PLAIN – A 110-year-old home built by the oldest living pioneer family in Plain is refurbished and back on the market.

The home is the second of three homes built by William Wesley Burgess, or W.W. Burgess. According to “Greater Lake Wenatchee Area History” by Rollie Schmitt, W.W. Burgess left Iowa in 1888, finding work at the Newhall sawmill on Orcas Island. Eventually he came to Eastern Washington looking for a homestead site, where sites were still available. In 1893, he came up to Beaver Valley and purchased a homestead from the valley’s only resident, John Matthews.

Shortly after, W.W. Burgess returned to Orcas Island to find a wife, Barbara Elizabeth Oleson Gaasland, who had just immigrated from Bergen, Norway. The two moved permanently to the Burgess homestead in 1895. As his family grew, W.W. Burgess built a larger log cabin. In 1913, he built a sawmill, which ran until 1928.

According to W.W. Burgess’s great-grandson Bill (W.E.) Burgess, W.W. Burgess lived in the log cabin and used the sawmill to cut the wood needed for a second home across the street in 1914. That second home, while owned under a different name (Willet), stayed in the family until it was sold in 2023.

The historic home was purchased and refurbished by Karen Dickinson, a descendant of another homestead family that settled along Lake Wenatchee around 1908.

“I was just tickled or thrilled that it’s been saved...I figured if they sold it, a lot of people would just push it together and burn it,” said Burgess.

Dickinson has a background in restoring historic homes, including her own family’s property, which she now operates as a wedding venue.

“[It was] another property like this, where it’s got some history and change has gone on, but it has also never been out of the family, and several people told me, just push it

City of Leavenworth passes resolution to oppose Climate Change Act repeal, leaves resolution to oppose Capital Gains Tax on table

By TAYLOR CALDWELL
Ward Media Staff Reporter

LEAVENWORTH—The Leavenworth City Council passed a resolution to oppose Initiative 2117 (I-2117), which would repeal the Climate Change Act, during its Oct. 8 meeting. The council chose not to put a similar resolution opposing the repeal of the capital gains tax (I-2109) up for a vote.

I-2117 would prohibit state agencies from implementing any type of carbon tax credit trading, including the Climate Commitment Act (CCA). It would repeal the cap-and-invest program created by the CCA, designed to help the state meet its goal of reducing carbon emissions by 95% by 2050, while investing in clean transportation, environmental justice, and addressing health equity.

Those in favor of the initiative argue the act created a larger increase in gas prices than was originally promised, putting an inordinate burden on working families without effectively reducing emissions.

“This came out of a meeting I went to with the [Association of Washington Cities], and a number of cities are concerned about impacts to the state budget, which also impacts city budgets,” said Mayor Carl Florea.

Washington cities such as Kenmore, Burien, Lake Forest Park, Seattle, Tumwater, Vancouver, and Redmond as well as Port of Seattle and King County have passed resolutions opposing the repeal. Seventeen out of 29 tribes across the state have also officially opposed the initiative.

Cities and towns are eligible for grants and loans funded by CCA revenues, for local projects and programs such as transportation improvements.

According to the Washington Office of Financial Management’s fiscal impact statement, the projected revenue loss would be $758.1 million in state fiscal year 2025, leading to cuts in local funding opportunities. For fiscal years 2025 to 2029, the projected reduction in revenue is $3.9 billion.

“As a city council and a mountain town...I think we definitely have a role to play in knowing what this carbon tax credit does, what it does for us, to lose this would be a significant loss for the city and for our community, so I think well worth a discussion,” said City Councilmember Zeke Reister.

Community member Ron Duncan provided public comment, advising the council that the decision should be left to the public. City Councilmember Clint Strand agreed, fearing that it would open a “Pandora’s box” of endorsing positions.

“I’m equally uncomfortable with this resolution in front of us as this next one that will be coming before us, because I think this goes beyond the bounds of the city limits and our responsibilities as city council members,” said City Councilmember Anne Hessburg.

City Councilmember Rhona Baron resigns

By TAYLOR CALDWELL
Ward Media Staff Reporter

LEAVENWORTH – Leavenworth City Council is seeking applicants to fill a position left vacant following the resignation of Councilmember #4 Rhona Baron, announced on Oct. 4.

