PATEROS – Family and friends are mourning the loss of Methow resident and Pateros businessman, Alvin E. Hymer, 74, who drowned in the Methow River, Saturday afternoon, July 1, while attempting to rescue his two dogs from the current.

Hymer and his wife were at the river near the confluence of McFarland Creek, a popular boat launch site about 14 miles upstream from the mouth of the Methow.

“The dogs were caught in an eddy and Hymer went into the river to help the dogs and as he did he lost his balance and was swept downstream,” said a media release from the Okanogan County Sheriff’s office. “Hymer’s wife saw him get swept down the river and lost sight of him.”

Rescue crews from Okanogan and Chelan counties, fire units, emergency medical service personnel and local citizens joined the search but were unable to locate Hymer.

Just before noon on Saturday, July 8, Okanogan County Sheriff’s deputies Josh Brown and Ted Shook responded to a citizen’s report of a body spotted floating in Columbia River, south of Pateros, reported Okanogan County Sheriff, Frank Rogers.

Upon arriving at the scene, the deputies could see the victim floating downriver toward Wells Dam, Rogers said. They removed their tactical gear, borrowed a jet ski and recovered the body identified as Hymer.

Brown and Shook brought Hymer’s body to shore at about 12:30 p.m. where they waited for Okanogan County coroner, Dave Rodriguez to arrive and take possession of the remains. Rodriguez contacted Hymer’s family to advise them of the recovery.

Hymer opened the Sweet River Bakery in 2002. Since that time the business has become a popular stop for coffee, desserts, pizza and other treats. Hymer’s son, Alex, joined the business in 2007 to oversee day-to-day operations.

Pateros Chamber report card grades past, present projects

By MIKE MALTAIS
STAFF WRITER

PATEROS – The Pateros Chamber of Commerce had a laundry list of both recent and pending events to discuss at its regular monthly meeting last Thursday, July 6, including the recent golf tournament, citywide garage sales, fishing derby and ongoing sign work.

The Pateros Chamber Golf Tournament was the best yet with 18 teams participating, three of those last-minute walk-ons. Players purchased 57 mulligans at $5 per and the silent auction brought in another $705.

The Father's Day Fishing Derby was another success attracting many participants from outside the area. The Chamber extended special thanks to Ag Supply in Brewster, Dale Parks, Rod Hammonds, Wells Dam Hatchery and the Washington Department of Fish and Wildlife.

"The fish were huge, and the kids got them all," Chamber secretary Joni Parks wrote.

A large crowd turned out for the Vintage Fair, River Run, Salmon barbecue and city-wide yard sale that included more than 30 individual garage sales. The Chamber also recognized Jim Yancey for the fireworks display.

Parks, a member of the Pateros Sign Committee, reported that the first concrete has been poured for the sign base with one or two to come. In a related membership update the Chamber added that anyone who donated to the sign fund automatically receives a Chamber membership through the year, if not already a member. Sign donations can be made at North Cascades Bank, City Hall or by mail to P.O. Box 374, Pateros.

The city has been busy repairing water lines around town, mayor Carlene Anders reported.

"It's been a real challenge finding water lines from the old city," said Anders. "We're learning now that as the infrastructure is starting to get old there are going to be a lot of challenges with kind of a buried town and it's taking more time and more money."

Anders also expressed relief over recent passage of the state budget.

"We didn't have our water appropriations stall out so the first pieces of the water system have gone to bid," Anders said. The next Pateros Chamber meeting is at 8:30 a.m., August 3, in the Pateros Fire Hall.

International straight truck northbound on State Route 153 between Pateros and Methow when he collided with a southbound 2009 Kenworth truck and trailer driven by 60-year-old Steve Osburn of Clarkston.

The collision occurred at milepost 8.86, the WSP report said, killing both drivers. A passenger in the Fennix vehicle, Richard Hayland, 34, of Yakima, sustained injuries in the crash and was transported to Three Rivers Hospital in Brewster for treatment.

The WSP report said the straight truck, driven by Fennix, veered across the centerline and into the path of Osburn's vehicle, a dump truck with attached trailer. The straight truck came to rest in the middle of the roadway, blocking all lanes, while the dump truck and trailer came to rest along the roadway and still facing southbound.

Traffic was backed up in both directions as troopers investigated the cause of the accident and a tow vehicle from Randy's Towing in Brewster worked to clear the roadway.

Both vehicles were totaled in the accident.

The extent of injuries and condition of Hayland were not known at the time of this writing.

Fourth of July Festivities in Brewster

By MIKE MALTAIS
STAFF WRITER

BREWSTER – The city’s Independence Day celebration, Tuesday, July 4, featured an attraction for every age and taste from a pancake breakfast in the morning, to free public swimming and parade in the afternoon and fireworks after dark. In between, vendors in Columbia Cove Park sold food and souvenirs to the increasing numbers of spectators arriving for the evening show.

