OKANOGAN – If you like golf, classic cars, or just a good time for a good cause, circle Saturday, June 8, on the calendar. OK Quilts of Valor #95848, the folks who fashion handmade quilts for our military veterans, is holding a Car Show and Golf Tournament Fundraiser at the Okanogan Valley Golf Club at 105 Danker Cutoff Road in Okanogan.

The car show runs from 7 a.m. until noon, followed by the golf tournament from 1-6 p.m. The entry includes dinner for the golfers plus a payout for the top three gross and net scores. The cost is $75 for gold and car entries

BRIDGEPORT – Among the many small white crosses tipped with American flags decorating veterans' graves in the Bridgeport Memorial Cemetery, there are four painted gold that represent special meaning. Those are the four marking the final resting places of one Brewster and three Bridgeport High School graduates lost in the Vietnam conflict.

Pateros tennis court renovation project back in the game for state funding

By MIKE MALTAIS
Ward Media Staff Reporter

PATEROS – Earlier in mid-March, the city submitted a $565,000 application to the state Recreation and Conservation Office (RCO) Community Outdoor Athletic Facilities (COAF) Fund to completely renovate the city's three tennis courts used for both tennis and pickleball.

The COAF is a new program that will provide grants to build, expand, or renovate outdoor athletic facilities. The Legislature provided $12 million with the potential for an additional $12 million in the 2025-27 biennium for a total of $24 million for the current grant round.

The funding is allocated among five regions of the state according to population. Okanogan County is included among eight counties in the Northeast Region, with a 2024 allocation of $1,212,051 and a 2025 allocation of $2,424,102.

Grants range from $50,000 to $1.2 million.

The city website, pateros.com, states that the tennis courts were originally constructed with RCO funds in 1973. They remain generally sound and have been consistently maintained by the community over the past 50 years. The underlying pavement is shrinking and failing, and annual repairs are not keeping ahead of the cracking. Full replacement of the court subbase and surface will be a much better value for the facility. The repair costs to the courts and facility are climbing as the facility ages.

The primary focus of the court renovation project is to repair the court surfaces for long term reduction in maintenance costs. Other needed repairs to the facility include:

- Electrical items, broken lights, replacing breaker boxes, electrical panels, and light controllers.
- Fencing repairs and a practice wall. It is expected that repairs will be required to fencing during the process of replacing the courts.
- Some basic facility improvements, such as replacement of restroom fixtures, painting, and basic repairs.

RCO posted the results on May 10, and that posting indicated that Pateros missed the cut for the final selection round by a mere .03 points on the agency's scoring system.

City Administrator Jord Wilson reported to the May 20 city council meeting that RCO later announced a scoring error on May 17 and that Pateros did indeed make the cut and is invited to compete in the final round of funding.

"That's important for the city because there's no way we can pay for those ourselves," Wilson said.

Pateros awarded Ecology grant for stormwater plan

By MIKE MALTAIS
Ward Media Staff Reporter

PATEROS – The City does not have a stormwater plan, but that may soon change thanks to a $103,199 grant from the state Department of Ecology (DOE) to pay for drafting one.

City Administrator Jord Wilson announced the award at the regular monthly city council meeting on May 20. The council, in turn, voted to accept the 40-page agreement outlining the scope of the project,

The city's existing stormwater system is about 60 years old and was installed between 1960 and 1965 when the city relocated to higher ground to make way for the elevation of the Wells Dam pool. No major upgrades have been made since then, and DOE considers the system past its estimated useful life. Untreated system discharges enter the Methow and Columbia rivers, both of which are on the impaired waters list for temperature.

The four potential sources of stormwater are:

1. Streets in the lower residential neighborhoods with storm drains.
 2. Highway, commercial streets, and parking lots in the downtown commercial district.
 3. Streets and parking lots in the industrial district.
 4. Runoff from surrounding orchards and slopes.
- "We have 13 or 15 outflows into the Columbia River," said Wilson. "My personal goal would be to reduce those as much as possible - maybe not on my watch - but in the future because I guarantee you Ecology is going to want that."