In her letter of resignation, Baron said she had been experiencing serious health challenges for the last ten months, stating that she and her doctors agreed that stepping down from her duties and focusing on her recovery would be the best decision for her health.

“It’s been a tough decision. I was hoping to continue to be a voice of balance on the council on behalf of many in the community,” said Baron in her letter.

Baron told Ward Media that the council’s culture of not listening respectfully to varying points of view was a secondary concern in her decision. In her letter, Baron

Construction of 'Upper Valley Cross' likely to resume next spring

By CAROLINE MENNA
Ward Media Intern

LEAVENWORTH – The construction, and subsequent evening illumination, of the steel, seventy-foot self-designated ‘Upper Valley Cross’ (UVC) is expected to be completed next spring. The project, which began in June of this year, was suspended in August pending resolution of a Notice and Order to correct Chelan County Code violations (“Notice and Order”) issued by the office of the Chelan County Community Development (CCCD) to the site’s landowner Robert Johnson.

Johnson, a local real estate developer, has provided the location for the partially constructed cross on his 20-acre parcel of designated forest land, landlocked by National Forest, near the summit of Tumwater Mountain just outside of Leavenworth city limits.

Yodelin Broth Co. to host benefit dinner for CHS Speech and Debate team

LEAVENWORTH—Yodelin Broth Company will host a Benefit Dinner on October 16, starting at 5 p.m., to support the Cascade High School Speech and Debate team.

By COAL FIANO
CHS Publications Group

The Speech and Debate team consists of around ten members, who all put in countless hours to write, memorize, and perform their work. The team has competed at the State tournament for the past twenty-four years, making this club an important part of CHS's history. The Cascade group competes against teams throughout all of Washington State and has always placed extremely well.

Last year, at state qualifiers, Breanna Loomis and Coal Fiano placed a strong first place in dual interpretation; Kate Smith and Rhonan Allen placed second.

Not only has the speech team seen many years of success, but the debate team has also been growing in strength. The Public Forum duo of Mia Schons and Breanna Loomis placed first at districts in 2023-204 and went onto Debate State for the first time in years. The Speech and Debate team is confident they can make it to State again this year with some help from the community.

Yodelin Broth Co. is graciously hosting this event to assist them in their fundraising. Cascades' Speech and Debate team hopes to see you there to support your local community and school: Come to support Cascade High School and the Speech & Debate team!

Endorsement of Flint Hartwig for Chelan County Commissioner Dist. 3

In this current election cycle 2024 at the Local, State and Federal level, we as Americans have a very important obligation to elect the people we feel will improve our every day lives in the most positive way possible without politics getting in the way. Flint has chosen, like me, to push pause on his personal career, at great financial detriment, to offer his services to the citizens of Chelan County as Commissioner of Dist. 3. Flint brings with him the entrepreneurial spirit, which is the cornerstone of small business, to value every tax payer dollar entrusted to the Board of Commissioners. His knowledge and experience with construction and land development for the highest and best use without sacrificing the rural lifestyle we embrace, will carry the County into the future successfully.

His attendance at County Commission Sessions over the many months, will give him the ability to hit the ground running and continue the work of retiring Commissioner Tiffany Gering, who has endorsed him as well.

I believe that Flint will put the citizens of Chelan County first, do the work, make a difference and once again return to the private sector to pick up where he left off like our Founding Fathers intended at the birth of this great nation.

Please help me support Flint Hartwig for Chelan County Commissioner Dist. 3

Leavenworth Library to showcase local artist's nature-inspired works

The Leavenworth Echo

LEAVENWORTH —The Leavenworth Library will host an art exhibition featuring works by local artist Cynthia Neely in its Fireside Room from October 15 through November 22. Neely, a Leavenworth resident, works primarily with acrylic, cold wax, and oil.

The exhibition will present Neely's current body of work, which focuses on the relationship between individuals and their surrounding landscapes. According to the exhibition announcement, Neely's art "attempts to answer questions about a sense of one's place in the landscape and how to respond to that place."

The landscape in Neely's work is portrayed as vast and powerful, yet also fragile, subject to human influence and care. It expresses feelings that can be both intimate and distant simultaneously. Neely's creative process involves exploring textures, patterns, and colors inspired by the natural world. The artist states that she "endeavors to capture the indelible impressions inspired by the natural world" and is "stirred by both the strength and the vulnerability of what is around us, by its need for our respect and attention." The exhibition will be open to the public during regular library hours in the Fireside Room of the Leavenworth Library.

