Chelan council workshop considers AI network to improve community engagement

By Mike Maltais
Ward Media Staff Reporter

CHELAN – The city is on the cusp of joining the artificial intelligence (AI) revolution by upgrading its ability to interface with its citizens through a new research platform called Thought Exchange. The high-tech tool was the opening topic of the city council’s regular monthly workshop held on June 4.

“One of the priorities for the city this year is to get more engagement from our community on the things that we do,” said Mayor Erin McCardle. Up to this point a program called Survey Monkey, an online tool used to create surveys, polls, and quizzes, has been the city’s principal platform to do that.

“It is basic and time consuming unless you are doing just straight multiple-choice questions,” said McCardle. “It does not open up the doors to allow any conversations to happen.”

The city learned of Thought Exchange from the school district that used the program to share its levy and bond information with the public and get useful responses in return.

“In this day and age, we have a lot of tools available with AI to make it easier for us to go out to the community and get their feedback in a meaningful way,” McCardle said. “This is important because we have a major comp plan update coming up that is the foundation of our planning effort.”

McCardle used early data from the very beginning of the Imagine Downtown project to allow Thought Exchange to demonstrate what it can do with information familiar to council members.

The platform emphasized its ability to capture the voice of people by utilizing three modes of listening:

- Qualitative data collection.
- Digital one-to-one interviews with interactive two-way conversations.
- Create, monitor, and benchmark a strategic plan.

A Thought Exchange representative imported 1,100 responses provided by McCardle and showed how a first level word cloud analysis filtered and refined responses on topics such as parking, traffic, safety, accessibility, outdoor dining, public amenities, and more. Further filtering transformed a “collective mess” of data into increasingly specific detail according to the user’s needs. Following further demonstrations showing the variety of options available to granulate and interact with the survey responses McCardle said Thought Exchange will be included for consideration on the upcoming council agenda.

Chelan launches valley-wide visioning project

Ward Media / Lake Chelan Mirror

CHELAN – The City of Chelan announced Tuesday the launch of the Lake Chelan Vision Project, a community-driven initiative aimed at identifying core values and establishing a foundation for future planning efforts in the Lake Chelan Valley.

The project, the first of its kind in the area since 2006, will involve outreach to residents from Twenty-Five Mile Creek to South Shore, Chelan, Union Valley, and Manson. A bilingual community survey is now available in English at www.surveymonkey.com/r/LCVP and in Spanish at www.surveymonkey.com/r/LCVPspan. Seven listening sessions will be scheduled in the coming weeks.

“The Lake Chelan Valley will continue to grow,” said Chelan Mayor Erin McCardle. “We must take bold actions now to address the challenges as well as opportunities we are facing if we want to preserve the qualities of living in a small rural community.”

Our Valley Our Future (OVOF), a nonpartisan, nonprofit organization, has been retained to conduct outreach and visioning activities, collect and analyze input from community members, and draft an initial set of core community values.

A project management team, consisting of local leaders and representatives, will oversee the initiative to ensure the integrity and validity of project outcomes.

To date, 20 local organizations are assisting the project, including the Lake Chelan Chamber of Commerce, Lake Chelan School District, and various community groups.

The City of Chelan sees this outreach and visioning work as an essential investment in community building, with the goal of creating a more cohesive, connected, and inclusive community.

The project will extend into the fall months, culminating with a Community Summit where residents can offer feedback on the initial findings. More information about the Lake Chelan Vision Project can be found on the OVOF website at <https://ourvalleyourfuture.org/lake-chelan-vision-project/>.

CHELAN – The Lake Chelan Chamber of Commerce hosted the 18th annual Cruizin Chelan Car Show on June 1 with 248 participants registered for the event. Summer 2024 kicked off in style, as proud car, motorcycle, truck and street rod owners lined their pride and joys along Woodin Avenue in Historic Downtown Chelan. Over 20 trophies were awarded, including the most sought-after prize – Best in Show. Spectators were encouraged to vote on their favorite as they browsed the submissions that lined the streets.

In Riverwalk Park there was more fun and excitement with Food Trucks, vendor market, live music, games, face painting, beer garden and more.

Trophies were handmade by local high school students and Event proceeds benefit scholarships for local students each year.

Manson Community Council to host forum on June 18

Ward Media / Lake Chelan Mirror

MANSON – The Manson Community Council will host a “Manson Community Forum” on Tuesday, June 18, at the Manson Grange Hall. The forum, which begins at 6:00 p.m., will feature presentations from local agencies and organizations, according to a press release from the council.

Chris Willoughby, Vice Chair of the Manson Community Council, will moderate the two-hour event. The forum will include 30-minute presentations from the Manson Parks & Recreation District, Manson Chamber of Commerce, and Chelan County Fire District 5 (Manson Fire Department).

The Parks & Recreation District will provide updates on waterfront projects, Leffler Field planning, and other initiatives. The Chamber of Commerce will discuss current happenings in Manson and plans for the downtown corridor. The Fire District will address an upcoming levy that will appear on the August 6 ballot and discuss current project plans.

Each presentation will last 15 to 20 minutes, allowing time for a question and answer session. After the presentations, attendees may be asked to participate in surveys presented by each organization, followed by an open discussion period.

The Manson Community Council intends for this forum to be the first in a series of events designed to provide a “one-stop-shop” for community members to receive important information without having to attend multiple meetings.

“There will be a lot of good and important information for the community presented at this event,” Willoughby said in the release. “We hope to see many community members at the forum.”

Congresswoman Kim Schrier celebrates $660,000 Federal Fund for Chelan County Sheriff’s Office

By Will Nilles
Ward Media Staff Reporter

WENATCHEE – In a press event held on June 7 in front of the Chelan County Superior Court, Congresswoman Kim Schrier (D-WA) announced a substantial federal investment of $660,000 aimed at bolstering the Chelan County Sheriff’s Office.

The Washington State representative expressed her optimism that the funds will contribute to increased transparency within the department while simultaneously improving safety measures for law enforcement officers.

The focus of this successfully funded project is to equip the Chelan County Sheriff’s Office with the technology, training, and resources needed to facilitate the full use of body cameras by law enforcement officers.