The city will use the plan as a resource to plan, fund, and construct future stormwater improvements. DOE has outlined a series of steps to complete the plan.

- Conduct a stormwater facilities and connections inventory including a conditions assessment.
- Collect system and mapping data using field reconnaissance and perform hydrologic modeling to determine peak and volume stormwater flows.

Evaluate water quality treatment best management practices (BMPs) and conveyance alternatives.

- Examine the conditions of each known outflow to determine structural integrity and capacity.
- Assess how water-quality BMPs may be incorporated into or replace each outflow.

The city's funding match for the grant is $5,432.53.

Brewster school bands perform in Chelan's Memorial Day Parade

RUTHEDNA KEYS/WARD MEDIA

The Brewster High School Band, under the direction of Alicia Pulsifer, marched in the Lake Chelan Chamber of Commerce's 27th annual Memorial Day Parade held on Thursday evening, May 23 in Chelan. The band was one of three marching bands in the parade, along with many other entries. Memorial Day, observed on the last Monday of May, honors the men and women who died while serving in the U.S. military.

Quad City Herald Ward Media

Chelan, WA - The Brewster High School and Middle School Bands, both under the direction of Alicia Pulsifer, participated in the Lake Chelan Chamber of Commerce's 27th annual Memorial Day Parade on Thursday evening, May 23, in Chelan.

The two school bands were among three marching bands and numerous other entries in the parade, which honored the men and women who lost their lives while serving in the U.S. military. Memorial Day is observed annually on the last Monday of May.

The Brewster School District's participation in the parade showcased the talent and dedication of its young musicians, as well as the community's commitment to honoring the sacrifices made by our nation's fallen heroes.

Genealogist to discuss Homestead Act's impact at WAGS hybrid meeting

NCW News Ward Media

WENATCHEE - The Wenatchee Area Genealogical Society (WAGS) is set to host a hybrid meeting on Monday, June 10, 2023, at 2:00 p.m. The event will feature a presentation by renowned genealogist Cyndi Ingle, titled "How the Homestead Act Shaped My Family . . . and Maybe Yours."

Attendees can join the meeting in person at the FamilySearch Center at 667 10th Street, East Wenatchee, or via Zoom. Those interested in attending the virtual session should contact Library@ wags-web.org to receive the necessary Zoom information.

The presentation will explore the impact of the Homestead Act on Ingle's family history and how it may have influenced the lives of other families as well. The Homestead Act, signed into law by President Abraham Lincoln in 1862, granted land to individuals who were willing to settle and cultivate it, playing a significant role in the westward expansion of the United States.

This event is free and open to the public. For general information, please call 509-782-4046.

New Western themed market event coming to Douglas County fairgrounds

NCW News Ward Media

WATERVILLE - The Douglas County Fairgrounds is set to host a new event on June 1 and 2 called the Junk Rodeo -- Western Market. Despite its name, the event is not an actual rodeo but rather a unique shopping experience with a Western twist. According to Carolyn Morley, the Fair Manager, the Junk Rodeo will feature a wide variety of vendors offering western-inspired goods, including boho, vintage, rustic, farmhouse, and repurposed items, as well as trendy fashion and more. The event aims to showcase local talent and businesses from across the state of Washington.

"This market has turned into an EXPERIENCE you will not want to miss," Morley stated in a press release. "With barns full of shopping, so many talented artisans + makers, plus good food, sips + sweets, and of course some fun cocktails and photo ops!"

The event organizers are excited to venture into this new event space and promise an enjoyable experience for all attendees. Over 50 vendors are expected to participate in the Junk Rodeo, which will take place in the barns of the Douglas County Fairgrounds.

