Cashmere entities among recipients of County Lodging Tax Grants

Ward Media / Cashmere Valley

WENATCHEE — Chelan County Commissioners greenlit the allocation of nearly $320,000 in lodging tax dollars toward various tourismrelated entities, benefitting a gamut of local organizations.

These funds, generated by local lodging establishments, are distributed with precision. Half of the yearly revenue is designated for six local chambers, Ohme Gardens, the Cascade Loop, and TREAD. Additionally, a part is reserved for the county's Visit Chelan County

The balance is annually earmarked for grants aiding tourism-related bodies, like festivals and museums. The Lodging Tax Advisory Committee (LTAC) thoroughly reviews applications, recommending disbursement to the Board of County Commissioners.

"LTAC budgeted $280,000 for this round of 2024 grant applications," said Commissioner Tiffany Gering, who chairs the nine-member advisory committee. "The committee recommended allocating nearly $40,000 more because of the quality of applications that came in. These dollars are an investment in our communities and the organizations that play a vital role in our tourismdependent economy."

In 2024, a total of 23 local groups and nonprofits will benefit from the $319,681 granted. This financial boost will support diverse endeavors, from marketing and outreach efforts to enhancing new and established festivals, museum exhibits, and event arrangements.

CASHMERE - Cashmere High School and Middle School recently introduced Nuestra Comunidad, a new club centered on community service and honoring Latino culture.

Named for its commitment to "our community," the club focuses on cultural awareness, community service, leadership, and educational opportunities for Hispanic and Latino students. Through collaborations with the school and community, Nuestra Comunidad has engaged in various projects, including community service initiatives and cultural celebrations like Día de los Muertos.

Cashmere High School Spanish education teacher and club advisor Tyler Theiss was instrumental in starting the club. At the middle school, the club's advisors are EL Para-Pro Erika Pina and Spanish teacher Molly Theiss.

Last year was the club's first full school year at the high school, and this year, the middle school has joined

"The group was formed to focus on the local community and what we have going on here, so the club's name, Nuestra Comunidad, means 'our community' in English," he said.

"With the blessing of our administration, we went ahead and got approval through our ASB leadership group," he said. "And we went through the process of becoming formally recognized by the Cashmere School District."

"Between the students, we identified four main components of our club that we wanted to focus on," Tyler said. "And obviously the first one is cultural awareness, and spreading Latin American culture, to our community and within our school obviously.'

"Our second focus is community service," he said. "So how can we take care of our community, which in Spanish Nuestra Comunidad translates to our community."

"The third component would be leadership," he said. "How are we able to empower our students and give them opportunities to develop leadership qualities?"

"And then the last one is access to higher education," he said. "Whether that means students are transitioning from high school into college, fouryear programs, two-year programs, or tech and trade schools. We just want to make sure that our Hispanic population, our Latino population, have all of the opportunities to be able to access those goals through college visits, and talking with different colleges and universities, having presentations and that kind of stuff. It's how we kind of try and accomplish that for school."

Molly and Piña said an essential aspect of the group is to spread cultural awareness.

Chelan County's Secure Crisis Residential Center is 1 of 2 in the state

Hershey: 'We are giving children options and choices – and hope'

By JILL FITZSIMMONS Chelan County public information

WENATCHEE - Capt. Edgar Reinfeld of the Wenatchee Police Department recalls one early morning on patrol when he came upon a 14-year-old girl alone on the streets of Wenatchee. At 2 a.m., it was 40 degrees and no one was answering the phone at her home in Chelan. The city's police department is unequipped to house children, and to drive the girl to her home in Chelan, not knowing if anyone would be there, was not an option. Reinfeld needed a safe place to take the teenager. He drove her to the Secure Crisis Residential Center (SCRC) at the Chelan County Juvenile Center in Wenatchee, one of only two SCRCs left in the state. The center serves as a safe temporary placement for mostly children who have run away from home but also for those found in dangerous circumstances.

