Bridgeport revisits revised city code items

By MIKE MALTAIS Ward Media Staff Reporter

BRIDGEPORT - The city council put three title revisions in the Bridgeport Municipal Code (BMC) back on the table at its regular monthly meeting last Wednesday, April 17, so council members can review and approve proposed changes before the revisions are forwarded to city attorney Julie Norton for legal review. The three BMC revisions address right-of-way (Title 10). public events (Title 5.20), and private events (Title 5.18).

Right-of-Way

Revisions to street parking are proposed to enable public works personnel to adequately plow snow during the winter months. The proposed revision reads in part:

During a snow event, parking shall be prohibited on all streets within the municipal limits of the city between the hours of one (1) a.m. and eight (8) a.m.

The proposed revision replaces the previous the odd/even parking rule:

On all streets in the city from November 15th to March 15th of each year, parking will only be permitted on the odd-numbered street side on the odd-numbered days of the month and on the even-numbered street side on the even-numbered days of the month.

A second revision limits vehicle parking time:

No vehicle shall be parked on any street, alley, or right-of-way of the city for a consecutive period of more than seventy-two (72) hours.

Public Event

'Special Event' has been changed to 'Public Event' to include not only old standbys like Bridgeport Daze but any new event "that is to be held in whole or in part upon cityowned and controlled property and/or public rights-of-way, or, if held wholly upon non-city-owned and controlled property, will nevertheless affect or impact the ordinary and normal use by the general public of city-owned or controlled property or public rightsof-way within the vicinity of the event.

Private Event

"We used to call it a family function," said clerk/treasurer Judy Brown. "We've had a lot of complaints from community members about our event centers in town and those are private events."

Two key provisions of a private event are:

No charge for admission.

No charge for alcohol. Alcohol (liquor board permit required) can be served without charge.

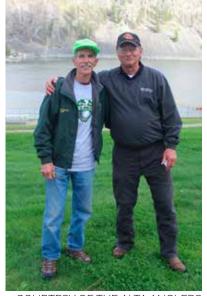

A permit for a private event must be obtained from the city clerk-treasurer at least 15 days prior to the event.

Private events are not open to the public. If a private event is held at a private event, the owner of the residence must be present.

Mayor Sergio said the more clearly defined event provisions will give the city more authority to enforce noise control and other activity that has been the source of community complaints.

Ward Media Staff Reporter PATEROS - The city council has denied permission for the Washington Department of Fish and Wildlife (WDFW) to use city facilities to launch and stage a fish monitoring PIT (Passive Integrated Transponder) barge into the Columbia and Methow rivers. The council issued the denial during its regular monthly meeting on April 15, until WDFW resolves permitting issues with Douglas PUD over the usage and placement of the barge. Douglas County PUD General Manager Gary Ivory addressed the council to explain the PUD's position and the concerns the utility has over where the barge would be anchored and the effects that would have. PATEROS-The Alta Lake Anglers, a family tradition that began more than six decades ago this month, will return to the shores of its namesake for its 65th gathering on April 27, and this time, they have a city declaration to prove it.

At the regular monthly meeting of the city council April 15, Mayor Kelly Hook read a proclamation declaring Saturday, April 27, Alta Anglers Appreciation Day.

WHEREAS, two fathers and four sons from the Anderson and Dahl families from Kirkland, Washington, first traveled to Pateros in April 1959 to camp and fish at Alta Lake State Park for opening day of trout fishing season; and

 $WHEREAS, those \ original \ six$ fishermen s enjoyed the recreational opportunities provided by Alta Lake, Pateros, and the Okanogan that they continued to return in subsequent years. They also invited relatives, school friends, and co-workers to join them for opening day at Alta Lake, who in turn invited their own family and friends to join in the annual gathering; and

WHEREAS, the publisher of the Snohomish (Washington) Tribune determined the ever-increasing group needed an identity, and in 1960's named them "the Alta Anglers"; and

WHEREAS, the Alta Anglers have returned to Alta Lake in late April for over six decades, with the exception of the 2020 Covid closure year; and

WHEREAS, the Alta Anglers have grown from the original six Kirklanders to over 500 members and fish from the lake.

present and past from dozens of families throughout the U.S. and abroad, with the fourth generation now in attendance; and

WHEREAS, the Alta Anglers have been dedicated advocates of and ambassadors for Alta Lake and Pateros for 65 years; and