A variety of wailing sirens and honking horns announced the parade proceeding west down Main Street at 4 p.m. Spectators were showered with candy and even a little water from the Douglas Okanogan Fire District 15 water tender. Gebbers Farms staffers handed out sample bags of fresh cherries.

In the soccer field adjacent to the rec center and pool, celebrants set off their legal fireworks under the watchful eyes of fire district personnel, and by the time the official barrage began at 10 p.m., a veil of smoke from all the whizzbangs covered the area.

David Ciccanti, from Bellevue, with son Alex, 11, and the rest of family were among those setting off rockets in the park.

“We’ve come here every year since 2010 for the Fourth of July,” said Alex, who will turn 12 on July 20. “And we’ll be back next year.”

So will lots of other folks.

The public works department for the City of Brewster recently acquired this used mini excavator for $40,834.70. Public works director, Lee Webster, was granted approval to make the purchase during a special session of the city council on June 29, after advising members that among the four excavators examined, this one had the “least hours” and was the “least expensive.”

Novelli named new CEO of Okanogan Behavioral HealthCare

SUBMITTED BY OKANOGAN BEHAVIORAL HEALTH

OKANOGAN - Jim Novelli has been named the new Chief Executive Officer of Okanogan Behavioral HealthCare. He is a native of New York City. He received his BA from the State University New York College at Fredonia and master's degree from Southern Illinois University at Carbondale.

Novelli has been involved in the behavioral health field at both the state and community level. He directed a crisis service program for a number of years and taught at the local community college. He then worked for the Illinois Department of Human Services, Division of Developmental Disabilities as assistant center director of the Choate Mental Health and Developmental Center. His final position with the state of Illinois was with the Division of Mental Health where he served as the executive director of Region Five. In this position, his office was responsible for oversight of the system of care for the southern portion of Illinois, which encompasses 36 counties and 26 community mental health agencies. Most recently he was the CEO for Eastern Montana Community Mental Health Center, in Miles City, Montana.

Novelli believes hope and recovery are possible when individuals have access to needed services. That includes public outreach to help those in need to become aware of the available services that would help them. It is important to reduce the stigma associated with mental illness. People talk about their child's broken leg, Novelli says, but not their child's mental health. He wants to "help people get through that process" and accept mental health care as health care. He believes the integration of physical health and mental health is a priority

Jim and his wife, Joette, have three children, one boy and two girls. Since the children are 25, 22 and 20, they will not be moving with their parents to become Okanogan County residents. Novelli, whose hobbies include martial arts, cooking and animal rescue, especially dogs, looks forward to becoming part of the Okanogan County community.

Jim Novelli

BUDGET OPINION

Senator Brad Hawkins comments on state budget

Senator Brad Hawkins

Dear 12th District Friends and Neighbors,
Thank you for the opportunity to serve as your 12th District state senator. I am pleased to share that on Friday afternoon, the Legislature approved a new two-year operating budget in time for it to be signed by the governor and take effect today, when the state's new fiscal cycle began. The $43.7 billion budget for 2017-19 was the result of weeks and months of hard work to address critical funding for K-12 education, higher education, health and human services, natural resources, state parks, public safety, and other key state services.

Doing big things is not easy. As I shared with some of my colleagues Thursday, "Doing big things is not easy." This is very true in the Legislature where members often have deep philosophical differences about public policy. When this happens, the citizens of Washington are best served when the different sides can come together, even if it takes longer, and reach strong, bipartisan compromises.

I believe the 2017-19 operating budget approved Friday, which likely provides closure to the landmark 2012 state Supreme Court decision on education (the McCleary case) and makes critical investments in other areas of state government, represents a bold step forward for our state. The budget bill, Senate Bill 5883, was approved by the House by a vote of 70 to 23 and in the Senate by a vote of 39 to 10. That is solid bipartisan support. I voted "yes."

Importantly, the final budget agreement avoids a new state income tax, additional business taxes, and the capital gains tax increases sought by many legislators. It utilizes additional revenue generated through state economic growth, adjusts processes for collecting taxes on online purchases from out-of-state retailers, and removes some tax exemptions. The budget also responsibly reserves over $2 billion as an ending fund balance to protect taxpayers in future years.

Meeting our paramount duty

The new operating budget increases K-12 education funding by $3.8 billion over the next two years, which includes more funding for career and technical education, gifted education, special education, and staff compensation. The state's K-12 investments now comprise 50% of spending.

The final budget also sets in place an historic levy reform plan that increases the state portion of the common-schools property tax while correspondingly reducing and capping local levy rates. The end result will provide additional funding to our schools and a more reliable and equitable educational funding system for students regardless of their location.

