Cashmere man arrested on multiple charges of forgery, identity theft, and robbery

NCW News Ward Media

WENATCHEE — A multi-agency operation has led to the arrest of a 24-year-old man suspected of multiple counts of forgery, identity theft, and robbery across two counties. Dennis Mendez of Cashmere was apprehended on July 23 by the Columbia River Drug Task Force, according to a press release from the Wenatchee Police Department. Mendez was initially sought on an outstanding warrant from the Washington State Department of Corrections.

Law enforcement agencies, including the Wenatchee Police Department, Chelan County Sheriff's Office, and East Wenatchee Police Department, had developed probable cause to believe Mendez was responsible for a string of crimes committed over a period of just a few weeks in Chelan and Douglas Counties.

The alleged offenses include multiple instances of forgery and identity theft and a robbery within the city limits of East Wenatchee. Mendez was booked into the Chelan County Regional Justice Center on an outstanding warrant and faces additional charges of theft, identity theft, forgery, and robbery.

CASHMERE Cashmere, Leavenworth, and US-2 will be featured in "Evergreens," a Washington-based feature-length film. The cast and crew spent multiple days filming at the Outpost Saloon, and film productions, "Evergreens" is his first foray as director. Wanting to keep the production local, Briley was inspired to write a story about all of his favorite places to go as a kid growing up in Washington.

Cashmere City Council moves to create Transportation Benefit District, addresses development concerns

By Kirk Beckendorf Special to Ward Media

CASHMERE- The Cashmere City Council has taken steps toward creating a new Transportation Benefit District (TBD) to address rising city expenses and budget shortfalls.

During their July 22 meeting, council members directed Mayor Jim Fletcher to proceed with establishing the TBD, which could implement a sales tax ranging from 0.1% to 0.3%. While no formal vote was taken, the council expressed consensus on the need for the maximum 0.3% rate, acknowledging that voter approval would be required for this higher rate.

To address an immediate budget concern, including an unexpected $75,000 increase in jail service costs from Chelan County, the council proposed a two-phase approach. The first step would be to quickly establish the TBD with a 0.1% sales tax, which does not require a public vote. Mayor Fletcher estimated this could generate revenue by January 2025. The second phase would involve seeking voter approval for an additional 0.2% tax, likely to be on the ballot in about a year. City documents reveal significant increases in public safety costs, with law and fire expenses rising by $172,000 (24%) to $887,000 over two years. This surge has forced reductions in other areas, including halving the transportation capital improvements budget from $400,000 to $200,000. Mayor Fletcher highlighted that the city is already providing fewer services due to increased costs, including reduced street maintenance, repairs, sweeping, and mowing. He emphasized that funds from the new tax would be earmarked for roadways and transportation-related projects. Council members stressed the importance of clearly communicating to the public the necessity of additional revenue to cover rising costs. Council Member Shela Pistoresi emphasized the need to understand the big picture when determining the required tax rate. In other business, the council addressed concerns about the impact of development on city infrastructure. Council member Jeff Johnson initiated a discussion on reviewing development codes, particularly focusing on the effects of new projects on city roads and residents. Johnson cited a specific development on Kennedy Road as problematic, where 27 lots were added to a single-lane road without required improvements. He argued that developers should bear the costs of necessary infrastructure upgrades rather than pass them on to city residents. The council recommended that the Cashmere Planning Commission investigate the issue and explore options for addressing future development impacts. In unanimous decisions, the council approved an agreement with BLADES Code Services, LLC for building inspections and authorized the mayor to sign a letter acknowledging LocalTel services' transition to Ziply Fiber Northwest following the sale of Computer 5's assets.

an orchard in Cashmere, and iconic locations in downtown Leavenworth.

"It's definitely a place where as soon as you come here, you fall in love with it. It totally makes sense to do this movie here," said actor Edouard Philipponnat, who plays James in the film.

The movie, written and directed by Spokane-based filmmaker Jared Briley, is a coming-of-age love story that follows characters Eve and James on a road trip across Washington state. The story begins in Spokane and then travels through Coulee City, Cashmere, Leavenworth, Index, Seattle, Forks, and the Hoh Rain Forest in the Olympic National Park.

