Founder Steve McConnell guides Construx Software to industry prominence

Construx Software founder and CEO, Steve McConnell poses with the photo, signed by all 19 company employees, of the favorite son sign they made and mounted on a City of Pateros sign post.

PATEROS -- It has been some years since Steve McConnell has been a resident here, but the CEO of Construx Software in Bellevue still considers the city at the junction of the Columbia and Methow rivers one of his two nostalgic hometowns.

McConnell is also the author of several books, including "Code Complete", widely regarded as one of the best practical guides to programming and software development.

Recently, McConnell's employees hit on a unique way to honor their boss, bring attention to his Pateros roots and create a lasting memento all at the same time. They fashioned a street sign that could be affixed to the pole under the "Entering Pateros" greeting.

The new addition read: "Hometown of Code Complete author and favorite son Steve McConnell." The crew hung

Project Phoenix rises from Pateros wildfire ashes

Site manager John Taminjin poses before the backdrop of the cherry and apple orchard being developed at Veterans Victory Village north of Pateros.

PATEROS – Three miles north of Pateros on Watson Road, a new opportunity for military veterans is rising from the ashes of the 2014 Carlton Complex wildfire. Called appropriately, Project Phoenix, the project is a 1,600-acre agricultural site on Tatley Farms where vets are invited to learn a variety of skills, share work, undergo healing, earn some money, build friendships and put their own ideas and projects into motion.

Project Phoenix is the creation of David Overcash of Woodinville, owner of Tatley Farms and founder of Golden Acts, an organization focused on making the world a better place, one golden act at a time.

Wenatchee resident John Taminjin is managing the day-to-day property operations while efforts are underway to find an experienced orchardist to mentor that part of the enterprise.

Taminjin is a 20-year Army combat engineer who saw action in Desert Shield, Desert Storm, Bosnia and Iraqi Freedom veteran.

"I had just ended a position with the Chelan County Housing Authority and was looking for something else," Taminjin said.

Tony Sandoval, the Chelan County Veterans Service Officer, told Taminjin that Project Phoenix was looking for a manager, so Taminjin assumed the position last May.

Overcash was inspired to start a project farm for vets after a life-changing mission to Guatemala with Medical Teams International where he worked to improve the lives of the indigenous Mayan people.

One of the first projects on the burned-over acreage north of Pateros was planting two 20-acre orchards of cherries and apples three years ago. Taminjin commutes daily from Wenatchee to handle irrigation and other chores that come with a developing orchard. He hopes to find an experienced mentor to help with the orchard practices.

"I have a farming and fishing background," said Taminjin, "but I'm not an experienced orchardist."

Taminjin is trying to get the word out to veterans' groups around the area about Project Phoenix.

"Veterans who want to become entrepreneurs in agriculture and want to try different things," said Taminjin. "You fit in however you can fit in."

Vets have already been showing interest in Project Phoenix. One is soon to arrive with a greenhouse operation that just needs the growing space and living quarters to move forward with his dream.

"We have water, land and the facility to encourage collaboration," said. "This is just a start but can lead to many other things."

Those wishing to contact Taminjin can call (509) 679-7338 or email him at ttaminjin@gmail.com.

Bridgeport school playground's Mega Mansion faces demolition

By MIKE MALTAIS

BRIDGEPORT – The Mega Mansion wood structure that has been a familiar fixture on the elementary school playground for the past two-plus decades will be closed and eventually dismantled for safety reasons, a media release from the school district said.

"As you know, all things have a life span and the wood structure is 24 years old," said Bridgeport School District Superintendent Scott Sattler said.

Since the Mega Mansion was installed, playground equipment rules have changed significantly and the structure no longer meets Washington Consumer Product Safety Commission safety guidelines relating to play structure safety standards.

"A recent playground assessment provided by Clear Risk Solutions reports the playground equipment contains many issues such as metal slides, dry rot, wood splits, wood deterioration, bolt protrusions, and splintering that make it unsafe for students to use," Sattler said.

It is recommended to close the Mega Mansion and eventually remove the wooden structure altogether.