Chelan County seeks public input for first motorized trails plan

NCW News
Ward Media

WENATCHEE — Chelan County Natural Resources is seeking input from motorized recreational trail users as it develops the county's first motorized trails plan. The department has launched a survey targeting users of e-bikes, trail bikes, motorcycles, ATVs, four-wheel drive vehicles, and snowmobiles. The plan could potentially connect and extend motorized trails with Kittitas and Okanogan counties and coordinate with nonmotorized trail users. The survey, open until November 15, takes about 10 minutes to complete. It asks participants about their current use of motorized trails in the planning areas and what issues they would like addressed in a motorized trail planning effort. Users are also asked to rate the current features of local motorized trails and provide information about their personal experiences. The survey, available online at <https://ncw.social/2p837z2u>, offers participants the chance to enter a drawing for a $250 gift card upon completion. In addition to the online survey, the county has scheduled a public workshop. The Chelan County Motorized Trails Plan Workshop will be held at 5:30 p.m. on October 30, at Confluence Technology Center, 285 Technology Center Way in Wenatchee. As stated in the announcement, "Participants will take an active role, sharing their thoughts on existing trails, future facilities and more." The survey initiative and workshop are part of Chelan County's efforts to gather public input for drafting the Chelan County Motorized Trails Plan.

Kodiaks stumble in Brewster

By CAROLINE MENNA
Ward Media Intern

But for the second quarter. After a lackluster and scoreless opening quarter between the Cascade Kodiak football team and non-conference, Division 2B Brewster on Friday night, October 11, the Bears put on a second quarter homecoming night show for their fans by exploding for three unanswered touchdowns and a 21-0 lead. The Kodiaks helped. The Leavenworth squad seemed to lose focus in the second quarter, especially on offense. They committed two key penalties, threw three interceptions, and struggled with sloppy play, all of which directly contributed to the Bears' output. Brewster rushed for two touchdowns from outside the Cascade 10-yard line in quick succession and then completed a 60-yard flea-flicker TD to cap their scoring for the night. Cascade rallies in the second half. The long halftime break, extended for Brewster's homecoming activities, helped settle the Kodiaks. Behind the solid running of senior captain Artie Northrup, Cascade put together a sustained scoring drive that took up more than half of the third quarter. After marching the length of the field, Northrup finished off the drive on fourth-and-goal with a sweeping one-yard TD scamper. A high snap resulted in a missed extra point and a score of 21-6. Then the defense comes up big. Apart from when offensive mistakes put them on their heels in the second quarter, the Kodiak defensive unit, led on the night by the senior quartet of outside linebacker and captain Frank Rosario (10 tackles), lineman Ethan Flansburg (7 tackles), and defensive backs Northrup and Landon Curnutt (8 tackles), the side played exceptionally well. The Cascade defenders kept the pressure on Brewster quarterback Sam Arevalo-Rosario all night, including sacking him three times. The effort not only resulted in stymieing the Bears in three of four quarters, in the fourth sophomore Eli Webb put an end to a Bears drive with an interception. Kodiaks add another score, but mental mistakes derail a full comeback. After a drive-ending fumble by Northrup, the defense, then led by Northrup, once again stifled the Bears. CHS put together another scoring drive late in the fourth quarter behind the arm of senior captain and quarterback Will Biebesheimer, who completed a 47-yard strike to sophomore Aengus Gillikin followed by a six-yard TD toss to sophomore Julian Feeney. However, the two-point conversion, which would have left the Kodiaks down by only seven, was called back by a false start. Down 21-12 with the clock running short and needing two scoring possessions, the game was effectively decided. The loss snaps a Kodiak three-game winning streak and moves the team to 3-2. After two straight weeks of traveling north to Okanogan County, the Cascade Kodiaks will next head east to Spokane County to face fellow Division 1A Medical Lake Cardinals (1-5) on October 18, before beginning conference play at home versus Omak on October 24 and away at Chelan on November 1. expressed disappointment in a “pattern of non-compliance to the rule of order” during meetings.

“As I was the brunt of bullying by the mayor (eye rolling, laughing, interrupting, arguing) as well as personal insult by audience members during an out of order exchange last month regarding condos in all neighborhoods, I can assure you it’s not a pleasant experience, especially when a person already feels unwell,” said Baron in her letter.