"We always joke that Washington State [is] sort of the third lead behind the two main actors," said Briley.

While Briley has worked as the first assistant director on several TV Chamber of Commerce to find and scout locations in the surrounding area

"The best part about making movies is the collaboration with so many different people involved, creatively. Whether they mean to be or not, finding the right location is such a huge creative part, especially in the movie that's really trying to show off what Washington State really is," said Briley.

In addition to scenes shot at the Outpost Saloon and the orchard, the movie will feature a montage of scenes depicting a few hours in Leavenworth. The project filmed the characters walking the main street, Black Bird Island, and even visiting Das Thrift Shoppe and the Nutcracker Museum. Along the way, the crew invited property owners and

Cashmere School District passes Clean Building compliance review with flying colors

BY: WILL NILLES Ward Media Staff Reporter

CASHMERE- The Cashmere School District (CSD) once again sets the standard high for Washington facilities after passing a Clean Building compliance review for every facility in the district. CSD conducted the review as a part of Washington State's Clean Buildings Performance Standard, which aims to lower costs and pollution from fossil fuel consumption by improving the efficiency of existing large buildings state-wide.

Performed by an outside engineering company, the review took into account a range of factors and calculations relating to square footage, power consumption, and the overall efficiency of lighting and HVAC systems.

CSD Business Manager Bo Charlton presented the positive results of the report to the Cashmere School Board, satisfied with the district's overall performance.

"This is great news, because if we came back negative, as far as the state standards, we would have had to invest heavily into

It's essential to recognize that bias can exist in any medium, but the structured process of traditional journalism often helps mitigate it.

Any tips for how to vet a news source?

Here's a guide to help you evaluate the reliability of any news source:

Dig deeper than headlines: With content flooding our feeds, take a moment to investigate the source before sharing. Be cautious of unfamiliar sites that may have emerged solely to Seek journalistic rigor: Look for outlets that adhere to ethical standards even under the pressure of breaking news. Are they providing context and verifying claims, whether about a political candidate or a community event?

Watch how mistakes are handled: Publisher In the rush of news TERRY coverage, errors can occur. Trustworthy WARD outlets will promptly correct misinformation, whether it's about election polls or local business updates.

Evaluate coverage balance: Assess how different perspectives are portrayed. Is there an obvious slant, or does the source strive for a fair representation of all sides of a story?

Red flags to watch for:

- Emotionally charged headlines that oversimplify complex issues
- Doctored images or videos of public figures and events Coverage that seems designed to inflame
- divisions rather than inform · Consistent focus on one

WENATCHEE -- Chelan County officials have announced the implementation of Stage 2 fire restrictions, which went into effect on Friday, July 26, as wildfire risks escalate across the region.

The restrictions, affecting unincorporated areas of the county, prohibit residential campfires and target shooting outside of designated gun ranges. These measures come as the county's Valley Zone fire danger rating has been elevated to "extreme," the highest level on the local scale.

Chris Pedersen, Chelan County Fire Marshal, emphasized the critical nature of the situation. "With major wildfires now burning in Oregon and throughout Washington, firefighting resources may be stretched," Pedersen said. "It's only July we still have a lot of fire season to get through. We need everyone to do their part and not be the spark that causes a wildfire in our area."

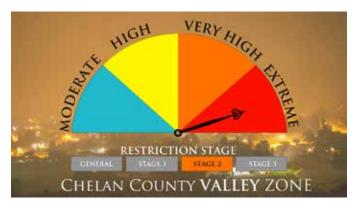

The Mountain Zone remains at a "very high" rating, just below extreme. Officials note that these ratings indicate fire-prone increasingly conditions in the affected areas.

Under Stage 2 restrictions, hunting remains permitted in open areas, and the use of commercial barbecues and camp stoves is still allowed. However, the ban on outdoor burning of yard debris, in effect since June 1, continues.