WHEREAS, the City of Pateros recognizes the economic impact from the Alta Anglers returning each year to camp at our campgrounds, fish and golf at Alta Lake, shop in our stores, stay in our hotels, and eat at our restaurants - with benefits to not just Pateros but also to businesses

in Brewster, Chelan, Wenatchee, and Winthrop: and

WHEREAS, the Alta Anglers have showed their affinity to Pateros and its surroundings by helping raise funds to support recovery efforts after the Carlton Complex Fire in 2015, as well as contributed to efforts to preserve the Whistlin' Pine Ranch; and

WHEREAS, the Alta Anglers are now returning for their 65th consecutive year to celebrate families, friends, and fun at Alta Lake

Now, therefore, I declare Saturday, April 27, 2024, to be Alta Anglers Appreciation Day.

Kelly Hook, Mayor, City of Pateros

The Quad City Herald wrote about the 60th Alta Anglers gathering (Issue 17, April 24, 2018), describing the original 1959 outing by Rod Anderson and his three sons, Chris, 10, Tom, eight, and Steve, six, and friend, Dick Dahl with son, Rich, also eight. Today Tom Anderson and Rich Dahl are the remaining survivors of the original six.

The Anglers' 2015 visit to Alta was just months after the 2014 Carlton Complex wildfire, which consumed homes, the golf resort, and facilities, including picnic tables.

Some welcome news for this year's group is that Whistlin' Pine is back up and operating with its campground, cabins, RV sites, trail rides, and more, thanks to Tara Gokey, daughter of the late owner, Brian Varrelman.

What Alta Lake ranger Sharon Soelter said five years ago still applies: "Such loyal and long-term traditions tend to blossom in state parks.'

Multimedia Sales Manager National Library Workers Day supporters across America are celebrating the National Library Workers Day, Day sponsored by the American Library Association-Allied Professional Association (ALA-APA); THEREFORE, be it resolved that I, Kelly Hook, Mayor of Pateros, proclaim that · Winston Churchill Day Tuesday, April 9, 2024, was Pateros librarian Ana Trejo riday "National Library Workers riday Day." I encourage all in this riday community to take advantage hurs.

of the variety of library resources available and to thank library workers for their exceptional contributions to American life.

For those who failed to appreciate the significance of National Library Workers Day, consider that it was ushered in by a total solar eclipse the previous day, April 8. To be fair, a handful of other national days – National Former Prisoner of War Recognition Day, Winston Churchill Day, and National Be Kind to Lawyers Day - also claim April 9, or the second Tuesday in April, to celebrate. The list includes:

of War Recognition Day • National Gin and Tonic

- National Library Day April 9, 2024 (Tuesday of National Library Week)
- National Library Workers Day - April 9, 2024 (Tuesday of National Library Week)
- National Unicorn Day

said the regional library network observed the occasion as part of National Library Week.

"On our Facebook page for NCW Libraries they shared recognition and shout-out posts to the staffs all over the county," said Trejo. "It was mostly an online celebration."

Trejo, a 2014 graduate and class valedictorian at Bridgeport High School, has been the city's librarian since 2018. Prior to that she served as the customer service technician at the Bridgeport and Brewster library branches. Prior to her employment with NCW Libraries Trejo worked with the migrant HeadStart program in Bridgeport.

Trejo grew up in Bridgeport and attended Washington State University, graduating in 2018 with a BA in Spanish Language and a BS in Biology.

How to Choose An Antihistamine

When I checked in with my 80-year-old stepmother, Joyce, yesterday, she could barely talk.

"I have allergies to pollen every spring, and I usually take Claritin® for them. But this year, it isn't helping. What else can I take?"

When you come in contact with something you're allergic to, your body releases histamine, which triggers a cascade of symptoms we associate with an allergic reaction: nasal congestion, runny nose, itchy, watery eyes, and sinus pressure. Jovce was suffering from all of those.

Antihistamines counteract the effects of histamine by blocking the places where it locks on. Without the ability to lock on, histamine's allergic actions are blocked, and you'll experience relief from your allergic reaction symptoms. There are 2 main categories of antihistamine medicines: sedating and nonsedating agents. Sedating antihistamines often cause drowsiness and have a drying action. That drying action helps relieve a runny nose and watery eyes. Non-sedating agents are nearly as effective but have less drying action.

