Tiera Miller: small school valedictorian has big college plans

By MIKE MALTAIS
Ward Media Staff Reporter

MANSFIELD – Tiera Miller, Mansfield Class of 2024 valedictorian, always had in the back of her mind that she might end up as one of the top scholars in her class.

“I knew my class was small (nine students) so I knew it was something I could go for,” said Miller. “I have always been in the top of my classes.”

Raised on a dryland wheat farm, Miller attended Mansfield schools for 14 years including preschool. She has an older brother who graduated a year ahead of her and is now studying at Walla Walla

College to be a diesel mechanic. A younger sister will enter sixth grade next year. Asked if she needs academic prodding from older sister, Miller said aside from needing a “little push” from time to time, “she does pretty good.”

Miller said she many factors kept her focused on academics. “Everyone has contributed to that in one way,” said Miller. “I don’t like disappointing people, so I think everything has influenced me to keep my grades up.”

Math is a favorite school subject along with another that helped outside school.

“Obviously, shop classes and Ag are always fun when you’re living on a farm.”

Miller also belonged to 4-H as a youngster and FFA in high school. She showed livestock at fairs from poultry to pigs, steers, and once even a horse.

Miller said all her teachers were favorites.

“I liked them all for different reasons,” said Miller. “It’s kind of hard going to a small school because you really get to know everyone really well.”

Miller was a multisport athlete all through high school. “Volleyball in the fall, basketball in the winter, and softball in the spring,” Miller said.

Mansfield athletes compete with neighboring Waterville as the Waterville-Mansfield Shockers. Sports contributed to what Miller said is her most memorable school achievement.

“We just had our sports awards,” said Miller. “Both last year and this year I was named Shocker Female Athlete of the Year.”

Sports also played a major role in Miller’s choice of a college major.

“I will be attending WSU this fall and hope to get into the athletic training program,” said Miller. “I’ll be applying for that program at the end of my sophomore year.”

Her interest in athletic training came from helping a teammate.

“I had a friend on one of my basketball teams who struggled a lot with knee problems,” said Miller, “I always liked helping her with it. One day I realized that was something I could do as a career.”

Miller said she will follow where her career leads to experience other parts of the world but would one day like to return to the closeness she feels in Mansfield.

“I don’t think I would work in Mansfield because the school is so small,” said Miller. “Maybe travel from living in Mansfield.”

Janessa Scroggie: Pateros valedictorian contest was close

By MIKE MALTAIS
Ward Media Staff Reporter

PATEROS – One could say the contest for Class of 2024 valedictorian was a close between eventual co-winners Liliana Gonzales and Janessa Scroggie.

“We tied into the hundredth place for grade point average,” Scroggie said.

Scroggie entered the Pateros school system from the Brewster Log Church Christian School in the fifth grade. She has two younger sisters who also attend Pateros, one a fourth grader and the other an eighth grader. Scroggie is there for advice especially when it comes to the biggest challenge she confronted with her academics:

procrastination.

“I have an issue with procrastination,” said Scroggie. “I’m still working on that, trying to get things done ahead of time and trying to plan out my schedule accordingly.”

Scroggie credits her parents as being one of her biggest inspirations.

“My dad, especially,” said Scroggie. “He has always seen how well I can do academically and held me to a standard that he knows I can reach and always pushed me to do the best that I can.”

For teachers, Scroggie singled out Spanish teacher Jennifer Carlson.

“She has always been very supportive and pushing me to do my best in school or out of school,” said Scroggie. “She helped me for tennis as well when I played sports.”

Scroggie played soccer all four years, tennis for three years.

“During the winter is ski and snowboard,” Scroggie said.

Band is another favorite activity and Scroggie played the flute throughout middle school and the first two years of high school.

“I’m pretty proficient,” said Scroggie. “There are still things to work on but I’m pretty decent for as long as I played.”

“My first year of doing Running Start at Wenatchee Valley College,” said Scroggie. “I managed to get a 4.0 the entire year, I was trying to manage work and sports at the same time, I was difficult, but it went really well.”

The work that Scroggie mentions is at Gamble Sands Golf Course where she manages guest services outside. She receives her AA from WVC this month.

Scroggie plans to travel out of state and attend Arizona State University this fall.

“I really love the campus and they had my major – forensic science,” said Scroggie. “I may minor in criminal justice just to have that background.”

Her grandmother helped inspire her career choice.

“Whenever I used to visit my grandmother, we would always watch crime shows,” said Scroggie. “I always loved that, and I love science so I thought it would be a great combination of my two interests.”

Scroggie won the Western Undergraduate Exchange Scholarship and another $7,000 in scholarships to help cover costs.