County officials utilize a system of fire danger ratings and restrictions to inform the public about conditions and limitations during fire season, which typically runs from June 1 to October 1. The current restrictions are outlined in Chapter 7.52 of the Chelan County Code.

region faces As the heightened fire risks, authorities urge residents and visitors to exercise extreme caution and adhere to all fire safety regulations. The restrictions will remain in place until further notice, with the possibility of more severe measures if conditions worsen.

WVC crafts new strategic plan to strengthen community and address equity

Wenatchee Valley College students walk on the Omak campus. WVC develops a new strategic plan, President Dr. Faimous Harrison aims to reposition the college as a community-focused institution serving the diverse needs of North Central Washington's expansive region.

By QUINN PROPST Ward Media Staff Reporter

WENATCHEE—Wenatchee Valley College is developing a new strategic plan to enhance its community focus, address equity gaps, and maintain academic excellence.

WVC President Dr. Faimous Harrison seeks to develop a growth mindset and continuous improvement framework for the college.

He envisions WVC evolving into a stronger regional anchor, a key economic driver, and a student-centered, communityengaged college.

"So with that, one of our objectives right now, we're in the process of working through a new strategic plan, and how we are repositioning the colleges instead of the brick and mortar of higher education right, the brick and mortar campuses, what we realize is that the college is our community," he said.

"So clearly, it's not to say that we're not student-centered." he said. "What it means is where do our students come from, our students come from the community. So we need to shift our lens to be, how are we more intentional in trying to meet students, meet their community where they are and really understanding the role that the college can play moving forward."

As part of developing the new strategic plan, WVC is conducting an indepth environmental scan and cross-referencing with other area strategic plans to identify gaps and needs within the region.

The college is working with regional organizations and has partnered with an outside consultant to collect the data needed for the plan. Harrison said that data will be the guiding force for decisions.

Harrison plans to engage stakeholders more intentionally by developing programs, training, and degrees that meet high demand and support local businesses. initiatives These present numerous exciting opportunities for growth and collaboration, he said. Harrison views the college they are.

"How do we become intentional and how do we support that seamless pathway, whether it's credentials, whether it's supporting businesses, ensuring that they have the employee with the skill sets that are needed to or for them to maintain their businesses as well as reach their potential and goal," he said. "So that's one of our roles as a public entity, that collective impact is critically important."

Another main focus of the new strategic plan is disaggregating data and looking at equity gaps.

"So when you think about rural communities, when you think about zip codes, when you think about students, you know, from different backgrounds, when you think about different challenges, I mean, there's so many different layers that we need to be intentional for," he said. "So when you look at that type of data then you can be very prescriptive and strategic in identifying what resources and support that's needed."

WVC serves a large territory with over 10,000 square miles.

"One of the challenges, that narrative? How do we become intentional? You do that within a collective impact framework? So we're starting that work."

Rural communities face numerous challenges, including limited resources. However, NCW has seen growth, so Harrison sees it as vitally important to support local industries, businesses, and the people who live here. One of the key questions the plan will focus on is how to effectively support the local ecosystem.

Because the school serves such a large area, the environmental scan is critical to understanding the diverse needs of different NCW communities. For example, Wenatchee, Chelan, Omak, and Nespelem are all different communities with different needs that the college serves. "So it's not a cookie cutter approach that one size fits all," he said. "We have to be intentional in our efforts of supporting our students, supporting families, supporting the communities and supporting our region, and that's a different lens."

The strategic plan will examine how WVC works with stakeholders, residents, industries, and the community and how to meet them where though, is, as you know, we're the only education institution for such a large area," Harrison said. "So we have to really be strategic in looking at partnerships.'

"When you think communities, rural of underrepresented areas, when you think of resources on the west side of the state versus the east side of the state, there's a challenge there," Harrison said.

"So usually in Washington state, what do we always hear?" he said. "We always hear Olympia, we always hear Seattle, right? We very rarely see, you know, east of the mountains as the focal point, right? So how do we change

Multiple fire agencies contain Dryden house fire, prevent major wildland spread

By: Will Nilles

Ward Media Staff Reporter

DRYDEN– Chelan County Fire District 6 worked alongside a team of local fire agencies to contain an actively spreading house fire in the North Dryden Road area.