"Plans are underway to add additional playground toys to the main playground once construction on the elementary school begins next summer," the sign, snapped a photo of their handiwork and removed the sign. The photo was then matted, framed and signed by all 19 company staffers. They kept the secret until mid-August when, during a company getaway in Chelan, they presented the photo to McConnell.

Code Complete figures prominently in McConnell's professional resume. It is one of the books he wrote before he founded Construx and it laid the groundwork for the later consulting and training specialties the company would promote. He wrote it in 1993 devoting some four years and 3,500 hours to the project. The guide was well-received and its first edition went through 30 printings and was translated into 10 languages.

In 2004, McConnell devoted another 1,000 hours to an extensive revised second edition.

McConnell used his own journey through the computer science field as a guide for the type of reference he would write.

"It's the book I wish somebody had handed to me shortly after I got out of college and said, 'O.K. here's all the stuff you're going to learn in the first five to 10 years the hard way, or you can read this book instead of learning everything the hard way'".

Construx Director of Business Development, Paul Donovan described McConnell's standing in the software industry this way:

"Steve really is considered one of the most influential people in the field of software development having written what many/most software folks consider the 'Bible' of software development best practices," said Donovan of Code Complete. "If you read some of the reviews of his books on the Amazon.com site you'll get some ideas as to the impact he's had on software development worldwide."

McConnell spent his early childhood years in Pateros, was bussed to kindergarten in Brewster and attended first and grades in Pateros before his family moved to Spokane in 1971.

The McConnell home was located on the hill just below the twin water towers. It was also among those destroyed in the 2014 Carlton Complex wildfire.

"I spent very, very enjoyable childhood years in Pateros," said McConnell. "Pretty idyllic really; I felt I spent my childhood just wandering around the hills by the water towers."

He was a toddler when the construction of Wells Dam changed the face and future of Pateros.

"I think they activated it when I was about three," McConnell said.

The family relocated again to Puyallup, his other nostalgic hometown, when McConnell was a freshman in high school and he graduated Rogers High School in 1981.

McConnell attended Whitman College in Walla Walla and, like many first-year students, didn't really know what career path he wanted to pursue. He decided to take one computer science class per semester as his "backup Plan B" so that, upon graduation, if he still hadn't figured out what he wanted to do, he would have enough computer science training to get a job in that field. He graduated with a major in philosophy and minor in computer science. He then added a master's degree in software engineering from Seattle University.

McConnell did end up in computer programming and worked for Boeing and Microsoft among other companies before striking out on his own.

"I woke up one morning and said, 'you know, I think Plan B might actually be Plan A'."

That revelation planted the seeds of Construx, McConnell's decision to form his own company and enter the competitive field of computer custom software programming in 1996.

"We were going to be a software development company," said McConnell but, by his own admission, the timing was not ideal.

"Number one, we were going right into the dotcom collapse buzz saw," said McConnell. "Second, it coincided with the rise of off-shore outsourcing in India and Eastern Europe."

During the nine years that Construx struggled to make headway in the custom software programming field, it also engaged in consulting and training "to keep the lights on" McConnell said.

Before long another light went on and Construx management saw the writing – or rather the programming – on the wall. The consulting and training had always been easy, profitable and natural for the company whereas programming had been hard and unprofitable. So, once again, McConnell refocused on another Plan B.

"It was a fairly rocky transition for us," recalled McConnell, "because we had to lay off about 40 percent of our staff who weren't able to make the jump to the consulting/training business."

This company is 21 years old and managed to survive the dotcom collapse between 1997-2001 that took down about half of Construx's client base.

"That was a rough couple of years," McConnell said.

Continuing improvements and efficiencies in global internet communications have fit well into the Construx business model.

"The advent of online training has been a big deal for us," said McConnell of his company's now worldwide reach.

What McConnell saw in the emerging industry of computer programming decades ago was "a field that was young enough and green enough where a person could still make a difference."

In McConnell's case, that perception was especially prescient.

Blue-green algae blooms on a Washington lake.