In response to the letter, Mayor Carl Florea said that he took full responsibility for the referenced incident, and that the City Council had made changes moving forward, such as requiring community members to stand and address the council as a whole when speaking, and not individual councilmembers. However, Florea did not agree that there was a pattern.

“I don’t know what to say to [eye rolling, laughing, interrupting, arguing], but I’m certainly not intentionally doing anything like that, because I respect that she’s got a different view, and it does represent a certain segment of the community, and she’s got a right to voice it,” said Florea.

In an email to Ward Media, Baron said she thought meetings in general were adequately run, but issues of order and respect emerged during topics of neighborhood density and development. Baron stated that the mayor and other council members are “so pro development that they feel entitled to deviate from respectful process.”

“I’m concerned that the council, in particular the new members, but even the experienced ones like the mayor pro tem, do not understand accepted protocols of respectful listening, parliamentary procedure and identifying out of order and bullying behavior,” said Baron in an email to Ward Media.

Florea refuted the idea of being “pro-development,” stating that his stance was “pro-housing” for a diverse community. When addressing the council culture, he stated, “there’s always been emotion shown at certain times for certain issues.”

“I do think that there’s a certain group that have not been successful in their views of what should happen or shouldn’t happen, and so I think for some of them, it can feel like they’re not being heard...Everybody’s getting a chance to be heard. It’s just that when the decisions get made, not everybody’s going to feel like they came out a winner,” said Florea.

The City Council will attend a retreat at the end of November to review parliamentary procedure and team build, which Baron is hopeful will incite better council culture.

Despite her challenges on council, Baron expressed gratitude for the opportunities, guidance and support provided by city staff.

“If I am able to heal within the next year, I may run again in 2025 with hopes of continuing to serve the Leavenworth community,” said Baron in her letter.

Mayor Carl Florea did not immediately respond for comment regarding Baron’s letter.

110-year-old home

over. Here’s a match. Clean up your property. Just burn it. Burn all of it,” said Dickinson.

When the Burgess home went on the market, Dickinson had already been contemplating retirement. She watched as it sat unoccupied for months, periodically checking the listing and coming to look at the house. Eventually, she decided to take it on.

“It’s just in incredible shape. It’s straight and true. It’s sitting on its good foundation. The walls are solid,” said Dickinson. “I thought, ‘I can get this done in like, six months. Yeah, that was a year ago... But that’s okay. It’s been really worth it.’”

The house was outfitted with modern necessities such as a full kitchen, insulation and a finished attic, but its characteristics remain largely the same. The original tub was hauled upstairs, with Dickinson belaying it as others pushed it. The home is also still decorated with original trim and flooring, believed to be handcrafted by W.W. Burgess himself.

“You don’t find vertical grain for trim of this quality...It’s just impossible. It doesn’t exist. And then [combine] that with the craftsmanship that they put into it,” said Dickinson.

The house is also surrounded by the necessities of the past, such as old sheds that held enough wood for winter, and what Dickinson suspects may have been an outdoor kitchen. The large and cold basement reveals a storage room for canning, a butcher block and meat locker, and a hand dug well.

“If you didn’t have a water source, you had a hand dug well. When I was growing up as a kid, I thought that’s how you had water, because you had a hand dug well,” said Burgess.

Now, the home is back on the market for $1,195,000. While the home may no longer be in the hands of the Burgess descendants, Dickinson is hopeful it will be embraced by someone who understands its unique history and significance, while adding their own chapter to its story.

“It may be that it just launches off into the future in the hands of somebody else entirely. But we just hope that they will love it as much as it deserves, and it’s going to be a unique person that would pick this up. They’ll certainly be in the center of Burgess Valley, what we call Beaver Valley,” said Dickinson.

Climate Change Act

However, due to the local implications of the resolution, the City Council ultimately passed the resolution, with Hessburg opposed.

The City Council had a similar proposed resolution to oppose I-2109, which would repeal the state’s capital gains tax. The capital gains tax is annually imposed on the sale or exchange of Washington capital assets when an individual has an adjusted annual Washington capital gain in excess of $250,000.