Additional budget highlights While much of the focus for this budget was on K-12 spending and reform, enhancements were made in other areas:

Preserves funding for higher education

Funds state employee compensation agreements

Reduces manufacturing B&O tax rates

Adds slots for early learning

Extends renewable energy incentive program

Offers more support for people with mental illness

Promotes improvements in the foster care system

Directs new resources toward seniors and unpaid family caregivers

Forest health bill funded

On a personal level, I was very pleased that the new law to establish a long-term forest health treatment assessment, created by my Senate Bill 5546, was fully funded in the budget at approximately $1 million for the biennium. I am very grateful to the Department of Natural Resources, Nature Conservancy, North Central Washington Forest Health Collaborative, and the Wenatchee-based Wildfire Project who assisted me in my efforts.

I have been particularly inspired by The Wildfire Project and strongly believe their presentations and community conversations are influencing public policy in our state. Educational outreach and greater awareness about wildfire can help us reduce our risk of megafires in the future and ultimately save our state millions of dollars in emergency response, fire-suppression costs, infrastructure loss, and economic damages. I am thankful that my colleagues agreed with my request to provide $100,000 in funding to this group in 2017-19, through the state Department of Commerce, for a continuation of their public education efforts on wildfire and forest health issues statewide.

Capital budget remains

The Legislature has now approved two of the three budgets for the next biennium. With the operating and transportation budgets in place, the remaining spending plan needed is the capital budget, which funds public construction projects, land acquisitions and other capital-related investments. Negotiations over this plan continued into the early morning today and could be completed soon.

State budget: 'This deal is getting worse all the time'

By JASON MERCIER

After getting over the initial shock of nearly 1,000 pages of spending, taxes and education policy being released and acted on without any measure of transparency or time for public comment, I finally have had a chance to review the 2017-19 budget deal. Combined with yesterday's shocking actions and statement by the Governor after vetoing a B&O tax cut, I'm sure many Washingtonians share Lando Calrissian's frustration: "This deal is getting worse all the time."

Before getting into an overview of the 2017-19 budget deal, let's recap the moment yesterday when relationships in Olympia went from Cold War to full out nuclear. There are many working parts of the 2017-19 budget deal: the spending policies, K-12 policy changes, tax increases and tax cuts. Included in these details are things that all lawmakers liked and hated but they combined to make the budget deal that avoided a government shutdown. When it came time to sign these various measures into law, however, the Governor decided to veto just one: the B&O tax cut.

Does this mean the Governor broke the budget deal?

The Governor says he wasn't part of the final budget talks and thus wasn't party to the deal reached (which brings up the question: with a shutdown looming, why wasn't he part of the budget talks?). Republicans in the Legislature, however, believe the Governor broke the budget deal and going forward his action "makes future negotiations virtually impossible." There has already been comment that the legislature may try to override the veto.

While yesterday's developments were stunning, it isn't the first time the parties have had trouble executing an agreed to budget deal. In 2015 there was another breakdown when some in the Senate initially refused to vote to suspend I-1351 as assumed in the budget deal creating a $2 billion deficit in the newly adopted budget.

Among the reasons the Governor said he vetoed the B&O tax cut portion of the budget deal was due to the lack of transparency and time for public comment. This is a very legitimate concern but it also applies to all other parts of the budget deal (spending plan, McCleary plan, McCleary tax and new sales taxes). If a veto was to be issued for this reason, it should have applied to all parts of the deal—not just the B&O tax cut. This is why we believed the legislature should have adopted a temporary budget after the deal was reached to provide lawmakers, the press and the public adequate time to review the details and comment before it became law.

While the repercussions of this veto continue to reverberate, let's take a moment to look at a high level overview of the budget deal.

On the bright side lawmakers rejected efforts to set up a constitutional income tax fight by not acting on the capital gains income tax proposal. Lawmakers also made historic investments in K-12 education (though important policy reforms are missing). From there, however, the rest of the budget balance sheet has serious dark clouds for taxpayers to worry about.

First the budget spends at twice the rate of the current revenue growth. In fact, combined with the 2015-17 budget, the 2017-19 budget will have increased spending by 29% (nearly $10 billion) since 2013-15. Then there are more than $2 billion in tax increases, more than $300 million in fund transfers from dedicated accounts, and a very curious decision to use more than $1 billion in savings to make the state's pension payments.

Concerning that pension funding decision, the State Treasurer's Office provided this comment:

"Using one-time revenue for an annually recurring expense is concerning. In the coming days there might still be 'back of the budget' explanations that will help put this transfer in better context."

Among those expressing concern about the use of dedicated accounts for other purposes was the State Auditor's Office. Here is their comment concerning the continue raids of the I-900 performance audit funds:

"We appreciate that the Legislature sees the value in performance auditing, but remain concerned with the extensive transfers for items that aren't related to the fund's intended purpose."