Tickets for the event are priced at just $5, making it an affordable outing for those looking to enjoy a day of shopping and entertainment. More information about the Junk Rodeo -- Western Market can be found on the North Central Washington Fair's website at www.ncwfair.org.

OBITUARY

Verona "Ronni" Maurine Schnibbe

Verona "Ronni" Maurine Schnibbe passed away at the age of 100 on May 15, 2024 in College Place, Washington. Ronni was born on December 7, 1923 in College Place, Washington to Keith Montanye and Violet Thompson Montanye. Her childhood was spent in Goldendale, Washington, then on a ranch in north central Washington's Aeneas Valley, where the Montanye family moved in the 1930s. Ronni attended a year of high school at PUC Prep, and graduated from Auburn Adventist Academy, then attended Walla Walla College (now University), where she worked in the registrar's office, was on staff at the Collegian, was the girls' club president, and finished her bachelor's degree in English (though journalism was what she really loved). While in college, Ronni met Fred Schnibbe, who she went on to marry right after her graduation, on June 20, 1948. Fred and Ronni spent the majority of their lives in the Brewster area in Washington's north Cascades, where they raised their three boys, and Fred was a family practice doctor. Over the course of her life, Ronni volunteered at many places, including the WWU Havstad Alumni Center, WWU Church, WW General Hospital, hospice, and Hosts Program at Brewster Elementary School, and other places in the Brewster area, but her family, friends, and horses brought her the most joy.

Ronni is survived by her son Dale (Ann), daughters-in-law Winnie Wied and DeeAnn Schnibbe (Rob Gohl), and her sister-in-law Florence Montanye, along with grandchildren Liesl Schnibbe (Stephen Richmond), Heidi Schnibbe Hayes, Eric Schnibbe (Shannon), Tonya Burnham (Jared), and Jacob Schnibbe. Her great-grandchildren are Koen and Addison Hayes, Cole and Oliver Burnham, and Poppy and James Schnibbe. Ronni is preceded in death by her husband of 71 years, Fred; sons Robert and Richard; parents, Keith and Violet; and all three siblings, Virginia "Ginger", Ted, and Mike.

A Celebration of Life service will be held at Walla Walla University Church in Heubach Chapel on June 9, 2024, at 11:00 am.

In lieu of flowers, memorial contributions may be made to the Brewster Adventist Christian School at 115 Valley Rd. Brewster, Washington. Family and friends are invited to share memories of Ronni and sign the online guestbook at mountainview-colonialdewitt.com.

Library outreach brings hope to incarcerated youth

By QUINN PROPST
Ward Media Staff Reporter

WENATCHEE—For Wenatchee Public Library employees Chelsea Evans and Molly Schuringa, outreach with youth at the Chelan County Juvenile Detention Center is one of their favorite parts of their job.

Their least favorite part is that they only get to go once a month.

At each visit, they bring books and activities like crafts, games, or STEM projects to do with the children.

Recently, they made native flower arrangements with the children, which was a popular activity. Comments from the incarcerated kids included:

"I miss seeing flowers."
"Can I bring these into my cell?"

"This is my favorite thing about nature."

"I love nature so much, when I get out I am going to touch and smell everything ..."

"I miss nature."
"I love flowers so much."

Michelle Campbell has been teaching children at the Chelan JDC for 13 years and appreciates the library's outreach program and what it brings to her students.

"It's just been such an amazing connection with the students because Molly and Chelsea really bring community into the juvenile detention center because the kids don't have that except for, you know, within their units and with the staffing," she said. "It makes them feel connected to the community."

The Chelan JDC serves youth ages up to 18 from Chelan and Grant counties. The school program is run through the Wenatchee School District.

Visits begin with books. Evans and Schuringa bring books that have been requested and books they think the kids will like.

"We really focus on bringing in diverse books for them to be able to relate to or find something of themselves in," Schuringa said.

Kids share about the books they have read in the last month and make recommendations to their classmates.