Her advice to younger students includes understanding the subject matter.

“Always ask questions,” said Scroggie. “Even if it’s a simple question it’s really important to fully understand what you are doing to succeed.”

Scroggie said she would love to return to Washington but remains flexible.

“I’ve been here my whole life,” said Scroggie, “but I’m up for wherever my career takes me.”

Lectures he did not want to hear led Danuel Trejo to academic excellence

By MIKE MALTAIS
Ward Media Staff Reporter

BRIDGEPORT – For Daniel Trejo, those parental lectures are one big reason he is the valedictorian of the Bridgeport Class of 2024. They may not know it, but Trejo credits his parents for the success he has made so far.

“My parents are always at the top of my mind, so I’d definitely rank them as my biggest inspiration,” said Trejo. “Pushing me all the way through with countless lectures that I did not want to hear, but in the end, I hope they realize that I was listening. And those same talks made me who I am.”

Trejo said the desire not to fail pushed him toward academic excellence.

“The idea of failure always lingered in my mind,” said Trejo. “Living an accomplished life on the top of my agenda throughout my academic years.”

Trejo said managing his time and prioritizing work were challenges for him.

“My way of consuming my time is definitely interesting, and typical for a high school student. A lot of delaying the inevitable, procrastination if you will,” said Trejo. “I always work better with a deadline, and pacing myself little by little instead of stacking tons of work either in the beginning or the end have led me to a consistent schedule I genuinely can work through.”

Trejo said he is still working out the specific details of his future education plans but sees the big picture.

“I’m still trying to get my life straight, obviously still figuring things out as a kid, but I currently am planning on heading to a university to get a degree in the business field,” said Trejo. “I am currently enticed with finance.”

Trejo advises incoming freshmen to be patient and ask questions.

“Take your time, and do not be scared to be clueless. Things will shape out in the end, especially at a place like Bridgeport,” said Trejo. “Everyone strives to get you to the right place, and your life doesn’t have to be planned out in the span of a four-year high school career.”

Trejo said the friends he has made and attitude he acquired are his favorite BHS achievements.

“I’ve grown such a close connection with everyone around me, and I’ve changed my perspective on school in general,” said Trejo. “This place is the pathway to success, and graduating is the furthest steppingstone. I’m here, and so are my classmates, so it’s important to note we are all finishing the race together.”

Growing up in a small city like Bridgeport sharpened Trejo’s own goals and perspective.

“A small community always rests higher expectations on one’s back, but living in Bridgeport has definitely opened my eyes to the endless opportunities in life,” said Trejo. “No matter what they are doing, the smiles on the faces of the people around me, no matter what they are doing, is what makes me feel entitled to play my role in being the best person that I could be. I think that’s way more important than education, but combining the two together, anything is possible.”

Trejo wants his work ethic to his BHS legacy.

“It might sound kind of cliché, but hard work really does make dreams come true. The countless nights of low determination but pushing through it always left a satisfaction especially after getting all your homework out of the way. It feels so strange staying at home on a Sunday with no distractions on finishing an important assignment, but it’s all worth it when you realize Bridgeport made me this way.”

Trejo said discovering who he is while learning how to appreciate the differences in others are among the biggest lessons he will take away from his years at Bridgeport High School.

“High school was the time of my life, particularly with the people around me. It’s sad to say this journey is over, but I’m excited to move on, especially since high school taught me what life was really about: being yourself,” said Trejo. “Even if we all went to the same school, we’re all different and unique in our own ways, which characterizes us.”

Kash Vandelac: from Class valedictorian to civil engineer

By MIKE MALTAIS
Ward Media Staff Reporter

BREWSTER – Shadowing a local business was one of the influential turning points for Brewster Class of 2024 valedictorian Kash Vandelac.

“As a senior assignment I shadowed Erlandsen for 16 hours,” said Vandelac. “I was interested in in both civil and aerospace engineering and chose civil engineering.”

Erlandsen & Associates, Inc. specializes in surveying, planning, and engineering services.

Vandelac said he plans to pursue his chosen subject at the University of Washington this fall.

A second-generation Brewster graduate Vandelac has been a Bears product all his life and has a younger sister who is now a freshman. Along the road to maintaining a 4.0 GPA he also found time to participate in the legendary Brewster sports program.

“I played basketball, baseball, and did one year of cross-country,” said Vandelac.

He recalls the 2022 state championship baseball game against Toutle Lake as his most memorable high school experience. Brewster was trailing the favored Ducks, 1-6, going into the top of the seventh and final inning of play. In a made-for-movies comeback the Bears scored six runs against their opponent and managed to hold them scoreless during their turn at bat to win the game, 7-6.