“Body cameras are more than just pieces of technology,” Chelan County Sheriff Mike Morrison said about his enthusiasm for this investment in police accountability.

“They are instruments of transparency and trust. Body cameras ensure that everyone is held accountable for their actions, including us in uniform.”

Douglas County Sheriff Kevin W. Morris attended the event with the Axon body-worn camera system that will most likely be used by the Chelan County Sheriff’s Office, demonstrating its functions and capabilities.

With his help, Rep. Schrier was able to quickly equip a body-worn camera and display its live feed feature, which could be used by law enforcement to better understand situations as they unfold.

Rep. Schrier emphasized a heavy focus not just on accountability but on community safety, saying, “one of the additional benefits of body cameras is that, when you have that [body camera] on, it is a tool in de-escalating because people do not want to behave badly.” Schrier added, “everyone deserves to feel safe in their communities... and so I want everyone to feel safe and body cameras are a part of that.”

Congresswoman Schrier helped secure this sizable federal investment through Community Project Funding (CPF), a federal grant program part of the US Department of Housing and Urban Development’s Economic Development Initiative.

Within the US House of Representatives, CPF allows representatives to request funding for specific projects in their district, ensuring a direct pipeline of funds moving from the federal government into local communities.

Sheriff's office celebrates exceptional staff, volunteer

By QUINN PROPST
Ward Media Staff Reporter

WENATCHEE – The Chelan County Sheriff's Office recently recognized employees for outstanding service.

"Congratulations to all the winners of our region's recent award ceremony," Sheriff Mike Morrison said. "The dedication and contributions uplift our communities and inspire us all to strive for excellence."

Deputy Andrew Tilton was awarded Deputy of the Year.

"Deputy Tilton was recognized by his immediate supervisors as one who continually works hard to achieve the mission of the Office through all aspects of his assigned duties and responsibilities," Morrison said. "His dedication to the team, outstanding work ethic, and produced results reflect great credit upon himself, his squad, and the Chelan County Sheriff's Office."

Jillian Simmons was awarded Support Staff of the Year for her work at the Sheriff's Office.

"Jillian represents the office in a positive light each and every day and excels in all of her assigned duties and responsibilities," Morrison said.

Vernon Nelson Jr. earned Volunteer of the Year for his work with the Chelan County Mountain Rescue.

"The Chelan County Sheriff's Office takes immense pride in announcing Vernon Nelson Jr. as the recipient of the prestigious Chelan County Sheriff's Office Volunteer of the Year award," Morrison said. "As the Sheriff of Chelan County, I have personally witnessed Vernon exemplifying the very essence of dedication, expertise, and unwavering commitment to saving lives in the most challenging terrains imaginable."

Schrier

Rep. Schrier explained the impressive efficiency of this Community Project funding, "this is a way for us to not have money go through the state, through a long bureaucracy to get to projects, but to go straight to what matters most to the community."

According to Sheriff Morrison, "it will take a couple of months to get [Chelan County Sheriff's Office] up and running as we go through."

But, once the training and resources are in full effect, Morrison seeks to "release photos and video from our instruments that our deputies are handling in order to show

Deputy Anders Wiggum received a Life Saving Award for his response to a collision involving major injuries.

"In the rugged expanse of Chelan County, where the backcountry poses formidable challenges, Vernon has stood as a beacon of hope and resilience," he said.

"While the Sheriff's Office bears the legal mandate of backcountry rescue, it's Vernon and his team of mountain rescuers who often navigate the most treacherous paths to answer the call of those in dire need. The Chelan County Sheriff's Office and the citizens served are deeply indebted to Vernon's unwavering commitment to the welfare of others."

Andrew Tilton, Cy Bowthorpe, Jeremy Mannin, Jose Hernandez received Life Saving Awards for their response to a dangerous situation.

"These four individuals were vital to the safety and peaceful resolution of an inherently dangerous situation involving a combat veteran who had expressed suicidal ideations and consumed pills and alcohol, a dangerous mix," Morrison said.

"The team arrived on scene and began to reach out and attempt to get the individual much-needed help through the use of de-escalation tactics and the community what our deputies are doing... the community really should see what they're getting back in return."

Through programs like CPF, Rep. Schrier has already secured direct federal funding for other important community projects, such as local food banks, school-based health clinics, and improvements to a local senior center.

"We get somewhere between 10 and 15 projects a year... and there are certain ones that rise to the top, and clearly this is one of them," commented Rep. Schrier about the importance of protecting the community through better documentation and police accountability.

Chelan County Commissioner Shon Smith closed out the event with an optimistic attitude toward the implementation of body cameras, stating, "They may decrease the use of force in incidents... and they may even prevent an already dangerous situation from escalating."

Smith looked to the future, concluding, "I hope to see this new program enhance the reputation of Chelan County Sheriff's Office as a leader in the community policing in our region. And I hope to see that it also makes our streets safer for our citizens and the community overall."

agencies," Morrison said. "His actions and quick thinking were vital to the involved parties getting the care they needed when they needed it."

Meritorious Conduct award recipients were Sgt. Rob Huddleston, Deputy Carlos Rodriguez, Mike Battis with Ballard Ambulance, Campus Security Deputy Elgin Shaw, and Detective Brett Peterson.

The Award of Merit was awarded to Deputy Chris Eakle, Detective Cyrus Bowthorpe, Deputy Anders Wiggum, Sgt. Lee Risdon, Sgt. Brent Frank, Deputy Austin Key, Deputy James Peterson, Deputy Jerrod Biggar, Deputy Ian Sutton, Code Enforcement Deputy Zach Wenzel, Sgt. Chelan County Sheriff's Office receives $49,100 grant for officer wellness

WENATCHEE - The Chelan County Sheriff's Office Behavioral Health Unit (BHU) has been awarded a $49,100 grant from the Washington State Criminal Justice Training Commission (WACJTC) for the fiscal year July 2024 through June 2025, Sheriff Mike Morrison announced Monday. The grant will fund peer support and critical incident stress management training, neurofeedback machines, PTSD workshops for law enforcement and their spouses, and continuing education materials. This marks the second consecutive year the WACJTC has awarded the Officer Wellness grant to Chelan County. BHU Program Manager and Licensed Mental Health Counselor Ana Gonzalez has been credited with securing over $1.9 million in grants over the past two years, with $268,578 allocated to officer wellness and $1.7 million supporting the BHU's initiatives. The BHU, a co-responder program that partners mental health professionals and case managers with law enforcement, aims to divert individuals with behavioral health challenges from the criminal justice and emergency medical systems by providing crisis response and connecting them to appropriate community resources.