Reports of the fire initially appeared around 9:45 p.m. on July 25 as flames quickly spread throughout a Dryden home and garage in the 6600 block of North Dryden Road, east of the Peshastin Pinnacles.

As flames began to spread from the structure onto the adjacent hillside, agencies from Lake Wenatchee, Leavenworth, Cashmere, and Wenatchee Valley dispatched crews and equipment to assist in the escalating incident. The responding fire crews spent the entire night digging lines and running hoses in a united effort to contain the fire before it reached more treacherous wildland territory.

By 4 a.m. the next day, through joint efforts with their neighboring districts, Fire District 6 contained the fire at just over 2 acres.

Fire District 6 Chief Andy Lee worked alongside his crew in containing the rapidly spreading fire. He described the overall response and containment of the situation in one word, "Excellent."

"We stopped it at 2.1 acres with the help of folks from Chelan Fire District 6, Chelan Fire District 3, Lake Wenatchee Fire and Rescue, Cashmere Fire, Wenatchee Valley Fire, the Forest Service, and DNR," Chief Lee shared, grateful for the powerful camaraderie and teamwork displayed across the local area's fire response agencies. "Without that group of folks, we would have been in big trouble."

Chief Lee explained that the combined efforts of these local fire agencies and the weather had also played a significant role in helping emergency responders contain the fire.

"Luckily it was a cooler night than it has been. Mother Nature kind of helped us out a little bit. You know, the wind died down at exactly the right time which allowed our folks to catch it," Chief Lee commented with relief.

Though responders contained this recent Dryden fire rapidly and effectively, Fire District 6 remains on guard for any fires in the area. It knows that the only way to avoid a disaster in the dry hills of the Dryden area is to remain constantly vigilant.

As Chief Lee explained, "We're getting primed for some big fires. That's why we throw resources at them straight out the gate. We want to get these things small and where we can handle them."

No injuries have been reported, yet the flames destroyed the house and garage.

Wenatchee River salmon season canceled for 2024 due to low Chinook returns

NCW News Ward Media

WENATCHEE — The Washington Department of Fish and Wildlife (WDFW) announced that the planned salmon fishing season on the Wenatchee River will not open in 2024 due to low Chinook salmon returns.

The closure, effective from August 1 through September 30, affects the stretch of the Wenatchee River from its mouth to the Icicle Road Bridge crossing near Leavenworth.

Officials cited insufficient numbers of both hatchery and wild summer Chinook salmon returning to the river as the reason for the closure. Current projections indicate the population falls short of the minimum required to meet spawning escapement and broodstock objectives for the Wenatchee River system.

The department emphasized that all other fishing regulations outlined in the 2024-25 Sport Fishing Rules pamphlet for the Wenatchee River remain in effect. Anglers are encouraged to check the e WDFW's emergency rules website regularly for any d updates or changes.

This closure highlights ongoing challenges in Pacific Northwest salmon conservation efforts as changing environmental conditions and human impacts continue to affect fish populations throughout the region.

For more information, anglers can contact the WDFW Region 2 office in Ephrata at 509-754-4624 or email TeamEphrata@ dfw.wa.gov.

Washington State Parks Commission approves new camping stay limits

NCW News Ward Media

OLYMPIA — The Washington State Parks and Recreation Commission has approved new limits on camping stays in state parks to improve access and resource management. At its meeting on July 18, the commission voted to amend regulations limiting campers to no more than 10 nights in one park within a 30-day period. The changes also cap total camping nights at 90 per calendar year across all state parks.

The new rules, which take effect August 18, replace a more complex system that had different limits for peak and offpeak seasons. Officials say the changes will make stay limits clearer and more consistent for visitors and staff.

The commission considered historical data showing that of more than 321,000 reservations in 2023, only 676 stayed longer than 10 nights. Additionally, fewer than 100 out of almost 10,000 discount pass holders exceeded 90 total nights last year.