“Their pitcher was ranked something like 10th in the nation,” said Vandelac. “He was drafted later.”

Toutle Lake pitcher Jackson Cox became the highest ever high school draft pick from Cowlitz County when he was selected by the Colorado Rockies.

Vandelac said his greatest academic challenge was a worldwide event that affected students everywhere.

“The Covid pandemic was the hardest time,” said Vandelac. “It caused many students to fall off and never get back to where they were before that.”

Despite that setback Vandelac said he understood the value of academics.

“I always knew that keeping my grades up would be important.”

Having a teacher he could turn to for advice and support helped and for Vandelac that is English teacher Dean Busching.

A regimen of tackling the books and giving in other responsibilities their place

“I always made sure that I did my homework after going home and included time to eat regularly and get to my job.”

The job is at McDonalds where Vandelac has been employed for almost two years.

With roots planted deep in Brewster, Vandelac has not ruled out returning someday but is keeping his options open for the time being.

“I’m going to go wherever my career takes me,” Vandelac said.

Wherever that is, it will be far.

Gates Scholarship covers four years of college for PHS co-valedictorian Liliana Gonzales

By MIKE MALTAIS
Ward Media Staff Reporter

PATEROS – Along with the sense of accomplishment that comes with being selected class salutatorian or valedictorian is the opportunity to be awarded a life-changing scholarship. Class of 2024 co-valedictorian Liliana Gonzales-Sanchez knows that feeling after being named one of the recipients of The Gates Scholarship (TGS) described as a highly selective, last-dollar scholarship for outstanding, minority, high school seniors from low-income households. It will cover the full cost of attending the college of her choice. For Gonzales that is Washington State University. A recent visit to WSU convinced Gonzales to reconsider her major.

“At first, I thought I was going to do criminal justice, but I went to visit I and ended up changing my mind. I think I’m going to do creative writing.”

Gonzales said she has always been interested in reading and writing since she was a kid. Later in school she explored job opportunities in the writing field.

“I mentioned that to our school psychologist, Holly Weston, and later she brought it up and asked if that was still what I wanted to do,” said Gonzales. “I think that was the push I needed.”

Gonzales credits her family and particularly her mother for the motivation to excel academically.

“My mom works at school and seeing the work she puts in for the kids makes realize how much teachers and families do for me,” said Gonzales. “It really pushed me to do well.”

She also played percussion in the band throughout high school.

The Gates Scholarship stands out as the major achievement in Gonzales’ high school career. Pateros school counselor Amy Stennes brought TGS to Gonzales’ attention and urged her to apply for it.

“I found out in April that I won it,” said Gonzales. “I think 750 were chosen out of 53,000 applicants.”

Gonzales has sound advice for younger students.

“Build relationships with your teachers and staff,” said Gonzales. “Those people who will end up supporting you in your senior year when you really need it.”

Gonzales credits living in a small town like Pateros for teaching her an important life lesson.

“The biggest thing I learned is that the people you connect with are the people that you become, they make you who you are,” said Gonzales. “That’s why I make such a point to always have good relationships with people, integrate yourself into your community.”

Mansfield HS Salutatorian Aspen Farrington credits family for success

By MIKE MALTAIS
Ward Media Staff Reporter

MANSFIELD – Growing up in a small town like Mansfield and going to a small school like Mansfield High School comes with advantages. Building strong lifelong friendships and close community bonds are among them. Those experiences have shaped the academic achievements and career choice of Class of 2024 Salutatorian Aspen Farrington.

Farrington is a 12-year senior at Mansfield High School and credits her parents for much of her academic success.

“What pushed me to strive for academic success is that my parents did not get the education they dreamed of having,” said Farrington. “They had my brother at a young age, and they lost a lot throughout that journey in their life, which led to struggles. I always wanted to give back to my parents because they always did anything they could for me even when they did not have much.”

Farrington had struggles of her own.

“I was diagnosed with scoliosis when I was eight. In my sophomore year of high school, I had to have a spinal fusion back surgery,” said Farrington. “It was the hardest thing I’ve experienced, and I would never wish that pain on anyone.”

Sports and FFA taught their own lessons to the academic standout.

“I was involved in FFA, cheer, basketball, and softball. This impacted my personal growth a lot,” said Farrington. “It taught me life lessons such as:

- You won’t always be the best at something you enjoy.

- Even if you aren’t that doesn’t mean you should stop or give up on it.

- Do what you enjoy for YOURSELF.”

Farrington credits to both her parents and grandparents for keeping her grounded and focused.