Almost $900,000 secured for mobile water tanks to boost rural firefighting in Chelan County

By TAYLOR CALDWELL
Ward Media Staff Reporter

LEAVENWORTH – Congresswoman Kim Schrier secured nearly $900,000 in federal funding to place 12 mobile water tanks across Chelan County in order to bolster firefighting capabilities in rural areas.

The project will install 21,000 gallon water tanks in wildfire-prone locations that are far from existing hydrants, in order to fight fires more efficiently and aggressively. The project has the potential to better protect rural neighborhoods, and may even help secure or even lower home insurance rates.

“It has a really big impact not only on people’s physical safety and security, but also on their nest egg, and whether they will be able to fund the rest of their lives,” said Congresswoman Schrier.

Currently, departments use a water tender, or a vehicle designed to carry water, to transport approximately 2,000 gallons of water to a scene. With one tank, a water tender could save nearly ten critical refill trips. When it runs out, a fire along Chumstick Highway could take upwards of 45 minutes for a water tender to drive to the nearest hydrant, refill, and return to the fire.

“That time is when firefighters can lose fires,” said FD #3 Chief Kelly O’Brien.

At least half of the water tanks will be placed in the Upper Valley, primarily along the Chumstick Corridor. Others will be placed in Manson, Chelan, Entiat, and Malaga.

“I’m really excited because what we’re doing here is going to be able to be replicated, and not just in other places in Washington State. This can be replicated in rural communities across the country,” said Ron Criddlebaugh, Chelan County Economic Services Director.

TAYLOR CALDWELL / WARD MEDIA
Fire District #3, Chelan County Commissioners, Chumstick Wildfire Stewardship Coalition, and Congresswoman Kim Schrier gathered at the Leavenworth Fire Station on June 7 to discuss the mobile tanks project.

According to Criddlebaugh, the next steps will be to identify the exact location for the tanks, and undergo environmental and regulatory compliance. The county expects to install its first tank before the 2025 wildfire season, likely along Chumstick Highway.

“As soon as one is done, we’ll be working on the next,” said Criddlebaugh.

The water tanks, which look like shipping containers, will have the ability to be installed either above or below ground, and will be insulated on the exterior for a rating to -10 degrees.

Chelan County estimates the cost of the project will be $1.2 million for the initial 12 water tanks, and will add more as additional funding is secured. The project will utilize the $893,250 secured by Congresswoman Schrier, as well as $50,000 Chelan County PUD committed to the project.

Chelan PUD expands wildfire prevention plan, introduces county-wide power shutoff strategy

WENATCHEE – In an effort to prevent wildfires and increase fire resilience, Chelan County Public Utility District (PUD) announced the expansion of its comprehensive wildfire mitigation plan, which now includes a county-wide strategy for proactively turning off power during extreme weather events.

The expanded plan, called fire safety outage management, is a measure of last resort and will be implemented in fire-prone areas throughout Chelan County.

This move comes after the successful pilot of a similar plan in 2021, which covered about 3,000 customers in the Lake Wenatchee/Plain area.

Chelan PUD’s wildfire mitigation plan also includes vegetation management, fire hardening of transmission structures, and equipment upgrades in high-risk areas.

The utility has been using fire risk assessments to guide these place-based measures.

Throughout the summer, Chelan PUD will closely monitor weather forecasts, including wind gusts, humidity, fuel moisture, and potential fire behavior. If a fire safety outage becomes necessary, the utility will attempt to notify customers 48 hours in advance through various channels, including email, phone messages, media, and partner organizations.

General Manager Kirk Hudson emphasized the importance of a robust wildfire mitigation plan, stating, “It’s prudent that we put a robust wildfire mitigation plan in place to protect our communities from weather events, forest conditions and legal risks.”

Chelan PUD encourages customers to prepare for potential fire safety outages by updating their contact information, signing up for emergency notifications, creating an emergency plan, and considering backup power options for critical needs. The utility also maintains an Electrical Medical Needs Registry for those who rely on electricity for medical equipment.

PREPARING FOR A FIRE SAFETY OUTAGE

As Chelan PUD expands its fire safety outage management plan county-wide, residents are encouraged to take the following steps to prepare for potential power shutoffs:

1. Ensure your contact information is up to date with Chelan PUD by visiting chelanpud.org/updateyourinfo. This will allow the utility to notify you promptly in case of a planned outage.

2. Sign up for Everbridge emergency notifications through Chelan County Emergency Management to stay informed about local emergencies and updates.

3. Create an emergency plan and stock up on essentials such as water, non-perishable food, cash, and medications to sustain you and your family during an extended outage.

4. Consider investing in a backup generator to power critical equipment like well pumps or refrigerators during a prolonged outage.

5. If you rely on electricity to operate medical equipment, make sure to sign up for the Electrical Medical Needs Registry at chelanpud.org/medform to ensure the utility is aware of your specific needs.

6. Vulnerable individuals may also consider joining a registry through Chelan County Emergency Management to receive additional support during emergencies.

By taking these proactive steps, residents can help ensure their safety and well-being during a fire safety outage.

Jaech Foundation awards $144,000 to Chelan Valley students

Ward Media
Lake Chelan Mirror

MANSON – Jeremy and Jacquelyn Jaech, through their Jaech Foundation, awarded scholarships totaling $144,000 to 37 Chelan Valley students at a dinner on Monday night.

The scholarships, which aim to support local students pursuing higher education, encompass a range of educational paths, including community college, university, and trade school.

The foundation has now supported three classes of students, extending assistance to high school graduates from 2022, 2023, and 2024.

Jacquelyn Jaech, the foundation’s president, highlighted the challenging selection process.