"In the absence of criminal charges, when you have that unplaceable child who just needs a safe place to land temporarily while professionals can sort things out, the CRC is an exceptional resource," Reinfeld said. "These situations are really difficult in other communities that don't have this resource."

Operating out of one of the four secure units at the Chelan County Juvenile Center, the SCRC has been serving the local community since 1999, when there were similar facilities across the state. Over the years, reductions in state funding caused other facilities to close. The Wenatchee SCRC is the only one on the state's east side, with the other in Clallam County. Both have four beds.

The Chelan County Secure Crisis Residential Center has been operating out of one of the four secure units at the Chelan County Juvenile Center since 1999. The rooms are distinguished by the decorated doors.

At the Chelan County center, law enforcement placements are the most common reason a child stays at the SCRC. If an officer finds a child who has been reported as a runaway, the officer must first call the parent or guardian before taking them to the SCRC. Effective July 1, the law allows for at-risk youth who are in contempt of court to be placed in a SCRC.

To be housed at an SCRC, children: · Must be at least 12 years old and

- under 18 years old. Must meet legal placement
- They must be medically cleared. Although the SCRC is located in a juvenile detention living unit, it functions quite differently than conventional detention, including:

- · Parents or guardians are free to pick up a child at any time (with the recent exception of courtordered At-Risk Youth contempt
- Children may stay in the SCRC up to 72 hours (this time does not include weekends or holidays), with a maximum stay of five days.
- The stay is not court-ordered (with the recent exception of court-ordered At-Risk Youth contempt cases).
- While the unit is locked and children are monitored around the clock, a child's individual room is not locked. They are free to use the living areas in the unit or exercise areas in the juvenile
- · Children in the SCRC never come

KING 5 Evening profiles Bridgeport's Flour Tower

By Mike Maltais

Ward Media Staff Reporter

BRIDGEPORT Erickson, writer and field producer for KING-TV's weeknight program, Evening, was in Bridgeport last week reporting on the iconic Flour commercial-millturned-residence and the more than two dozen custom tree carvings spread throughout the city.

Erickson spent a portion of Tuesday afternoon, Dec. 19, speaking with Lela Wright, daughter of the late Bridgeport resident Scott Wright, the visionary who purchased the mill in 2006.

During her tenure with Evening, Erickson said she has filed so many stories for KING-TV that she cannot name a favorite because so many come to mind.

"I don't know if I have reached a thousand yet," said Erickson, "I probably have, but I haven't counted."

While her beat takes her all over the state of Washington, home is Sequim, made famous recently for the December premiere of the George Clooney movie "The Boys in the Boat." It's the true story of eight working class University of Washington rowers including Sequim late resident Joe Rantz - who won gold at the 1936 Olympics, defeating Hitler's German team.

Between sessions inside the spacious and eccentric fivestory home, Erickson filmed the building's exterior and surrounding landscape capture the mood and setting of the riverside residential site.

Wright, a resident of Hondo, New Mexico, about 50 miles west of Roswell, spoke on camera as Erickson filmed her standing near the riverbank west of the house. From that vantage point one could see the overhanging roofline where ice buildup from last year's winter storm fell several stories and crashed through the roof of the ground floor sunroom addition that overlooks the river.

"We're going to have to do something to fix that before it happens again," Wright said.

Wright described her father as a visionary who liked a challenge and always thought outside of the box.

"He was an amazing man with an incredible mind that never stopped turning," said Wright. "He was a Depressionage child, not afraid of hard

She noted that when her father first saw the old grain mill, it appealed to his outsidethe-box creativity.

"It just spoke to him and said, 'Can you save me?'" said Wright when her father told her of his decision to purchase the overgrown and abandoned derelict.