"It's pretty awesome to hear kids talking books with each other and sharing what they like and what they don't like," Campbell said.

Books are very important to the kids because that is the only thing they are allowed to do in their rooms.

After books, they move into their activity.

STEM activities have included coding robots, Legos, and 3D printing. Sometimes, a speaker will visit to talk to the kids. Once, a local author conducted a writing workshop.

"They have made dominos out of resin, air-dry clay ornaments, and large snowflakes that Evans and Schuringa brought back to the library for winter decorations.

"And then this is the second year in a row we'll be doing a mental health-centered activity," Schuringa said. "So last year, we created a word cloud and had the kids talk about their like, What's one word that you would describe yourself? A positive thing about yourself?"

"They're (Chelsea and Molly) pretty amazing," Campbell said. "And I think they get a lot out of it, too. I mean, I really think they like coming in. When people show up for these kids, and they're consistent, and they care, and they talk, and they're interested, that means a lot to the kids."

"My favorite part is that these kids, these students, are seeing how creative they are and how kind they are and how much potential they still have in them," Schuringa said. "They're all really beautiful souls. So I just really enjoy each and every one of them."

"That's basically what I love, talking to them and getting to know them," Evans said. "They're such amazing kids. When I think of them, I just, I think, you know, smart and friendly and funny and engaging and generous. And they're so engaged in every activity that we've brought, and they surprise me every time, so just spending time with the kids and getting to know them (is her favorite part)."

Evans and Schuringa both have particular things that they hope the kids get out of their time with them.

"They let us know that they appreciate us; they thank us many times every time we go," Evans said. "And I think that having positive interactions with adults is just probably meaningful in itself in addition to their amazing teacher and ParaPro and the staff there, too."

"And we, I mean, well, we obviously think they're awesome," Evans said. "And we're excited to be there, and so I hope that they can tell that we care about them and we're rooting for them."

"We're invested in their wellbeing and their futures and then also making sure they know they have a safe and welcoming place to come, if they get out, at the library and inviting them here," Evans said. "And even if they're not going to get out, the library is coming to them. Important enough to us that we want to make sure that they have library services."

"I think that they have a lot of uncertainty in their future, and giving them the knowledge that the library is a safe space that they can come to, ask questions without any biases and that we're really eager to see them succeed in whatever next steps they take," Schuringa said.

With any job there are peaks and pits or highs and lows. Evans and Schuringa shared their peaks and pits of doing outreach at the Chelan JDC.

For Schuringa, her peak was watching a student feel success and pride with 3D printing and the software used to create the objects.

"And the pit was seeing this specific student's, seeing their trial date be pushed back and pushed back and pushed back until they became an adult and then were tried as an adult," she said.

"I have a story that happened recently, a teen, which is like a full circle story because the teen came into the library, and I could tell they wanted to talk in particular to me, and then once we started talking, I realized it was someone that Molly and I had seen at the juvenile detention center a year ago, and they remembered both of us they remembered everything about the visit," Evans said.

The student remembered making zines and even what their classmates drew in their zines. She said they remembered a particular book and how much they appreciated it.

"It was a really nice conversation," Evans said.

"They got a library card, and then I let them know that the zine project was really popular here, and library patrons took so many of them, and I still use them as examples, and they were like, 'Do you still have it?' And I say yes," she said. "And so I went and got the one that they had created and brought it to them, and they were so excited. They were still so proud of what they had created and showed everyone they were with. And it was a very happy moment."

"For me, it's just every time I go, I can see in their faces, sometimes it's important enough to just see them and Chelsea's story after she told me that story, I was like, yeah, it's just important to just go and show up and see, like, just be there. Sometimes that's enough," Schuringa said. "And just sharing in whatever moment that we have with them. Then they get to come back in and know that this, that the library, is a space for them."