Algae toxin detected in Rufus Woods Lake

By MIKE MALTAIS
STAFF WRITER

BRIDGEPORT – The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers has issued an alert for unsafe levels of an algae toxin detected in the waters of Rufus Woods Lake behind Chief Joseph Dam. In a media release last Friday, August 25, the Corps warned the public to avoid areas where algae blooms are present when boating, swimming, water skiing or enjoying other in-water activities.

"While it's safe to eat properly cleaned and gutted fish, the water should not be consumed and steps should be taken to keep livestock and pets away from the water," the release said. "The toxin can be lethal to animals if ingested in high enough concentrations."

The naturally occurring nerve toxin, called Anatoxin-A, is produced by some blue-green algae blooms found in waters across the state.

The recommended guideline for Anatoxin-A concentrations by the Washington Department of Health is one microgram per liter of water for recreational uses. In samples of the Rufus Woods algae forwarded to King County Environmental Laboratories for analysis, concentrations of the toxin were as high as 900 times the recommended safe level.

"Samples will continue to be taken and analyzed until Anatoxin-A levels are determined to be below state recreational guidance values," the release said.

Rufus Woods Lake remains open to public access.

More information about toxic blooms can be found on the Department of Ecology website at <http://www.ecy.wa.gov/programs/wq/plants/algae/index.html>.

Tapani Underground, Inc. of Battle Ground, Wash., the lowest of four bidders on the Cemetery Reservoir Project. Tapani's bid of $1,868,659.94 matched the city engineer's estimated cost for the job and was the only bid that came in under $2 million.

City administrator Jord Wilson said the project is scheduled to begin in mid-September with plans for the work to continue through the winter months.

Council member Christine Perry proposed adoption of Resolution 2017-34 awarding the contract for the city's Test/Production Wells Project to Blue Star Enterprises of Richland, the lowest of two bidders at $94,598.31. Blue Star came in $10,000 above the city engineer's $84,674.73 cost estimate for the job.

Christine Perry

Earlier this year, Keith Zweigle, chief of the all-volunteer Pateros Fire Department, applied for a Department of Homeland Security (DHS) grant to fund the purchase of accessory equipment. Council authorized approval of the grant in the form of Resolution 2017-35, that will allow the department to purchase oxygen packs, bottles and masks for each of its engines.

Councilman George Brady proposed the council accept a schedule of temporary fees for the newly renovated Ives Landing Park. The temporary fees will apply to users until the permanent fees are posted in the 2018 fee schedule.

Wilson advised council that bathroom facilities and signage advising users of the park fees and reservation requirements were scheduled to be in place later in the month.

Someone will always be on hand to teach a game and visitors need not be members to participate, reminded Lowry.

The Center is open to seniors and their guests, but “please bring along a snack to share with others.”

Bingo is starting up again at 1 p.m. on Tuesday, Sept. 12, and Wednesday, Sept. 20.

“If you participate, bring a small item to serve as a Bingo prize,” said Lowry. “Put it in a bag, wrap it or...just bring something.”

The Bingo caller will be Senior Center Secretary, Alan

Scheduled bus trips this month are to Omak, Friday, Sept. 8, and Wenatchee, Friday, Sept. 15.

The annual “Senior Open” Golf Tournament will be held on Sept. 17, at Lake Woods Golf Course in Bridgeport. Registration is at noon followed by the shotgun start at 1 p.m.

with the Senior Center) and unlimited mulligans at $5 per.

Raffle tickets for some great prizes will be sold for $1 each of six for $5. First place is rounds of golf at Gamble Sands Resort. A barbecue dinner with dessert is included for all participants after the tournament.

For more information on the tournament, contact the fundraiser organizer, Trudi Gamble at 733-1254. All proceeds benefit the Senior Center.

“The Senior Center is always looking for volunteers to help us out with projects,” Lowry said.

Volunteers are needed in the Rummage Room with different assigned tasks such as dusting and taking excess donations to a church for their rummage sale.

“We really need someone to help with the excess cardboard we accumulate,” said Lowry. “We now need to go to Pateros where it needs to be delivered and disposed of at least once a week.”