Public comments were accepted from June 1 to July 12, 2024, with over 300 responses received. According to park officials, the majority were favorable or neutral to the proposed changes.

Existing reservations that exceed the new limits and were made before August 18 will be honored. After that date, the new stay restrictions will apply to all new bookings. The commission authorized filing the amended regulations after making minor edits recommended by the Attorney General's office.

State parks officials say the changes align with the Commission's strategic goal to effectively manage resources needed to create and sustain an exceptional park system.

everybody necessarily needs a house right now and they don't realize there's other resources out there," Ervin explained, revealing other ways in which the HHN strives to protect locals from homelessness. "People think they're getting kicked out of their house when they're just told 'you need to pay or you're gonna get kicked out.' So there's resources out there that can actually help them get through those payments in those situations. And so we can connect them to other resources that help them, that's a big part of our job as well. It's not just, 'let's get you into a house."

In helping so many individuals and families with varying worries, disadvantages, and disabilities, the HHN works alongside a massive team of organizations, including the Community Action Council, Women's Resource Center, and YWCA, to aid applicants not just with housing but also with food, employment assistance, and emergency shelter.

Chelan County Homeless Housing Program Manager, Amber Hallberg, commented on the teamwork required tackle the many to problems connected to local homelessness.

"There's a lot of community collaboration, a lot of collaboration between agencies," Hallberg noted, expanding on the HHN's intensive community coordination to find help for their applicants. Behind the HHN's front desk, Juan Loeza and Jon Davies work as Coordinated Entry administrative specialists, standing on the front lines of the HHN's mission to help connect locals at risk of homelessness to essential community resources.

"One of the main things is taking inputs, so phone calls, web applications, emails, people trying to come in themselves in person," Davies described the often busy yet rewarding nature of his and Loeza's work. "Family members sometimes come in and say, 'we need help with someone...' and then we process them and do an assessment to help sort them on our list according to various programs they're eligible for or have been viewed candidates for. Sometimes, when I hang up, it's already ringing again. I'll do like four [calls] in a row. It's pretty cool, it makes the day fly by."

Loeza described one of the biggest challenges that he and Davies face while trying to help people.

"The biggest challenge I would say would be when you have someone in a hotel and they have a certain time to be on the streets... as part of that, the biggest challenge is to try to find something fast when you just can't," Loeza explained, hoping to help every other locals to be extras in the scenes. "I think that's a beautiful thing to include and work with local people wherever we are traveling, because at the end of the day, that's a very important part of the film itself. You know, we meet people on our travels that make an impact on our lives and vice versa. So, I think the journey we're taking as a film crew and cast very much mirrors the story," said actor Darby Lee-Stack, who plays Eve in the film.

each building or buildings that didn't comply... which could have cost tens of thousands of dollars, if not more," Charlton explained with relief.

In ensuring that so many complex systems comply with the Performance Standard, CSD's maintenance and custodial staff regularly perform vastly important duties. From in-house maintenance of the district's many HVAC and lighting systems to the detailed cleaning of each facility, the work of CSD's vital custodial and maintenance staff made all the difference in the school district's ability to demonstrate Clean Building standards at the state level.

Charlton expressed his gratitude for the district's maintenance staff, citing them as a major force in completing

"is to create economic development opportunities by building and enhancing the competitiveness, profile and sustainability of Washington State's film industry."

"What we're trying to do is encourage projects to film in Washington State, hire Washington State crew, [and] put money into the Washington state economy," said Sherrye Wyatt, Washington Filmworks Rural Economic Development Manager.

To support rural Washington county economies, the organization also provides additional funding incentives for projects filming 50 percent of their production days in rural areas, and up to an additional 10 percent back on in-state expenditures. According to the Clean Building compliance review with all around positive results.

"I just think this speaks highly to not only our community but also I want to shout out our maintenance department. They do a great job of taking care of all our facilities... I'd say, across the state, we kind of set the standard pretty high as far as our facilities and our buildings," Charlton revealed, applauding the CSD maintenance for their dedicated work.