There is also the very real threat that the revenue assumed from the online sales tax will not materialize due to lawsuits. This will put even more pressure on a fragile balance sheet.

The one thing that everyone can agree on is the way the budget deal was brought to the floor and voted on in a span of 24 hours was totally unacceptable and should never happen again.

As noted by Sen. Carlyle in this committee speech:

"The fine print matters, and I don't think any of us knows what is truly in this, and I am just deeply unsettled . . . The implications for 7 million people are too serious and too profound to pretend that this is just the normal operation of government. It is not. This is outside the bounds of acceptability, and I think we owe the people of this state an apology."

Sen. Fain agreed that the lack of transparency was "inexcusable," saying:

"The process of waiting to the last minute to craft a compromise and the inexcusable lack of transparency in the final days of the session is something both Republicans and Democrats should agree flatly stinks."

Already one major reform has been introduced to avoid this type of secrecy going forward. Sen. Palumbo has prime sponsored a constitutional amendment to provide at least 72 hours for public review before a final vote by lawmakers on a bill. Explaining the reason for the proposal Sen. Palumbo said in a press release:

"This year's budget process has been a nightmare. With the threat of a government shutdown mere hours away, we produced and passed an operating budget without any public input. Not to mention, most legislators, myself included, were given only a few hours to review the budget—a document that is 620 pages long. This is unacceptable, especially when we are implementing monumental K-12 education reform that will have an impact for generations to come."

Along with considering this proposal there are several reforms that should be adopted to avoid this type of situation again. They include using something like the Utah base budget process at the beginning of session, acting on legislative transparency reforms as proposed by SB 6560 from 2014, and providing the same type of negotiating transparency to the budget that our state public labor contracts should follow (COIN or Civic Openness in Negotiations).

We'll have more to say on the various components of the budget deal in the coming weeks. In the meantime let's hope we don't experience too much more of this as more is learned about the implications of the 2017-19 budget deal and veto.

Statement from State Rep. Mike Steele on Budget

Friends and neighbors,

I'm sending an update to inform you the legislature has passed, and the governor has signed, the 2017-19 operating budget ahead of the midnight deadline. We have averted a government shutdown.

Additionally, the operating

budget also includes House Bill 2242, which fully funds K-12 education and meets all requirements under the McCleary Supreme Court ruling. Finally, all students in Washington, from Manson to Bellevue, will have equal access to a world-class education.

Transparency, accountability, and fiscal responsibility are all included in House Bill 2242. Teachers will receive pay raises, school districts will be subject to rigorous new reporting standards, and most property owners in the state will see their property taxes go down. Additionally, innovative achievement reforms to improve student outcomes will play an integral role in increasing student accountability and success.

At this moment, in the early morning hours of July 1, I'm currently on the House floor hoping to reappropriate funds to continue funding projects across Washington state. I look forward to updating you as soon as more details become available.

Rep. Cary Condotta releases statement on passage of budget agreement, education funding

Just hours before the end of the state's fiscal cycle Friday, the Washington House of Representatives passed a two-year state operating budget of $43.7 billion. Senate Bill 5883 was approved by a vote of 70-25.

In addition to the budget, lawmakers took action on an education funding bill that would pump an additional $7.3 billion into K-12 education over the next four years. House Bill 2242, which passed 67-26, is primarily funded through an 80-cent increase per $1,000 of assessed valuation in the state property tax. School districts may also enact an "enrichment levy" of $1.50 per $1,000 of assessed valuation.

Rep. Cary Condotta

A third measure, House Bill 2163, would enact several tax increases, including sales tax on bottled water and self-produced refinery fuels, and collection of sales tax on Internet sales. That measure passed the House, 53-40.

Rep. Cary Condotta, R-Wenatchee, voted against all three measures and provided the following statement:

"I give credit to our negotiators for the education policy in the new operating budget. However, this new budget increases spending by $5.2 billion — a 27 percent increase over four years — and that's just too much. I question the sustainability of such a large increase in the budget.

"It also enacts a substantial increase in taxes. I'm very concerned many people and small businesses across the 12th District will be paying higher property taxes under this plan. We already had $3 billion of additional revenue coming in to the state without tax increases. This adds another $2.2 billion in tax increases. Plus, it sweeps several important dedicated resources, such as the state's Public Works Assistance Account, which makes loans to local municipalities for important water and sewer infrastructure.

"Some are also taking a victory lap for reducing the business and occupation tax on manufacturing, bringing the rate down to the same as Boeing pays. While that is a good thing, the reduction is less than $60 million, versus $5 billion in new spending. We could have done better by giving all businesses the same rate as Boeing, which would have helped balance the spending.

"While there are positives, especially in the policy of education, there are just too many negatives that would hurt small businesses and people across our district. And that's why I could not support this package of bills."