Antihistamines don't work the same in everyone. Some will relieve your allergy symptoms better than others. Many try more than one before finding the one that works well for them.

Occasionally, an antihistamine can lose its effectiveness over time, like what happened to Joyce. When that happens, if you switch to a different drug for several months, the original one will regain its effectiveness.

Older antihistamines like Benadryl® (diphenhydramine), doxylamine, and chlorpheniramine cause drowsiness in most people.

Newer antihistamines like Claritin[®] (loratadine) and

Allegra® (fexophenadine) rarely cause drowsiness. Unfortunately, these nonsedating allergy medicines are much less effective at drying runny noses or watery eyes than older agents.

Zyrtec[®] (cetirizine) and Xyzal[®] (levocetirizine) have more drying action and cause much less risk of sedation than older agents. While at least 50% of people notice drowsiness on older agents, barely 10% notice drowsiness on these.

Since Joyce is suffering from a runny nose and watery eyes while taking Claritin®, switching to either Zyrtec[®] or Xyzal[®] should give her relief while having a low risk of causing sedation.

If either of those doesn't provide relief, several other older antihistamine options are available: chlorpheniramine, brompheniramine, and triprolidine. I prefer triprolidine because it dries up my runny nose better than any other antihistamine.

Triprolidine was previously only available in combination with a decongestant, as Actifed®. Today, it is in Flonase Night Time Allergy Relief®, along with the Mucinex® Night Shift Cold and Flu, Mucinex® Night Shift Severe Cold and Flu, and Mucinex[®] Night Shift Sinus.

not recommend I do Mucinex[®] Night Shift Severe Cold and Flu or Mucinex® Night Shift Sinus because they contain phenylephrine. Phenylephrine increases blood pressure without relieving nasal congestion.

Joyce could also trv Astepro®, a newer nasal spray containing azelastine. Azelastine is both an antihistamine and mast cell stabilizer. It not only blocks the action of histamine but also prevents its release. Astepro® can be used in addition to taking pills or other nose sprays for allergic rhinitis, like the steroid nasal sprays Flonase® and Nasacort®.

If one of these options still doesn't help, she could use Benadryl®(diphenhydramine). It is the most potent antihistamine available without a prescription but can cause significant drowsiness.

Diphenhydramine is sold as a non-prescription sleeping pill as Tylenol PM® and Sominex II. Unlike newer drugs for allergies, Benadryl® needs to be taken 3 to 4 times daily for best results.

If Joyce has to resort to taking Benadryl®, I would suggest she take it just at bedtime and use a less sedating agent or a nasal spray during the day.

Here Are 5 Tips on Choosing an Antihistamine: 1. Don't delay.

Antihistamines work best if taken before or as soon as possible after exposure to an allergy trigger. They are less effective after your nose stuffs up and your eyes start itching. 2. Choose not to snooze.

Non-sedating antihistamines like loratidine (Claritin[®]) or fexofenadine (Allegra®) are the safest options if you have to drive or use machinery.

3. Try a different agent.

If your first antihistamine choice doesn't help you, try another one. It's not unusual to get very little relief from one antihistamine but have good results with a different one.

4. Consider a combo.

You can combine nasal sprays and allergy pills, like using Flonase®, with your antihistamine or Astepro® nasal spray. Adding an oral decongestant to your antihistamine may also help if you still have a stuffy nose.

5. Watch for these warning signs.

If you experience wheezing, shortness of breath, greencolored sputum, or fever, it may be more serious than allergies. Consult your doctor without delay.

Brewster school district resubmits EP&O levy to April 23 special election

By MIKE MALTAIS Ward Media Staff Reporter

BREWSTER - Voters got a second opportunity to consider a Brewster school district fouryear replacement Education, Programs, and Operations (EP&O) levy that appeared on the April 23 special election. The district held a special meeting last February to resubmit its EP&O levy that failed to secure passage in last November's general election. The district's website, brewsterbears.org, includes a breakdown of how the levy dollars would be applied.

Athletics – The levy funds the entirety of the district's General Fund spending on athletics and activities. The state does not consider these part of basic education.

Safety – The levy also pays for the district's student supervision and security staff. The state provides little funding for safety and security services.

Staff – Levy dollars are used for staff in each and every school building, including teachers, nurses, paraeducators, counselors, and more.