With the next round of review for Clean Building compliance still 7 to 10 years away, CSD has set itself up for continued success in ensuring not only a lower impact on the local environment but also all-around lower power costs and consumption for the entire district.

"We know what the standard is and we are already meeting compliance rather than us trying to work to achieve a certain standard here in the next couple of years when we would have had to invest our own money to get us to that standard, and we already know we're at that standard," Charlton shared with confidence for the district's future in meeting the Clean Building Performance Standard.

Briley, the organization will provide about 35 percent of the film's budget, which is just under $1 million.

"The benefit is that it generates economic activity that doesn't require a community to change who they are. It celebrates your true authentic self. In some other industries, you have to build this, or pay that, or create something inauthentic...Why they're filming in these locations is for who they are as is, and they're spending money," said Wyatt.

The project will take 18 total days to film. It will be submitted to film festivals in 2025, where Briley hopes it will be bought by a distributor.

This small summertime success for CSD clears a path forward for much larger gains within the district, allowing them to invest more funds directly into their students and student-centered educational programs, which help instill Cashmere youth with the versatility and industriousness the community is known for.

Health And Well-Being

Erectile Dysfunction and Your Oral Health

(NAPS)-It is never a bad time to talk about erectile dysfunction (ED), even when you are at the dentist. Periodontal disease has long been connected to various systemic diseases including cardio-vascular disease, diabetes, rheumatoid arthritis and respiratory problems. Recently, though, it has also been connected to erectile dysfunction, which can have a negative impact on the quality of life for patients. Periodontal disease is an inflammatory infection of the gums caused by plaque and involves the supporting structures of the teeth. Strong brushing and flossing habits can help prevent periodontal diseases, but a recent study shows that only about half of all Americans brush their teeth twice a day and floss daily. "June is National Men's Health Month and is a great time to create good habits around brushing, flossing and overall health," said Kyle Dosch, DDS, Delta Dental of Washington's dental director and member dentist. "Taking care of your oral health is about more than just having a nice smile; it also can positively influence your overall health." According to the Centers for Disease Control, half of adults over the age of 30 have some form of gum disease and more than 70% of adults over 65 have periodontal disease. Gingivitis and periodontitis are the two main types of periodontal disease, which stem from plaque and tartar building up on a person's teeth, causing their gums to become swollen, painful and to bleed easily. Advanced gum disease, or periodontitis, can cause a loss of bone mass in and around the tooth sockets and jawbone, which ultimately can lead to teeth becoming loose, falling out or needing to be extracted. So, what does all of that have to do with ED? In a nutshell it means that while poor oral health doesn't cause erectile dysfunction, it can be an underlying issue. Keeping your mouth healthy can help solve a number of health problems, such as ED, which includes difficulty getting and maintaining an erection, and reduced sexual desire. A 2015 study conducted in Taiwan determined men diagnosed with erectile dysfunction were 80% more likely to have been diagnosed with chronic perico.chelan.wa.us.

A visit to the dentist may give you more to smile about than you realize.

odontal disease than men without erectile dysfunction.

This can happen because chronic inflammation caused by gum disease can damage cells which line your blood vessels, including the blood vessels in the penis. When these cells are damaged, it can result in impaired blood flow throughout the body, leading to erectile dysfunction. Chronic inflammation can also lead to impotence, diabetes or heart disease.

There is good news, though. While poor oral health may be associated with erectile dysfunction, a strong oral care routine may help in managing this condition.

Ways to prevent gum disease include:

- Brush for two minutes, twice a day
- Floss at least once a day
- Schedule regular dental checkups and cleanings
- Maintain a healthy diet and limit sugary food and drinks
- Avoid tobacco use
- Replace your toothbrush every three to four months

Studies around the world have shown that patients suffering from both moderate to severe erectile dysfunction and chronic periodontitis who received treatment for their gum disease reported that the severity of their ED lessened after just three months.

So, if you are experiencing symptoms of erectile dysfunction, you may want to mention this to your dentist. Your dentist is specifically trained to understand how issues with your oral health can impact your medical history, and vice versa.

For more information about oral health, visit Delta Dental of Washington's blog