Cast your line for free during Washington's Annual Free Fishing Weekend

NCW News
Ward Media

OLYMPIA - Fishing enthusiasts across Washington state are gearing up for the annual Free Fishing Weekend, set to take place on June 8-9. The Washington Department of Fish and Wildlife (WDFW) is inviting anglers of all ages and skill levels to cast their lines and enjoy the state's diverse fishing opportunities without the need for a license.

During this special weekend, anglers can fish for a variety of species, including trout and warm-water fish, in lakes throughout the state. The WDFW website offers a comprehensive guide to help anglers find a lowland lake near them and check which lakes have recently been stocked.

Additionally, anglers participating in the Free Fishing Weekend can take part in the Department's 2024 Trout Fishing Derby and win exciting prizes by redeeming tags from trout caught over the weekend. The derby features tagged fish stocked in lakes across the state, and plenty of prizes are still up for grabs.

For those looking to venture to the coast, the Free Fishing Weekend also offers the opportunity to fish for lingcod, cabezon, and rockfish along the Washington shoreline, with no boat required. The WDFW has also provided a helpful blog post on jetty fishing for those interested in trying their hand at this unique fishing experience.

Another popular spot during the Free Fishing Weekend is the Columbia River, where anglers can harvest shad. The WDFW offers guidance on where and how to catch these fish effectively.

While the Free Fishing Weekend waives the need for a license for many species, anglers should note that any fish requiring a catch record card, such as sturgeon, salmon, steelhead, and halibut, as well as all shellfish, will still require a license. It is essential for anglers to check the current fishing regulations, emergency rules, and area closures before heading out to ensure a safe and enjoyable experience.

"Fish and Wildlife police remind you that failure to follow the regulations may result in a citation," said Kirt Hughes, WDFW fish management division director. "Knowing the rules before heading out will make for a safe and enjoyable outdoor experience."

In addition to the fishing license, other requirements waived during the Free Fishing Weekend include the Vehicle Access Pass, Discover Pass when parking on WDFW, DNR, or Washington State Park lands, and the Two-Pole Endorsement where applicable.

Student and citizen volunteers lend a welcome hand at Locust Grove

BREWSTER - Columbia Post 97 Commander Greg Wagg was concerned that few volunteers would show up at Locust Grove Cemetery last Thursday morning, May 24, for the annual installation of flags in advance of Memorial Day ceremonies on May 27. But among the Brewster and Pateros schools and social media followers, many heeded Wagg's Facebook call for volunteers, and many responded.

A bus of Pateros students arrived, and later, driver Ray Sloss and freshman Hector Espino were among those who teamed up to set small white crosses and miniature flags at veterans' headstones. Brewster School Interim Principal Jake Johanson and Special Education teacher Linda Caswell turned out with Bears student volunteers.

A team of Brewster seniors placed a cross at the grave of 1966 Brewster graduate John Timothy Lane, who lost his life on May 4, 1968, when he fell on an enemy grenade to save the lives of fellow soldiers. A campaign is underway to elevate Lane's Distinguished Service Cross to the Congressional Medal of Honor.

It was not long before the 220 large memorial flags lined the drive, and scores of crosses were set in their proper places. "I am encouraged by the numbers who showed up," Wagg said.

BRIDGEPORT—The Colville Tribes Fish and Wildlife Department held its annual First Salmon Ceremony at the Chief Joseph Hatchery administration building on 48 Half Sun Way last Thursday, May 23. The public was welcomed to the best salmon lunch in the county.

Following a tribal tradition that has honored the salmon as a major food source for thousands of years, the first salmon was caught early that morning in the Columbia River. The capture was accompanied by prayer and song by tribal elders before the catch was filleted and prepared as a special offering for lunch guests. While skewered filets cooked over an open pit barbecue outside, Master of Ceremonies Randy Lewis, tribal elder, historian, and author, introduced guests inside to presentations by fisheries specialists about projects underway to increase the health and number of salmon in the future.