“We had so many strong applicants this year, more than we could afford to fund. It was very hard for us to pick our award recipients. There are many worthy students we could not fund.”

The list of award recipients includes Manson High School graduates Isabelle Harris, Brooks Pinski, Gabe Sivertson, Lily Narvaez, Marco Escoto, Michelle Zamudio Ramirez, Ella England, and Cameron Wiloughby, Chelan High School graduates Angel Antonio Garcia, Ellie McLemore, Braden Vincent, Dreama Bahena, Anahi Barajas Oseguera, Josie Garfoot, Troy Melton, Carlos Saucedo-Nunez, and Ben Brownfield, and Entiat graduate Trent Davis Renslow.

Additionally, students completing their first year of post-secondary education and receiving scholarships for their second year include Greer Bainbridge, Ryan Allen, Kaylee Patino, MacKenzie Griggs, Jose Hurtado, Luke Simmons, Ben Ho, Pablo Mendez, Dawson Smith, Vanessa Sanchez, Nathaniel Katzer, Devan Regan, and Eli Willard.

Second-year students who

Jeremy and Jacquelyn Jaech, through their Jaech Foundation, awarded scholarships totaling $144,000 to 37 Chelan Valley students received funding for their third year are Teegan Silva, Julissa Diaz, Emely Valencia, Cara Hutton, and Katie Gosvener.

Recipients were selected based on the anticipated impact of the award on their educational goals and the potential benefits to their families and communities. The foundation also considered academic performance, personal characteristics, and the ability to overcome obstacles.

Jeremy Jaech underscored

their commitment to education and wellness.

“Jacquelyn and I believe strongly in the value of education and wellness. In addition to introducing local children to the life-long sport of tennis at Harmony Meadows, we are pleased to be able to support these students in their higher education pursuits.”

The Jaech Foundation’s support extends beyond scholarships. The couple operates Harmony Meadows Tennis Resort in Manson, envisioned as both an economic driver for the community and a hub for tennis and wellness programs. The resort has hosted the Manson High School Tennis Team and offers subsidized tennis programs to local students.

Through these efforts, the Jaechs hope to foster a strong culture of education and physical activity in the Chelan Valley, creating lasting impacts on the community.

Lake Chelan Golf Club awards scholarships to student athletes

Ward Media
Lake Chelan Mirror

CHELAN – The Lake Chelan Golf Club, Ladies Division has announced the recipients of the 2024 Ladies Golf Club Scholarship. Danika Dietrich and Josie Garfoot, both student athletes from Chelan High School, have been awarded $2,600 and $2,400 scholarships, respectively.

The scholarships are awarded to two senior girls on the Chelan golf team who plan to further their education after high school or to student athletes if no golfers fulfill the application process.

The selection is based on academic achievement, extracurricular activities, and community involvement.

Danika Dietrich, daughter of Kevin and Melissa Dietrich, has maintained a 3.7 GPA while participating in several activities and multiple athletics throughout her high school career. She plans to attend Washington State University next fall, focusing on a

Stopping a Nosebleed

Q: Last week, I got a nosebleed that wouldn’t stop. In the Emergency Room, the doctor shoved gauze up my nose. It hurt so bad I NEVER want that done to me ever again. How can I stop a nosebleed on my own?

Instead, use a saline nasal gel, like Afrin®. Nosebleeds are also more likely if you take a blood thinner. Taking a blood thinner medicine like aspirin, clopidogrel (Plavix®), Eliquis®, Xarelto®, Pradaxa®, and warfarin (Coumadin®) can increase the frequency and severity of nosebleeds.
 Using nose sprays for allergies like Flonase®, Nasacort®, or Nasonex® can also cause nosebleeds. To reduce nosebleeds, always point the nozzle of the nasal spray away from the tissue that separates your nostrils, called the septum.
 If you get a nosebleed, apply direct pressure by leaning forward and pinching your nose shut. Leaning forward instead of backward puts more pressure on blood vessels. It keeps you from swallowing blood, which can cause nausea and vomiting, which can aggravate the bleeding.
 Keeping your nose pinched shut for 10-15 minutes without letting up on the pressure is most effective. Inserting a rolled piece of gauze or cotton into your nostril as a plug will also help slow bleeding.
 In addition to gauze and direct pressure, several products that help stop bleeding are available without a prescription.
 Many emergency room physicians use Afrin® (oxymetazoline) nose spray on nosebleeds because it shrinks blood vessels quickly, helping to control bleeding. Oxymetazoline (Afrin®) nasal spray is inexpensive and available without a prescription.

 Some non-prescription products control bleeding by jump-starting the clotting process.
 Oxidized cellulose is derived from plants and has been used to stop bleeding in surgery since the 1960s. It is available over the counter in several forms, including spray powder, small gauze squares, impregnated bandages, and gauze dressings. Curad® Quick Stop and Quick Seal® contain oxidized cellulose.
 Chitosan (Celox®) is derived from shells. Widely used by the military, Celox® is available as granules in 2-gram packets for sprinkling on wounds and incorporated into large flat bandages and nosebleed dressings.
 Calcium alginate is extracted from brown algae. It’s very absorbent and stops bleeding by releasing calcium when in contact with blood. When blood contacts it, it transforms into a gel and jumpstarts the clotting process. Calcium alginate is available as Nasal Cease® or Bleed Cease®.
 Avoid using products containing kaolin, like QuickClot®. It is clay-like and can be difficult to remove from wounds.
Here are 5 Tips for Dealing with a Nosebleed:
 1. Lean forward while pinching your nostrils shut. Hold direct pressure for at least 10-15 minutes before letting up. Avoid swallowing blood if you can.

 2. Try Afrin® (oxymetazoline) spray. Roll gauze into a tight plug, add two sprays of Afrin®, insert into your nostril, then pinch it closed.
 3. Try a blood-clotting nosebleed product. Try gauze pads or pre-formed plugs impregnated with blood-stopping agents like calcium alginate (NasalCease®), oxidized cellulose (Curad® Quick Stop), or chitosan (Celox®).
 4. Get medical attention if needed. If blood runs down your throat even while leaning forward or you’re still bleeding despite applying direct pressure for at least 10-15 minutes, you could have a posterior nosebleed, which is very hard to stop. Seek medical attention.
 5. Inform your doctor. If you take a blood thinner medicine, DO NOT IGNORE a nosebleed. Inform your doctor immediately of any nosebleeds. It may be the only warning before a life-threatening stomach bleed or a devastating brain bleed.