Officers from Fisheries and Oceans Canada relocate Emerson, a popular elephant seal, from Victoria, B.C., this month.

By Kyle Melnick The Washington Post

After he surfaced on a British Columbia beach this month, Emerson the elephant seal became a local celebrity. Fans petted the 2-year-old, posed with him for selfies and tried to rub noses with him.

Emerson didn't seem to mind the attention, but Canadian wildlife officials worried that the roughly 500-pound animal might come to feel threatened and attack someone. They relocated him to a beach about 125 miles away, where they hoped he would stay.

A week later, beachgoers in Victoria, B.C., spotted an elephant seal in the ocean. Morgan Van Kirk, a fishery officer for Fisheries and Oceans Canada, doubted Emerson could have glided back that quickly.

He was wrong. Emerson had swum about 20 miles per day to return to his favorite beach.

"He's obviously made it very clear that he wants to be in the Victoria area," Van Kirk, whose agency is an arm of the Canadian government, told The Washington Post.

Emerson has been a star since he was born in Washington state in January 2022, receiving attention from visitors and volunteers at the state park where he lived. His mother, Elsie Mae, was already well known for not minding when people at the state park approached her.

Park officials relocated Emerson in April 2022 in an effort to protect him from his human fans until he could return to the water. A spokesman for the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, which helped transport Emerson, declined to tell the Skagit Valley Herald the seal pup's new location.

But Emerson returned to the public eye after being spotted on a beach in Victoria in the spring of 2023. He was molting, a rigorous process in which seals shed their fur and underlying skin.

Emerson wandered onto roads and walkways, requiring wildlife officers to direct traffic around him and tape off areas where he was lying, Van Kirk said. He was relocated to two other beaches, Van Kirk said, but he always returned to Victoria.

After officers drove Emerson 260 miles to Tahsis, B.C., in September, he remained out of sight for a while. Officials thought they might have seen the last of him.

But on April 1, Emerson was spotted in a public park in Victoria, prompting wildlife officials to tape off the area and post signs urging people to stay away. He had once again returned to land to molt.

Emerson received more attention than ever as he lay in the middle of public walkways. When he moved, volunteers for Fisheries and Oceans Canada followed him and taped off those areas, too. But people kept approaching him, so officials decided to relocate him - again.

On April 5, more than 100 people watched as five officers tried to lead Emerson toward the back of a van to bring him to a private beach on Vancouver Island. But the seal pup must have recognized the van from the previous year, Van Kirk said, because he resisted for nearly five hours. He budged only after officers brought a capture juvenile fish that will be fitted with the transponder

tags. A special PIT detection raft anchored near the mouth of the Methow would record different vehicle.

When an elephant seal was spotted off the coast of Victoria a week later, Van Kirk said he couldn't believe it - Emerson was back. Elephant seals can run on as little as two hours of sleep, but Van Kirk was surprised Emerson swam that fast while molting.

The pup has only grown more popular since his latest resurfacing. Volunteers with Fisheries and Oceans Canada are constantly supervising him, taping off areas to ensure people don't approach him.

Roxanne Beltran, an ecology and biology professor at the University of California at Santa Cruz, said many elephant seals travel to locations where they feel comfortable - typically their birthplaces - when they begin molting around April. She said it's still a mystery how elephant seals know how to get back there.

"Something about [Emerson's] past experiences have informed his decision to stay, and whether that's the amount of space or the amount of food ... he seems to have found a place that he likes,' Beltran said.

Van Kirk said wildlife officials will relocate Emerson again only if people harass him. Approaching Emerson is a safety risk, he said, because elephant seals can carry contagious diseases and weigh more than 4,000 pounds when they're fully grown.

Emerson is expected to finish molting in a few weeks, and Van Kirk is optimistic that he will then return to the ocean.

"As much as we all like him," Van Kirk said, "hopefully we never see him again."

WDFW Wenatchee office, Chad Jackson from Ephrata, Region 2 Director and Brock Hoenes from Ephrata explained a cutting-edge spring chinook salmon and steelhead tagging project in the Twisp, Chewuch, and Upper Methow rivers to collect data on survival factors of the popular sport fish.

The Bureau of Reclamation has teamed up with WDFW to fund the PIT project.