Major among those is the current program of reintroducing salmon above Chief Joseph and Grand Coulee dams to reestablish populations in traditional waters.

"Our goals are to reconnect salmon to their historic habitat and to the people," an information release said. "Release locations and number of salmon will be selected to meet multiple objectives including spawning, harvest, ceremonies, and research."

Phase I is complete. It included evaluating habitat availability and suitability. Fish stocks across five species were assessed for genetics, disease, competition, and predation risks.

"A life cycle model was developed to estimate outcomes of restoration scenarios," the release said. It also included "evaluating passage facilities and technologies at existing dams to determine how it might be applicable to Chief Joseph and Grand Coulee dams."

Phase II is underway. This involves experimental pilot releases of chinook and sockeye salmon into blocked areas. In August 2019, 30 adult chinook were released into the Columbia above Chief Joseph Dam at Rufus Wood RV Park south of Nespelem.

The tribes expect Phase II to require about 20 years to complete and cost about $200 million.

Before the break for lunch, the prepared filets of the First Salmon were presented on a tray for anyone who wished could share a taste of the honored fish. Many did, offering a prayer in the process. What was not consumed of that salmon was returned to the waters where it was caught earlier in the day.

Following lunch, those interested were given guided tours of the nearby Chief Joseph Hatchery, built in 2013.

The ceremony ended as it started with a song and a closing prayer.

the ropes on the handling, placement, and installation of the memorial decorations.

The class divided into groups. The boys were assigned to attach and erect the 130 large flags along the drive, and the girls were provided with mallets to install the small white crosses and flags. The arrangement of large flags began at the entrance of the access road with a POW-MIA on one side and an Unknown Soldier U.S. flag on the other. Next came the British Union Jack colors in honor of the countries that fought under the UK flag. It did not take long before the two-student teams were setting the colors at a steady, efficient pace.

Next, the group scrubbed headstones with environment-friendly soap and water. When that was done, Krugel escorted the class to the graves of four graduates – three from Bridgeport and one from Brewster - whose white crosses were replaced with gold-painted ones. Krugel then presented each student with an informational brochure that he compiled about the young men – plus a fifth, John Timothy Lane, buried in Brewster – that was part of a weeklong display of the Vietnam Traveling Memorial Wall in Bridgeport in 2003.

The juniors arrived at about 8 a.m. By 11 a.m., with duties completed, they were ready for a group photo by Ag instructor Adam Corum around the cemetery's dedication memorial provided in 1963 by Bridgeport Post 218 of the American Legion.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:
Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Kid Scoop Together Shadow Path

Work with a family member to see how a shadow changes throughout the day.

Hand Shadow Puppets

Creating the shapes of animals, trees and faces using hand shadows is fun and sometimes challenging. You'll need a dark room and a flashlight or small desk lamp. Then, try to create some of the hand shadows on this page. See if you can make your hand shadow puppets speak or move realistically. It takes some practice!

Standards Link: Follow visual cues.

Match the hands to each of the animal shadows.

Can you create these shadow animals? Give it a try!

Standards Link: Find similarities and differences in common objects.

How many differences can you find?

Extra! Extra!
Comical Shadows
 Look in the newspaper comics and find a character you like. On a piece of construction paper, carefully draw the character's outline. Cut out the shape and tape it to a popsicle stick. Use a flashlight to project its shadow on the wall and see if your friends and family members can recognize the character.

Standards Link: Reading Comprehension: Follow simple written directions.

STUFF YOU'LL NEED:

STEP 1

Make a ball of clay and place it on the cement outside. Stick the pencil in the clay so it stands upright.

STEP 2

Make another small ball of clay. Stick it on the top of the pencil.

STEP 3

Starting at 1:00 p.m., use sidewalk chalk to trace the shadow. Trace it once an hour for six hours to show how the shadow moves and changes as the sun gets lower in the sky.

Standards Link: Follow multiple-step directions.