That was in 2006 when Scott Wright was a youngster of 74. He first built a residence west of the mill and did not start restoring the mill until he was 80. When it was largely finished three years later the 70-foot-tall structure - that once contained nine grain silos - featured four bedrooms and 6.5 bathrooms - one on every floor - among other rooms and amenities. Many of the restored 4x6 silo boards are now visible as flooring and stairs. The top floor's tiny peek-a-boo bath includes an incredible sweeping view of the Columbia River and points

Wright and his partner, Kathy Thompson, lived in eye-catching conversation piece until Wright's death last August at the age of 91.

Asked what she thought when her father told her what he planned with the concrete behemoth, Wright said, "I pretty much figured he was crazy, but it was a total labor

She said her father was shaped by the Depression when people took anything they could find and built anything they could and made something out of nothing.

"As he clearly did here,"

Erickson chuckled. Wright said that as her father researched the historic aspect of the area, he discovered that the mill, built in 1910, was here first and the town Bridgeport was built around it.

Water also appealed to Scott Wright since he spent decades

Wright said her father lived for 40 years on an 83-foot wooden sailboat - the Destiny

- built in 1934 and once owned by Howard Hughes. An added amenity to the Flour Tower is the only private boat dock on the river between Bridgeport and Brewster eight miles to

"It took him about six years to get all the licensing and permits," said Wright. "Water and the mill made this his home. I don't think he would have had one without the other.

Who would your dad hopes will buy this place?" Erickson asked.

"Somebody like himself who would really appreciate it," said Wright. "My dad had big visions for Bridgeport. He bought a lot of the vacant lots that were down on the river."

Mother-daughter Cheese Plate

Caren and Rory decided to come visit and taste the flavor of our little town. Rory (Caren's daughter) and Kat (our oldest) have been fast friends since high school. We all decided it'd be good to have a mother-daughter day rather than doing 'our own' things separately. Caren and I figured we'd have a good time; after all the girls are grown-ups now. I'm not sure the girls thought so; however, we raised them to be too polite to say otherwise.

Friday, we decided to enjoy in the touristy delights Kat and I seldom indulge in being as we live here. The eye candy of our little Christmas town did not disappoint in the company of Caren and daughter.

We wandered around in fresh air with the promise of snowflakes to come, rounded a corner and smelled popcorn. Caren was ecstatic, "you smell that?" she asked us as she started following her

He raised his head and made eye contact with me then glanced at Caren. "That looks delicious," she gushed. The fellow without altering his chewing rhythm as if it were the most normal thing in the world, leaned the bag of popcorn towards her and offered her some of his popcorn. I was chuckling as Caren back pedaled. "That's OK, but thank you," she told the older gentleman. I grinned as the old fellow tossed a few popped kernels into the air for us to catch. About the author: In 2000 Michele Priddy left the work force to become a stay-at-home mother and wife. Being a one-income family in today's society meant she had to learn to budget quickly. Food became a priority early because she wanted the children to have the best nutrition she could offer them even on a budget. She taught cooking classes at various churches in her community on "How to stretch the food dollar with simple ingredients". Michelle has put her kitchen strategies, stories and recipes in booklets, her church newsletter and in her hometown newspaper, The Goldendale Sentinel. hanging with friends one of which happened to be my daughter.

Caren, Rory and Kat wanted to check out the cheese place. They had goats when our girls were in school; made their own homemade goat cheese and all three had a hankering for a nibble or two of a remembered taste of goat goodness. Not near as enthused as Caren and the girls I navigated narrow stairs to the underground store where cheese is sold just in time to hear a young man behind the counter explaining to a lady customer across the counter about a fantastic cheese, as he carefully, gently, passed her a sample. From the shine in his eyes; the respect in his tone; the careful touch of his thumb and forefinger on the disposable sample spoon as he passed her a nibble of what I could only imagine was a rare and transformative substance that would tickle my taste buds and offer beneficial bacteria to my digestive tract I knew I had to have some of it. So, I waited in line for my chance to sample some of that cheese.

