark up and then bring our bipartisan legislation to the floor for a vote. We now expect that legislation to move in the near future to ensure continued operations of federal dams along the Columbia and Snake Rivers and keep electricity rates stable.

This week's forced spill order shows that the stakes are high for our region if the dams are prevented from operating as efficiently as they can. I firmly believe fish and dams can and do coexist. I am steadfast in my resolve to save our dams, and I am committed to this effort on behalf of our rural communities here in Central Washington. I am working to save our dams and keep electricity rates low because the price for our area is simply too high.

America's course for the next 50 years?

See cultural parallels from 100 years ago and and overall apathy from those who never served or can find Afghanistan on a map.

Yet, I look around and understand the obvious, that the youngsters are closer to seizing power than we give them credit for.

The status quo always thinks it will never be replaced and then it is.

Soon will be a time and a culture of party registration becoming meaningless and all be independents of various stripes and we will evolve (or devolve) into the European multi-party system. In Europe and elsewhere in the world, several parties must form alliances and form a coalition built on specific issues in order to have enough power to run a majority government.

They may even refer to the smaller coalitions as the "loyal opposition." Usually the majority coalition gets to choose the prime minister and most of the cabinet, but not all. The cabinet is where real compromise starts as various factions must be included in order for them to have sufficient skin in the game to make it worth their while.

The American system will eventually end up just like this.

Thanks to the 18-40 year olds, the NRA, abortion and women's rights and myriad other issues, our nation will be divided in many ways.

As a friendly reminder, it is still "one nation under God, with liberty and justice for all" even if those who act "Godless" are growing.

The opportunity for the GOP to truly make its tent bigger and also for millions of working-poor and lower middle class to form their own party is huge.

The Greens, the Libertarians, the Communists, Socialist Labor, etc., can all become players as the main two parties destroy each other with extreme wing confrontations that aren't necessary.

I have always been a moderate, whether registered as a Dem or GOP. My sadness is that few candidates cater to those in the middle anymore and seem to prefer pandering to their far left or right bases. If the GOP and the Dems want to stay relevant they will have to allow moderates to have a piece of the agenda moving forward.

If the status quo doesn't wake up, it will become as outdated as a dial phone hooked to a land line. I'll betcha Ma Bell or AT&T never thought that would happen to them?

Life, thanks to the importation of Chinese goods, has become cheaper to live, but that cheapness means no more Americans are employed in various crafts such as upholstery or TV repair. Just throw the darn couch and TV out.

Who will fix my future broken toasters, coffee makers and microwaves? Nobody will. Just throw it out.

Why are public schools abandoned instead of fixed? Because too many people of lower education level are needed to perform a great deal of jobs that do not require two masters degrees and an internship. Higher education has been oversold as the answer to everything for at least three decades now. The truth is we need lower paid laborers too. That's the truth behind the importation of immigrants, legal or not.

Why are newspapers failing all over America? The young don't read things on paper anymore, only on computer screens. Newspapers with web sites understand that and will remain solvent.

For my part, I am happy email and computers have replaced hand written letters and graph paper with hot wax to hold down the copy before sending it to the press. I am mostly happy that digital cameras have dropped the cost of using real film to shoot photos by a few hundred percent.

What makes me sad is that I wish I were 30 years younger so as to enjoy the excitement that will become America by 2026. That's only eight years away, enough time to form the political minds and attitudes of the kids now in grade school.

They will see their older brothers and sisters dancing to the sound of a different drum and they too will help crush beneath their millions of feet today's arrogant leaders and their preconceptions into oblivion.

The future looks bright, eh? Have a nice day and remember to "govern yourself accordingly." That's the way a lot of lawsuits sound in over-litigious America.

Study Kierkegaard and Sartre and create your own American existentialism. We have no need to keep the relics of the past if those relics will end our future. Say goodbye to the "blankie" of your childhood. It is time to rise and be mature adults. America depends on its young growing up sooner than later.

A president under 50? Why not by 2024?