Chelan Community Center enters partnership with Boys & Girls Clubs of Snohomish County

By MIKE MALTAIS
 Ward Media Staff Reporter

CHELAN – The city took a giant step forward on behalf of its youth last week with the announcement that a Boys and Girls Club will take up residence at the Lake Chelan Community Center. City Administrator Wade Farris introduced Community Center Executive Director Maribel Cruz who broke the news at the regular monthly meeting of the Chelan City Council Workshop on June 4.
 “We are very excited to announce that we have secured a partnership with the Boys & Girls Clubs (BBGC),” said Cruz. “Last month we signed a 15-year lease with the BBGC.”
 The Community Center has prepared a spot for its new partner.
 “They will be taking about 7,000 sq. ft of upstairs dedicated space at the Community Center,” said Cruz. “Once we finish off the gym there will be BBGC activities there as well.”
 Cruz views the BBGC addition as a good fit.
 “We have invited the BBGC to be apart of the community center because we really felt that at the heart of what the community center is trying to do is to wrap our arms around the youth and also those who can’t necessarily pay for services or who are underserved,” said Cruz. “If we can help them, that helps everybody.”
 Executive Director Bill Tsoukalas explained that there are 1,000 organizations like Snohomish County in the Boys & Girls Club world that represent about 4,000 individual locations.

 BBGC of Snohomish County currently have 26 locations spread across a multi-county area not just Snohomish County, said Tsoukalas. Eight are on reservations. There are other organizations in Spokane, Colville, Tri-Cities, and Moses Lake. There remains a vacuum in Eastern Washington from Yakima north to Wenatchee, Chelan, and on to the border.
 Tsoukalas explained that it is much easier and a less expensive pathway to start within an existing club rather than start your own 501(c)(3).
 “We have a presence in Eastern Washington at Brewster and three clubs on the Colville Confederated Tribes Reservation,” said Tsoukalas.
 The Brewster BBGC started in 2016 and serves more than 400 youth in the greater Brewster area. Clubs are also located in Nespelem, Inchelium, and Wellpinit.

Summer Fun With the Newspaper!

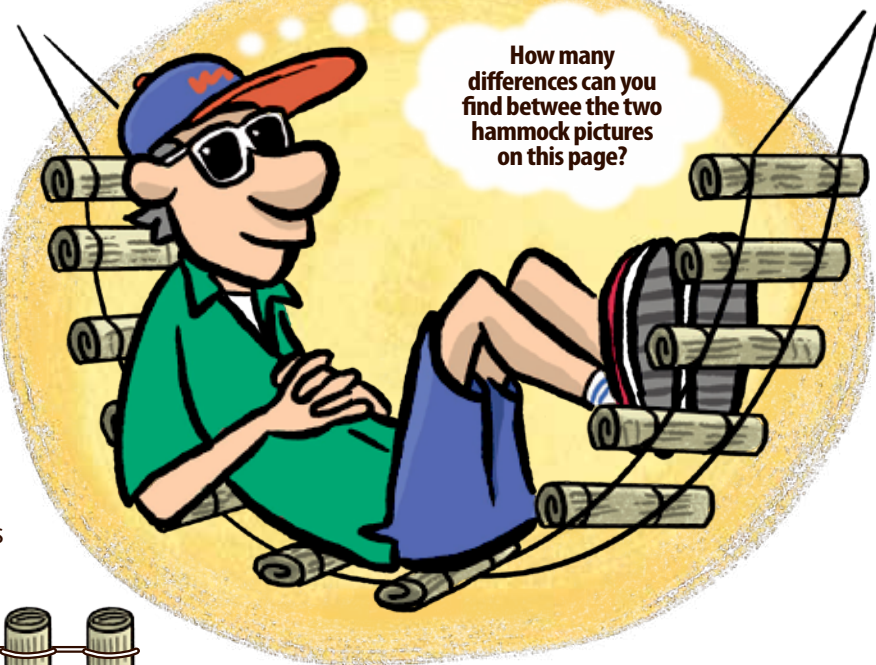

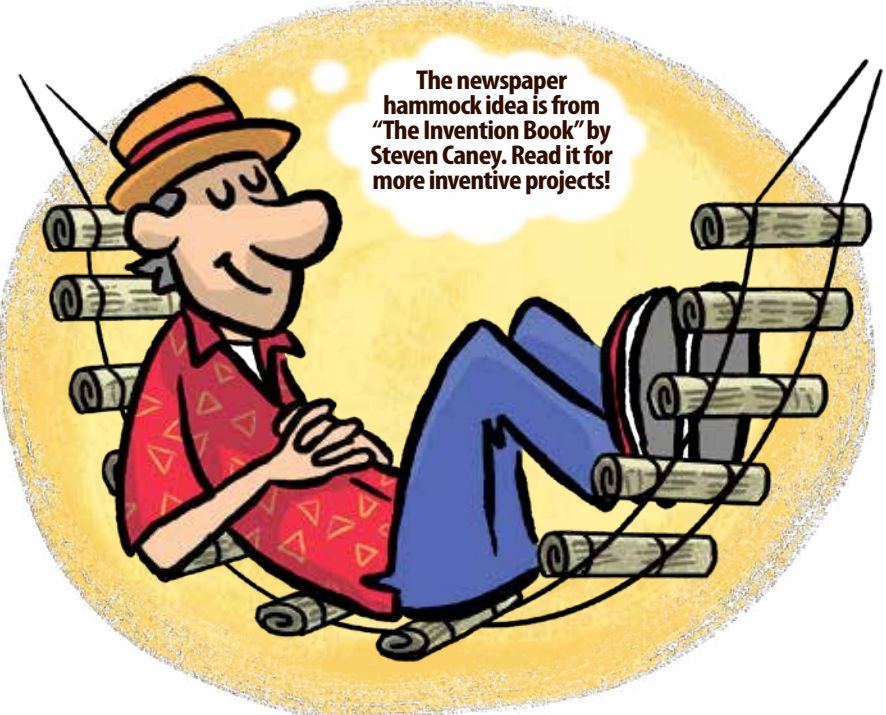

What is black and white and FUN all over? The newspaper! Summer fun begins with your local newspaper! It can be used to play games, to say "Happy Father's Day" and even to take a nap.