When it came my turn, I wasn't disappointed. As Caren and the girls made a bee line for the exotic goat and sheep cheeses at the far end of the long glass display case, I sampled half the spoonful of cheesy goodness the young man gave me and placed my order.

By that time Kat, eyes shining, just had to share a taste of some glorious goat cheese. I took a taste, wrinkled my nose and thought 'yuck' but didn't say it. "You don't like it?" she asked in a surprised tone. I shook my head 'no' and offered her the remaining half of my glorious sample.

It hit her tongue; her nose wrinkled; I could tell she wanted to spit it out. Well, I guess there's no accounting for taste. All four of us left the shop with a couple of different cheeses then headed home to enjoy our purchases.

We never did find the popcorn stand.

Cashmere drops nail-biters to Goats

Ward Media Staff Reporter

 $CASHMERE\ -\ For\ the\ first$ time in more than 10 years but the Cashmere varsity girls' basketball team fell to the visiting Chelan Goats, 42-37, in a nail-biting home court contest

The first quarter set the tone for the game as Cashmere took an early lead and finished the quarter with a narrow 14-12 advantage. Chelan turned the tide in the second quarter and outscored Cashmere to tie the game, 22-all, going into halftime.

The third quarter found the teams neck-and-neck as each side scored 14 points.

Chelan intensified its defense and held Cashmere to a single point. The Goats connected for some crucial baskets, inching closer to victory. With a final push, Chelan sealed the game with a five-point victory.

"Tonight, we didn't play our best basketball, but we played consistent throughout the whole game. It was enough for us to get a historic win against Cashmere," said Chelan head coach Nick Longmire. "It has been over a decade since the Chelan girls have been able to secure a win against the Bulldogs. They have a great program and are coached improve their regular season record to 5-3.

Goats by five

The Bulldogs lost an overtime battle, 53-48, in their CTL squeaker against the Defense made the difference as Chelan managed to build an eight-point lead during the first quarter that dwindled to just one, 25-24, at halftime.

The Goats made another run at the start of the third quarter and momentarily held a10point lead before back-to-back three pointers by Cashmere's Landon Baker and Riley Hatmaker. Isaac Wilson paced the Goats in the third quarter with nine of his game high 18

The teams were knotted at 40 going into the fourth quarter with Chelan starters Luca Faletto and Ryan Rainville on the bench with four fouls each.

With the game tied at 46 and just seconds remaining, Cashmere's leading scorer, Rylan Nelson, drove to the basket under the tight defense of Chelan's Zack Noyd. Nelson, who finished with 14 points, was unable to get his driving bank shot to fall and Chelan's Kellen Reinhart secured the rebound as time expired sending the game into overtime.

Overtime began with a driving reverse lay-in from Noyd. After forcing a pair of turnovers, Chelan's Dom Solarza and Isaac Wilson each said Chelan head coach Tony got to the free throw line and made one of two shots.

Chelan forced a ten-second violation with a full court press and less than a minute to go on the clock. On the ensuing play Kellen Reinhart was fouled and put the Goats up five by hitting one of two free throws.

Landon Baker answered quickly for Cashmere with a bucket and brought Cashmere to within three points with 10 seconds remaining. The Goats showed poise against Cashmere's full court pressure defense. Cashmere was forced to foul Jacob Allen who hit both shots to seal the victory. "It was great to see the guys force so many turnovers near the end of the game,"

The Goats forced 23 turnovers and had just 11 themselves.

"Anytime you can hold a team to just eight points over the final 12 minutes of the game, your chances of getting a win are pretty good," Callero Cashmere's leading scorers were Nelson with 14 and Baker with 13. Chelan got 18 points from Wilson, 12 from Rainville and eight points from Reinhart. The win improves Chelan's record to 7-1 overall and 3-1 in the CTL. Cashmere drops to 2-4 overall and 0-3 in the CTL.