“My parents led me along the journey and supported me in times where my goals felt unreachable. I will forever appreciate them for that,” said Farrington. “My nana and papa made sure to always let me know when I was in the wrong and gave me advice on that. I always took that importantly because mistakes give you the opportunity to grow and learn.”

Academic consistency ranks high on her list of achievements, particularly through difficult periods.

“I’m most proud of making honor roll every year of high school and every semester. This is important to me because it was not something easy to do,” said Farrington. “Especially during Covid year it was very rough, but I know that my future depended on good grades and that’s why I chose to do good every day.”

If she had a strategy to make good grades, it was simple and straightforward.

“Take notes and just get the work done,” Farrington said.

Not much room for procrastination there, and it rewarded her with an honor she values highly.

“It means the world to me to be salutatorian because I have always worked hard for my grades and they have finally paid off,” Farrington said.

Her advice to younger students who seek academic success is to fuel desire with passion.

“Whatever career goal or path you chose, chose it for yourself,” said Farrington. “By that I mean choose it because it makes YOU happy.”

As for her career plans, Farrington is heading to Wenatchee Valley College to get her BSN (Bachelor of Science in Nursing).

“I want to specialize as a labor and delivery nurse and have a financially rewarding life,” said Farrington. “Be successful enough to give back to my parents.”

Together with her parents and grandparents, Farrington singled out two teachers as special mentors for her.

“Two teachers I will always remember and hold close to my heart are Mr. (Luke) Hall and Ms. (Jamey Jo) Steele,” said Farrington. “Mr. Hall was always that teacher you could depend on to share a good laugh. He always was willing to help and make sure we were taken care of. Ms. Steele is the strongest woman I know. She’s always had ongoing health issues but never missed a chance to spend time with the students. She would do anything for any one of us.”

Pateros salutatorian Janette Hernandez will pursue nursing career

By MIKE MALTAIS
Ward Media Staff Reporter

PATEROS – Janette Hernandez graduated June 1 and will enter the University of Washington this fall as a nursing major. That’s the short version of what lies ahead for the Pateros Class of 2024 salutatorian. How she made it to the academic pinnacle among her peers is a longer story.

Hernandez is the second youngest of seven siblings and a 12-year Pateros student. All her siblings graduated Pateros and younger brother, Martin, is a sophomore.

“My parents were a big part of my success because they always told me to work hard and give it my all,” said Hernandez. “I’ve always been interested in learning and think it’s a privilege and not just something you are forced to do.”

With older brothers and sisters Hernandez said she had no shortage of examples to watch and emulate.

“I’ve seen my siblings go through school and have their careers,” said Hernandez. “They offer me a lot of advice, which I appreciate.”

Hernandez plans to attend the University of Washington to study nursing. Among her scholarships is the Husky Promise that covers full-time tuition. And standard fees.

“My sister has been a nurse for a while,” said Hernandez. “She just received her BSN (Bachelor of Science in Nursing) from Wenatchee Valley College. I wanted to choose a career I would enjoy, not something that I would not dread going to.”

Hernandez said she is also considering additional medical pursuits, perhaps even becoming a surgeon.

Hernandez credits her science teacher, Melanie Williams, with inspiring her career choice.

“I took a human interest class from her last year and she let me grow a passion for it,” Hernandez said. “It really inspired me. I love the way she teaches.”

Along with her academic achievement Hernandez said her best accomplishment involved the other activities she added to her senior year.

“I did four sports this year, basketball, soccer, tennis, and track, I’m still in Running Start and I still managed to be in class,” said Hernandez, “I was part of ASB and Yearbook, I was very involved this year. It really helped me learn how to balance my schedule and felt very rewarding.”

Hernandez also earned her AA degree from Wenatchee Valley College. In her spare time, she helped with youth soccer.

“I refeed games when I could on the weekends and helped them practice,” said Hernandez. “My little brother participated. It was very nice to go out and help because I love the sport.”

Hernandez said she would advise younger students to avoid putting off the work by rewarding yourself after it is done.

“I think procrastination really kills our focus. Prioritize your work, then reward yourself.”

Hernandez said she hopes to return to Pateros and give back.

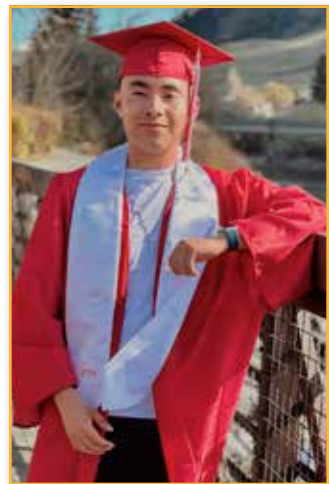

“I love the community and the families here,” Hernandez said.