After taking post graduate courses in shorthand and typing she took a short business course at Wenatchee Business College. She began working in the office of Methow-Pateros Growers in 1941 until 1943 when she married Richard "Dick" Rogahn.

Norma and Dick lived at Holden until he was called back into the Army. They had one son, Richard "Butch" Rogahn. Norma went back to work at Methow-Pateros Growers in 1951 and worked until her retirement in 1985. Both Dick and Butch preceded her in death.

Norma is survived by her sister, Elaine Nickell; two grandchildren, Richelle Pulos and Rick Rogahn; and three great-grandchildren.

Norma will be put to rest in Pateros, Washington beside her husband and son. A memorial will be held at a later date.

Colin Kaepernick has rights, but 'Black'-mail is illegal

Poor Colin Kaepernick - he hasn't been given a multi-million dollar contract yet. The NFL quarterback rocketed to fame as he knelt during the National Anthem last season to support Black Lives Matter and protest police shootings of Black men.

APPLES TO APPLES
Gary Bégin

I applaud his civil rights stance and right of free speech, but I disagree that he used the NFL stage as his platform to stage his fealty to that cause.

My point is a simple one: Does every American (not including columnists) have the right to use their employer's business as a venue to voice their own personal opinions?

Kaepernick could easily have marched with protesters in any number of cities. He could have donated millions to support anti-poverty programs such as food banks and pre-school education to get single parents to work and give their kids a head start in school.

What he did was clever and achieved great bang for the buck, but the buck wasn't and isn't his to spend. Millions of Americans were held captive to this guy's protest and in that, he can claim a victory.

On the other hand, I equally support the right of every NFL owner to shun Kaepernick, especially if he embarrasses the fans and other players by denying the glory that is inherent whenever that flag is raised and that anthem played.

What we have here folks, is the fascism of the left. The left wing is using Kaepernick to tell millions of Americans that they are demanding their free speech or else the protests will continue, but that also means the free speech of the owners not to hire or play him is simultaneously being denied.

Left wing blackmail is nothing new. The shame of it is that many of my liberal friends don't even get the point. Owners and other fans have just as much right not to play Kaepernick or root for his team or allow him a spot on the roster.

There is no right that forces the owner of a business to hire someone they fundamentally disagree with. Perhaps Kaepernick can get a government job where an agency is forced to hire because of so-called affirmative action laws, but surprise, surprise - political speech is banned in the Civil Service.

Get yourself another venue Kaepernick and protest all you want. Run for political office or perhaps get a job in the Canadian Football League.

Get yourself a placard and march tirelessly around every stadium during every game and you will certainly be viewed on national television every Sunday, but it is not a law that a team owner must employ him. Buy a full-page ad in all the major urban dailies and make your point. Send them all an op-ed.

My boss can fire me "at will." I end every column telling readers that this column is my opinion and not representative of the ownership of the company or even my fellow employees. I am privileged to have this venue and it is something I don't take lightly.

It is ludicrous to force employers to keep those in their employ that upset them at the gut level. The left wing demands things that they themselves are unwilling to concede - the rights of the right wing to disagree.

Whether it is "global warming" or Colin Kaepernick, if I owned a company I would not allow a single employee or a collection of employees to dictate the way I run the company. What would be the point of being the boss?

Kaepernick et al, is attempting to "Black"-mail the NFL while still expecting to be employed as another spoiled millionaire quarterback. Regardless of his color, religion or opinion, it is not his place to be the chief operating officer when he signed a contract to do a specific job so very much lower on the pay chart.

If any NFL team employs him, it is because that specific owner has agreed to do so for whatever personal reasons, which may include commercial success.

Whether his antics on the field continue is another story to be discovered later. Ask yourself this: Do we all have the right to say and do anything we please every weekend and still expect to punch the clock Monday morning?

Free speech doesn't mean forcing literally millions of others to bow to your will Colin - it has nothing to do with being right or wrong, that's called a hostage taking en mass.

Poor Colin Kaepernick - he hasn't been given a multi-million dollar contract yet. Perhaps he is reaping the results of his actions just as all of us "poor folk" must do on a daily basis.