The reason behind the study was chronically low egg-tosmolt survival rates of about 1.3 percent in the Methow River compared to a 3.1 percent rate in the Wenatchee River. WDFW hopes tagging and monitoring fish passage can help identify the causes of the low numbers.

Smolt traps in both the lower Chewuch and lower Upper Methow rivers will data on every tagged fish that migrated past the platform. The problem lies with the location of the PIT barge. WDFW wants to place it near the takeout spot on SR153 along the west shore of the Methow River upstream from the mouth. The PUD objects to the placement for stream silt management, boater safety, and liability reasons.

Since the barge is an overwater structure and would anchor in a PUD reservoir, WDFW requested PUD approval to deploy the barge. WDFW also needs council approval to use the city launch facilities.

Ivory said the proposed location of the barge is problematic for several reasons.

"We have what are called 'groins' that are four big fingers that stick out into the river over there," said Ivory. "That's the south bank near the mouth, and the area becomes heavily silted.

"Years ago, our engineers designed rock fingers that stick out into the river." said Ivory. "The fingers are usually submerged, but in the springtime, when we get a lot of water running down the river, we lower the (Pateros) reservoir to a very low level, and those finders push the water farther out into the river and scour all that sediment and brings it out into the (Columbia) river."

Ivory said the fingers interfere with having the WDFW barge in that area.

"This is natural river erosion," said Ivory. "We like to keep that cleared out."

Ivory said the PUD representatives have met with WDFW's director and offered other solutions to collect the PIT data in different ways but that and somebody gets killed or injured on that barge, our attorneys have told us we are the deep pockets...and they would come after us."

Ivory related two incidents with the WDFW barge anchored in the Wenatchee River.

"That barge has broken loose twice and ended up in Rock Island Dam," Ivory said.

Ivory noted that WDFW might decide to deploy the barge anyway, but the agency has been advised that it cannot use PUD-controlled locations to stage it.

"This data is not important in the scheme and scope of the data that is being collected on the fish," said Ivory and added comments about the PUD's own Habitat Conservation Plan.

"The Wells project has the best passage on the Columbia River," said Ivory. "We are responsible for 96 percent of the fish that enter our reservoir until they pass through our project and get downstream."

The PUD also must replace the remaining four percent of fish lost to predation and other causes.

"We have a Methow with its PIT barges.

"We do at both Wells and Rocky Reach," Ivory said.

will be a seven or eight-day complete closure of Old 97 tentatively scheduled for the 29th.

The Swamp Creek Project got underway last month with representatives from the National Resources and Conservation Service (NRCS), USDA, and DJ&A engineering, surveying, and environmental consultants from Missoula, Montana. The project will involve a Preliminary Investigation and Feasibility Report (PIFR), where specialists will examine the drainage to evaluate workable options for potential flooding in response to FEMA's latest floodplain designations.

"This will be a pretty goodsized project, probably $10 million-plus," said Webster.

The city is finishing its $12 million multi-year water/ manganese project. All but one of the city's three well houses are also done.

"We have one well house left, the old one up Paradise Hill," said Ruiz.

The old insulation inside the Paradise Hill well house is being tested for the possible presence of PFOS, a hazardous substance the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has designated a forever chemical.

"We were hoping we could it with the $500,000 direct appropriation we have but it's not going to be enough," said Ruiz. "We need $2 million."

The sewer project to upgrade the treatment plant, UV light system, and undersized piping is funded by a combination of a $2.7 million direct appropriation, $900,000 Community Development Block Grant (CDBG), a 50/50 grant/loan from the Department of Ecology. Ruiz said requisite cultural and biological surveys have delayed this year's construction start date.

Ruiz brought up an interesting point about the treated water the city discharges into the Columbia River. "We are putting cleaner water into the river," said Ruiz. "We had to do a study on that to see what that will do."

The public pool is full of water, and solar warming will begin soon. Webster said the circulation pumps will start around May 9 after the PUD cutoff to avoid a demand charge. When the pump exceeds a set wattage use three times in a month the demand charge is triggered and then assessed for the full year.

That started a council discussion on strategies to investigate any avenue to get around monthly PUD demand charges that boost the costs to maintain the pool. The city is drafting a letter to other county cities that have public pools -Twisp, Omak, Okanogan, and Tonasket - to see what might be done to work with Okanogan PUD to reduce pool power costs.

Numbers Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bendina puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off. so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!