According to the House of Representatives summary on I-2109, the first $500 million in taxes, penalties, and interest collected from the state capital gains tax each fiscal year is deposited into the Education Legacy Trust Account (ELTA), which is used to fund kindergarten through 12th grade and higher education purposes, as well as child care and early learning programs. Remaining proceeds are deposited into the Common School Construction account. The amount deposited in the ELTA is adjusted annually for inflation.

Those in favor of the repeal argue that the tax is a step towards state income tax, and makes the state less competitive.

“I would suggest that we let this one die with no motion...I voted for the last resolution because if the repeal passed, it would have material and definite impacts for the City of Leavenworth and our residents... If this dies without a motion, then we don’t have to weigh in on it, which, frankly, I’m not sure it’s our place to do in this particular instance,” said Strand.

Leavenworth City Council agreed on the significance of discussing the initiative, but ultimately left the motion on the table, reasoning that the initiative wouldn’t have a direct impact on the city’s function. Both initiatives were sponsored by the political action committee Let’s Go Washington, founded by hedge fund manager Brian Heywood, and filed by State Representative Jim Walsh.

to UVC, does not include Johnson, submitted a building permit application last month. CCCD is currently reviewing the application for compliance with building and zoning codes.

Compliance issues were initially raised by several members of the public who filed code violation reports regarding the UVC project with CCCD. Thereafter, at a departmental update for an August meeting of the Chelan County Commissioners, CCCD Director Deanna Walter suggested that the UVC cross and the lighted, 110-foot ‘Wenatchee Valley Cross’ atop Wenatchee Heights did not appear to hold required building permits and were not in compliance with County code that considers the structures signs, which are restricted in height to 35 feet.

While UVC spokesman Harry Hansen, stated that in response to the Notice and Order, UVC, in filing its building permit application, “put in for a monument-cross,” CCCD Director Deanna Walter stated on October 11 that construction of the Tumwater Mountain cross is being “viewed [by CCCD] as just a structure, a tower structure.” Walter continued: “Initially, when I looked at it, I thought it fell under the sign code. My change in stance was due to additional information on structures. We knew how high it was and what the structural components of it were, and what it was going to look like – more of a tower.”

According to Chelan County Code a sign is “a display or device affixed to the ground, attached to a building or other structure using graphics, symbols, and/or written copy designed specifically for the display of a commercial or other advertisement to the public.” And a “[s]ign, illuminated” means a sign lighted by or exposed to artificial lighting either by lights on or in the sign or directed toward the sign.” (Chapters 14.98, Sections 1705 and 1725 of the Chelan County Code, respectively.)

A structure is defined as “that which is built, constructed, erected or any kind or any piece of work artificially built up or composed of parts joined together which requires location on the ground or attached to something having a location on the ground with the exception of retaining walls.” (Chapter 14.98, Section 1825 of the Chelan County Code)

Read under the definition of “structure,” “there may be an opportunity for exemption to height limitation [of the cross] pursuant to our Code provisions. [However,] it is still in the plan review process. So, there is additional information that has been requested from the applicant.”

Those requests include “structure calculations,” “identifying [if the cross is being constructed] in a critical area,” and approval from the Federal Aviation Administration, all of which Hansen stated that UVC was “resolving” so that construction could resume in the spring.

Walter further explained that the Tumwater Mountain cross would “fall under the definition of a structure,” which could be exempted from height restrictions, as “I would put this structure under ‘other similar projections’” in the “exception to building height limitation” section of the Code (Chapter 11.88, Section 120), which includes, among other structures, aerials, observation towers, and radio, communication and television towers. “A tower is looked at more in line with cell towers, and whatnot.”

When asked about the “Wenatchee Valley Cross,” which asserts that its “main purpose is to bring Glory (sic) to God the Father and His only Son, Jesus Christ,” and UVC cites as its inspiration, Walter stated that “they’re in the same place in the process,” as UVC having “submitted their building permit and [is also] being processed” as a structure.

“The property owners and the applicants, the proponents of these two structures at South Wenatchee and the Upper Valley, have done exactly what our department has requested of them. They submitted their applications for a building permit, and we are working through the process. I actually really appreciate their cooperation. It didn’t have to be a difficult process.”

Walter concluded by expounding that “the building permit process is what we consider a Limited Administrative Review. And that means it goes through the permitting process but there is no comment period for the public. It either meets the code requirements or it doesn’t. So, people will not have a say in whether or not the building permit is approved.”