I like my beer cold, my brats grilled and my football sans politics. I will exercise my right as a fan to boycott any team that hires Kaepernick. I'm sure my absence won't even be noticed, after all, I am not a Black hell-raising millionaire.

(What a great oxymoron - a rich and privileged minority athlete complaining about the White Man's law-and-order system that allows him the "sacrifice" of playing football in front of millions of other minorities and Whites to make even more millions of dollars.)

Gary Bégin's opinions are his own and do not reflect those of NCW Media management or staff. He can be reached at gary@ncwmedia.net.

What about my rights?

I am offended. I'm deeply offended and I am tired of being demeaned and harassed as being an insensitive, hateful, bigoted, intolerant, sexist, homophobe all because I am a conservative and an independent thinker.

IN MY OPINION
Bill Forhan
Publisher

I think that it is far past time that anyone who wields such descriptions of intolerance be hauled into court and sued for defamation of character. After all, I deserve a safe space where I can't be abused as antisocial by progressive thinkers whose only way of diminishing my opinion is to belittle and demean me.

These people don't know me. They do not know what is in my heart. They don't try to understand my point of view. They simply dismiss my point of view because it threatens their narrow-minded sense of the world.

What am I offended about? I am offended because the Federal Government is destroying the future of our children and grandchildren by allowing the deficit to spin out of control year after year. It doesn't matter what the race, religion or sex of your progeny, eventually they will have to pay for the excesses of the current generation.

I am offended that 53 years after President Johnson launched his famous "War on Poverty" we have made no progress. We have a huge bureaucracy that administers numerous programs to help but according to Wikipedia those living in poverty has grown from 30 million in 1965 to 43 million in 2015.

I am offended that despite the Civil Rights movement, Affirmative Action and eight years of the first black President race relations in this country are worse than ever. I am especially offended that progressives blame this problem on white people despite the historic efforts most white people have made attempting to end racial intolerance.

I am offended by those who would desecrate our flag in the name of free speech. They might well have the right to do it but they disrespect the sacrifice of those who have given their lives to preserve that right.

I am offended by the politicians who feel they have the right to live like royalty exempting themselves from the laws they pass for the rest of us. Social Security and Obamacare would be vastly different if they had to rely on the benefits they legislate for the rest of us.

A great American once said, "Darkness cannot drive out darkness: only light can do that. Hate cannot drive out hate: only love can do that."

America is deeply divided today because the darkness of ignorance and intolerance is trying to drive out hate.

Safe spaces cannot build understanding or enlightenment.

Destroying the symbols and records of our history will only deepen the darkness by hiding the painful mistakes of the past.

Only the light of inspection and debate can help us to heal the wounds and build understanding.

Dr. Martin Luther King, the author of the above quote, would be deeply disappointed in the course of today's political wind.

I am also offended that we have lost our commitment to our founding principles. Principles like those found in our Declaration of Independence, "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal..."

Today it would appear that we have not only forgotten that powerful message but we have allowed our elected representatives to create all kinds of groups whose rights and privileges are superior to the general populace. This only builds envy and ultimately divides us.

As Dr. Martin Luther King said, "...hate cannot drive out hate."

America is deeply divided today. If we hope to save it, we must all get out of our safe zones and re-examine the principles and the history that made us the envy of the world.

Some of that history is painful. We can either allow that painful history to tear us apart or we can use it to help us build a better future for all of our citizens. A future where all of us - men and women - have an equal opportunity for life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

Safeguard Veterans' 2nd Amendment Rights

The 2nd Amendment is an individual right guaranteed to Americans in our Constitution. Especially after the fight for independence against the British, the Founders understood the importance of an armed citizenry. In Federalist Paper 46, James Madison pointed out that in Europe, "(T)he governments are afraid to trust the people with arms."

Not so in America, where our founding documents protect citizens' freedom to keep and bear arms.

Madison continued in Federalist 46 to argue in favor of Americans' ability to defend themselves and their freedom: "Let us not insult the free and gallant citizens of America with the suspicion, that they would be less able to defend the rights of which they would be in actual possession, than the debased subjects of arbitrary power would be to rescue theirs from the hands of their oppressors."