Make a Newspaper Hammock!

- Starting at the narrow end, tightly roll about 50 pages of newspaper into a rigid tube. Tape it so that it stays rolled. Make about 10–15 of these tubes.
- Connect the tubes, using extra-strength clothesline. When the hammock is as long as your body, bring the rope ends together to form loops for hanging.

- Hang the hammock indoors or outdoors. Tie the two ends to sturdy supports at each end. Two trees make good supports.

Chelan High School Valedictorian Alexandra Vazquez-Rocha

Chelan valedictorian credits mom as inspiration

By QUINN PROPST
Ward Media Staff Reporter

CHELAN – For Chelan High School valedictorian Alexandra Vazquez-Rocha, who goes by Natalie, her mother is the person who inspired her to strive for academic excellence.

Throughout high school, her mother has remained her biggest inspiration.

“My mother’s journey sheds light on the power of education and the sacrifices made for the next generation,” Vazquez-Rocha said. “Growing up in rural Mexico, she could not afford a high school education. Instead, at 17, she moved to the U.S. for a better life.”

“Unlike my mother, I have access to free education and am immensely grateful,” she said.

“Her sacrifices made to prioritize family and seek opportunities laid the foundation for my secondary education,” she said. “I am aware of the privilege I have, thanks to her sacrifices. Her belief in education inspires me to pursue higher education.”

By following in her footsteps, Vazquez-Rocha honors her mother’s resilience and dreams, she said.

“Each day, as I study, I remember her journey and the value she placed on my family’s education,” she said. “My pursuit for academic excellence is a tribute to her, a way to fulfill the dreams she could not chase.”

Vazquez-Rocha has worked hard to achieve good grades throughout her high school career but she likes to keep balance in mind. She learned about the four burner theory, which refers to burners on a stove that represent the four major areas in life: family, friends, work and health.

The Theory suggests that in order to be successful, you can only have three burners on at one time.

“The three burners that consume my life are my family, my work, and my friends,” she said. “Yet, in times of sickness, I have learned to put work and school aside to regain my health.”

“Along with this theory, I have learned to enjoy everyday moments with my loved ones

Manson High School Salutatorian Ella England

Ella England named 2024 Salutatorian of Manson High School

By TAYLOR CALDWELL
Ward Media Staff Reporter

MANSON – If Ella England, 2024 Salutatorian of Manson High School, could impart any wisdom to incoming students, it’s prioritize the things that matter, utilize available resources, and lean into support systems when possible.

“I think that if you do those things, then you can be successful no matter who you are,” said England.

In order to find success, these were lessons England had to learn herself throughout her education. She built a network of teachers that taught her valuable skills, offered encouragement, and helped her understand tough subjects.

When she struggled with her mental health and balancing academics, she leaned into the support of her parents.

“My parents were really key throughout that whole experience. They just made sure that I had the support that I needed, and they were always there for me,” said England. In addition to her academics, England excelled in her involvement through her church, sports, and clubs.

Through church, she’s taken on leadership roles and been involved with service projects, such as Adopt a Grandma, in which the youth choose an elder woman to serve in various ways.

“We made them bracelets, we took them their favorite dessert, and we sent them letters. We even had a tea party at the end,” said England.

She was on Varsity Track and Field all four years, and went to state her senior year for Cross Country. Her team placed 7th in State and were also named Academic State Champions.

England also served her community through clubs. With Future Business Leaders of America (FBLA), she would befriend and eat lunch with elementary students. For Interact Club, she recently helped sell tickets and procure items for a fundraising event.

“That was definitely a key part of my growth as a leader, just because it forced me outside of my comfort zone to talk to people in ways that I

Grit, determination led Silva to salutatorian spot

By QUINN PROPST
Ward Media Staff Reporter

CHELAN – Chelan High School Salutatorian Cray Silva doesn't mess around when it comes to academics.

He likes to get his work done and do it well. You will not find him procrastinating.

"One thing that definitely helped me was just getting things done early," he said. "I think a lot of people have problems with procrastination, but I like to just, if it's on my list, get it done as quickly as I can. And that's definitely something that's helped me to complete things and have more time later to study or do whatever I need to do."

His advice to younger students who aspire to academic success is to put in the time.

"I guess anyone can be successful in academics," he said. "It's just a matter of how much you work at it. So I guess just know that you can do it and put in the time, and you can be successful."

Being recognized as a salutatorian for the CHS Class of 2024 is something Silva is happy about.

"I'm pretty proud of it because, just like my GPA, it's a representation of all the hard work that I put in throughout high school," he said. "So, it's like it shows how much work I put in, which makes me proud of myself."

"I'm mostly self-motivated," he said. "I knew I could succeed, and I just tried as hard as I could to do that."

"I've also had really good teachers growing up who've also influenced me and motivated me to do that as well," he said. "And also a really supportive family who have helped me out, too. So it's just a combination of all of that."

A big challenge for Silva during his high school years was the pressure around sports.

"There were a couple of years in cross country where I, because of all the pressure surrounding the races, it made me race bad, causing me to not make it to state, and to overcome that, I just train harder and make sure it wouldn't happen again and also just kind of telling myself that I'm good enough and that if I have a good race, then I should be able to make it because I've worked hard to get to that point," he said.

"And I did make it to state this year, which was pretty awesome," he said. "So I overcame those mental barriers."

Silva credits cross country as being an important part of his self-growth.

"I did cross country all four years of high school, and that was a big contributor to my grit, I think," he said. "Because you definitely have to have a lot of that to run every day. It's a lot of work. But I think it's definitely developed my mental toughness and my ability to persevere through everything."

The first two tears of high school Silva participated in track and then switched to tennis for the last two.