For too many men and women who have served our country in uniform, however, the status quo does not protect due process and 2nd Amendment rights. Under the current system, if a veteran or beneficiary requires assistance managing their Veterans Administration benefits, the VA deems them "mentally incompetent." Their name is then added to the FBI's National Instant Criminal Background Checks System (NICS), even if they are not judged to be a danger to themselves or others. The burden is then placed on the veteran to appeal.

That is not how our system should work on behalf of our veterans.

These are real issues affecting constituents in the 4th District. My office has assisted veterans whose jobs were threatened by this decision. Recently a veteran from Central Washington who was receiving disability was faced with the potential forfeiture of his 2nd Amendment rights. He feared that losing the ability to carry weapons would have threatened his job in law enforcement. The case was closed successfully, however, and the VA did not find the veteran incompetent.

There are certainly individuals whose names should be added to NICS because they have been deemed a potential danger to themselves or others, but there are many thousands of veterans who are automatically blocked from exercising their constitutional rights without such a determination. These veterans deserve the dignity of being given the benefit of the doubt-and due process-before their right to bear arms is blocked by preventing them from purchasing or owning firearms.

I recently voted in support of House passage of H.R.1181, The Veterans 2nd Amendment Protection Act, which would require a judicial authority to determine whether a veteran is incapable of responsibly exercising their 2nd Amendment rights before the VA reports them to be added to NICS. Whether a veteran uses a fiduciary to manage their benefits does not indicate the lack of ability to exercise their constitutional freedoms.

Newhouse Honored with Spirit of Enterprise Award

SUBMITTED BY LIZ DANIELS, OFFICE OF DAN NEWHOUSE

PASCO - Rep. Dan Newhouse (R-WA) was honored at the Tri-City Regional Chamber's August Membership Luncheon in Pasco on Wednesday, August 23, when he was presented with the U.S. Chamber of Commerce "Spirit of Enterprise Award" for his support of pro-growth, pro-jobs policies in Congress.

"Creating jobs, growing our economy, and boosting trade opportunities for Washington state exporters are my priorities in Congress," said Rep. Newhouse. "Receiving the Spirit of Enterprise Award is an honor, and I will continue to support policies that encourage American entrepreneurship."

"Businesses of all shapes and sizes need sound, com-grow, and succeed," said Thomas J. Donohue, president and CEO of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce. "The Spirit of Enterprise Award recognizes those members of Congress who have done what's right for our friends, family, and neighbors running businesses across the country. We applaud Rep. Dan Newhouse for his commitment to free enterprise and economic growth."

The Chamber's prestigious Spirit of Enterprise Award is given annually to members of Congress based on their votes on critical business legislation. This is the 29th year that the U.S. Chamber has formally honored the accomplishments of this select group of members of Congress, and the second time that Rep. Newhouse has received the award.

The U.S. Chamber of Commerce is the world's largest business federation representing the interests of more than 3 million businesses of all sizes, sectors, and regions, as well as state and local chambers and industry associations.

Woodstock Anniversary 2017 raises funds for CVH

Brittany Jean part of local musical artists who performed

BY ERIN ROSSELL, STAFF WRITER

CHELAN – Watson's Alpenhorn Café hosted a successful fundraiser for Chelan Valley Hope (CVH), Saturday Aug. 26. CVH is funded through donations and fundraising events, and is an assistance, advocacy and referral program for individuals and families within the valley.

The 2017 Woodstock Anniversary Concert brought crowds from throughout the valley with music and attire straight from 1969. The festivities included a costume contest, silent auction, food and beverages, and live music from local artists including Waterdog, Brittany Jean, and Old Friends. Forty-eight years after the historical Woodstock performances in Bethel, New York, the mood and atmosphere was continued in the "Fun-Raiser" benefit concert for CVH. Total proceeds for the event were not available at the time of publication, however the information will be made available at lakechelanmirror.com. For more information on Chelan Valley Hope call (509) 888-2114 for ways to contribute or assistance.