"I switched to tennis just because I really enjoyed it," he said. "That's kind of another life lesson of, like, just pursuing what you're interested in. So I learned a lot from that."

Silva has served as an officer for Chelan Project, the CHS's outdoor recreation club.

"That's taught me a lot of skills like working with a team, planning trips, group presentations, public speaking, a lot of tangible skills that I learned from that position," he said.

"My parents, definitely my family, have been very supportive of me and everything that I do, like that switch to tennis, they're always just supportive of my decisions," he said. "Also, my science teacher she's a big role model in my life, so I definitely try to be like her. And she's also prepared me for the future a lot."

Silva's science teacher, April Slagle, has positively influenced him.

"Yeah, that would definitely be my science teacher, April; she's an amazing teacher and person," he said. "(She) definitely influenced me as a person and as a student."

"I think her character traits are things that I try to replicate like she listens to others, she's confident, she has her life figured out," he said. "So I definitely try to follow after that."

"And she's also given me a lot of guidance and support academically, teaching me things and helping me with college things, especially this year," he said.

In the fall, Silva will attend the University of Montana and will double major in geoscience and earth, water, and climate science.

Silva is not exactly sure what he plans to do career-wise, but he knows it will be something that will use his geoscience degree.

"I'm kind of just gonna feel it out in college and, like, see what I'm interested in," he said. "But definitely something in the geoscience field."

"Well, going into the geoscience field, there's a ton of different things that I could do that would help communities or the world," he said. "Like if I go into geomorphology, I could make sure that there's water available for communities and that the water is of good quality."

"As something like a structural geologist, I can make sure people don't build houses on a cliff or, you know, stuff like that, like, make sure that things are being built in the right places," he said. "There's a ton of different directions I could go with my career that would definitely benefit people. Just a matter of what I choose to go towards."

Chelan salutatorian inspired by family history of academics

By QUINN PROPST
Ward Media Staff Reporter

CHELAN – Chelan High School salutatorian Benjamin Brownfield was motivated to strive for academic excellence by his career goals and by a family history of academic achievement.

"I've always been academically motivated, but my biggest motivation has been to prepare myself for my career," he said. "I want to become an automotive engineer, and this is a very competitive field. I need to make my resume as impressive as possible to set myself up for success."

"Another motivator for me has been my family," he said. "My dad was the valedictorian for CHS in 1984, and my grandpa was Chelan's valedictorian in 1958. My family never made me feel pressured, but they always supported me and encouraged me to be a good student."

Brownfield said the most influential people in his life are his parents. They help him manage his busy schedule and help him whenever he needs it.

"My mom used to be an elementary school teacher, and without her, I never would've had the solid foundation I needed to start my education," he said. "I wasn't a very strong reader when I first started going to school, but she got me on track and gave me a passion for reading."

"My dad is very knowledgeable about almost everything, and he is what started my interest in automotive engineering," Brownfield said. "When I was little, he would explain different systems and components in cars, compressors, chainsaws, and everything else in an orchard. He answered countless questions and would even look up things he didn't have answers to and answer them later."

Brownfield was born and raised in Chelan and grew up on his family's organic fruit orchard, Brownfield Orchard. They grow apples, pears, peaches, cherries, apricots and more. His family has been growing fruit in the Chelan area for six generations.

He has been taking high school classes since 7th grade and hasn't let up since. He took 13 college or AP classes during high school and is very proud of the effort he put into all of them, he said.

"I would say I am most proud of being salutatorian because it sums up all of the work I have put into high school," he said. The biggest challenge Brownfield faced in high school was online schooling during the COVID-19 pandemic. COVID started during his eighth-grade year, and he started freshman year completely online.

"Online learning really didn't fit my learning style, and I got my only A- that year," he said. "Then the next year was a huge adjustment as we were back to full school days, and teachers were giving the same amount of work they had given before covid. While I did get used to the new workload, it was a struggle at first."

Brownfield is co-president of Chelan Project, an outdoor adventure and community service club, which is the biggest club in the school.

"This club has really changed me as a leader and has taught me how to better collaborate with other leaders," he said.

His other clubs include National Honors Society, Med Club, and Knowledge Bowl. Senior year he played tennis and ran cross country. He also played football, basketball, and track during high school.

"From these, I learned how to be a team player and how to push myself physically," he said.

Band was a huge part of his time in high school. He was a percussionist in concert band, played drumset for pep band and Toms for marching band. He was the drummer for jazz band and a percussionist in Valley Winds, a community concert band. He also helped the music teacher, Mr. Burdick, teach the 5th grade percussionists and clarinets.

"Band has taught me what people can do when they all work together towards one common goal and the importance of communication," he said.

Brownfield manages his school workload and extracurricular activities by knowing when he needs a break.

"I try to make sure I always have one day a week where I can be with my friends and not think about schoolwork," he said. "I also try to get as much of my work done in school as possible."

At school, Brownfield received a lot of support from several teachers.

"April Slagle taught Biology 101 and AP Physics and she gave me lots of counseling for determining my career," he said. "She introduced me to the college I'm attending, and without her, my future plans would be much less planned out."

"Mr. Burdick was my band teacher, and he's been teaching me since 5th grade," he said. "He is an excellent person and has been a great example to me."

"Mr. Bovingdon and Mr. Gleasemen were my English and History teachers, and they both instilled in me the importance of seeing all of the aspects of a topic and looking below the surface," he said.

In the fall, Brownfield will attend Colorado School of Mines to get a degree in mechanical engineering with a focus in automotive engineering.

"My dream job would be developing powertrains for Formula 1 cars," he said. "The average internal combustion engine is only 30% thermally efficient, which means lots of the energy from the fuel is being wasted as heat. Formula 1 cars are nearly 50% thermally efficient, which is a much higher number."

"Technology from F1 often makes its way to commercial cars we drive," he said. "I think it would be an amazing job to be at the forefront of making engines more efficient, while also working with high-performance machines."

Valedictorian Alexis Villaseñor: hard work and sacrifice lead to full Johns Hopkins Scholarship

By TAYLOR CALDWELL
Ward Media Staff Reporter

MANSON – For Manson High School 2024 valedictorian Alexis Villaseñor, working hard and making sacrifices can result in great reward.

In addition to earning the highest grade point average of his graduating class, the high school senior was offered a full scholarship to Johns Hopkins University in Maryland to study neuroscience.

Villaseñor describes himself as quiet, friendly, humble and always trying to pursue success. When asking his friends, they add, "dedicated, hard-working, and puts in tons of effort."

"I wanted to go to a good college, and pursue a good career, so I could help [my parents] in the future, because they sacrificed everything for me," said Villaseñor.

His favorite subject in school was history, because of its relevance to politics and current events. However, Biology, although challenging, made him more curious about the human anatomy, and furthered his interest in pursuing neuroscience.

For Villaseñor, Manson had many benefits that would not have been possible in a larger town with a larger school.

He grew up in a strong community that valued hard work, pursuing the American dream, and fostering close relationships with individuals. This was especially true at Manson High School, where Villaseñor was able to form a supportive network of students and teachers.

In Manson, you're friends with everyone with different perspectives and different backgrounds, which is exceptional," said Villaseñor.

At a larger school, Villaseñor knows he wouldn't have received the same quality education and level of support as he did from his teachers, such as Jorge Lopez in middle school, and Phil Fournier and Kate Sorenson in high school.

"You should not consider teachers as just teachers, but you should consider them as friends that can mentor you and help you throughout life," said Villaseñor.

Initially, Johns Hopkins University seemed like an impossibility to Villaseñor, and he almost didn't apply. However, Sorenson encouraged him to give it a shot, and even wrote a letter of recommendation.

"That's the highest accomplishment I've done in high school," said Villaseñor.

"It's a prestigious university for undergraduate research, and it's top five for neuroscience, so it's a really great thing that I got accepted into."

Villaseñor's imparting wisdom for incoming students is to be willing to make sacrifices in order to succeed, always try your best, and always stay in the present.

was not previously comfortable with. I really enjoyed that experience," said England.

England will attend BYU, following the footsteps of her BYU alumni parents. There, she will study nursing, inspired by her mom, who went back to become a nurse just a few years ago. England is also interested in pursuing a minor in public health.

"I want to be able to give back that way and make sure that people are as healthy and happy as they possibly can be, so they can live their lives and achieve the goals that they want," said England.

and how to drop school work to embark on a life-changing adventure," she said. "This has helped me, a student, from burning out."

Vazquez-Rocha was deeply involved in extracurricular activities such as Med Club, Chelan Project, Todos United, Drill Team, and Track and Field.

"Med Club is what I am most involved in and am proud of," she said. "I have been a part of the Med Club for four years and an officer for three years. My senior year, I served as the President of the club."

"Through this club, I have learned what it means to be a good leader," she said. "A leader that cares and listens to the officer team and the club."

This year, Vazquez-Rocha led the officer team in planning and executing three times the number of blood drives compared to the previous year. They partnered with Columbia Valley Community Health to teach Morgan Owings Elementary School 5th graders about the heart and lungs, which ended with a dissection.

In the fall Vazquez-Rocha will attend Gonzaga University and major in Biology and concentrate on research. She wants to become a medical research physician and plans to earn her MD/PHD after her undergrad degree.

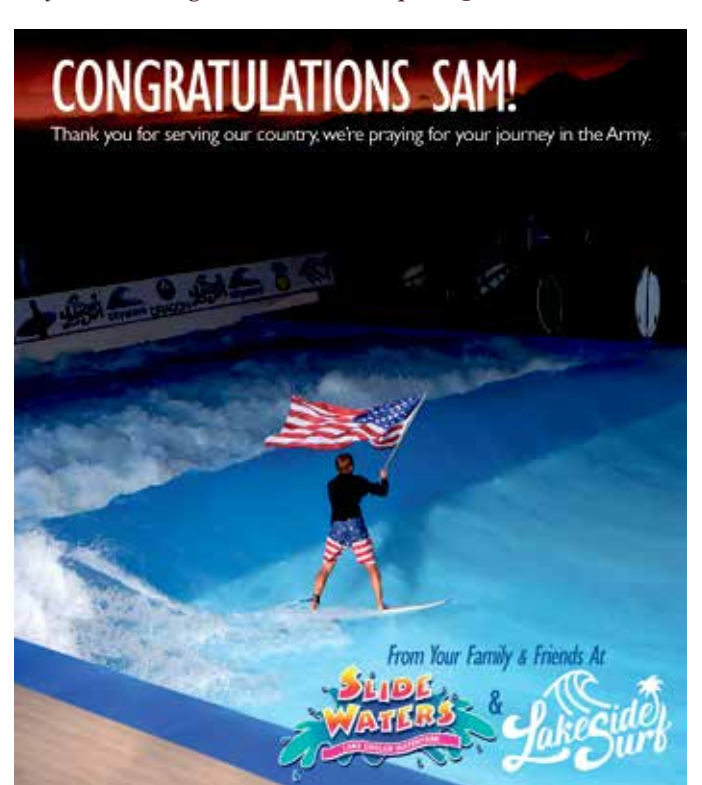

Vazquez-Rocha will also minor in Spanish.

"This minor would allow me to optimize my communication with Spanish speakers as a medical physician," she said.

To incoming freshmen who aspire to be successful in high school, Vazquez-Rocha emphasizes the importance of hard work.

"To incoming freshmen, I would say take high school seriously because your hard work will pay off, whether it is graduating high school or graduating with a full ride to college, to work is worth it," she said. "Yet, also to enjoy your high school experience by involving yourself in extracurriculars and spending time with your friends and family."

All of these graduates deserve special recognition for their resilience and dedication to completing their education in a non-traditional setting. In 2024, we know that not all students learn in the same ways or even in the same environment, and we are lucky to have Chelan School of Innovation as a project-based learning high school, and Chelan Digital Academy for students that need a flexible option for high school while they work, and/or navigate different life experiences.

The following staff members also deserve extreme gratitude for helping these graduates reach the finish line: William Sibbers, Erik Romero, Eric Kurle, Dianne Thornton, Armando Davila, and Dianne Harris.
