Chelan ASB shares progress report with school board

By Mike Maltais
Ward Media Staff Reporter

CHELAN – The latest in outreach and in-class projects – including Only 7 Seconds - spearheaded by the Chelan High School Associated Student Body (ASB) were part of a presentation to the bi-monthly meeting of the Lake Chelan School Board on Oct.14.

Senior ASB President Caleb Bertomeu delivered an insightful report on the efforts his team members are devoting toward greater inclusion, communication, and community building.

Bertomeu began by explaining that the student council is run by the ASB and includes representatives from all school sports and clubs. The council meets quarterly “as an opportunity to hear from other voices and to get the pulse of the school,” Bertomeu said.

To foster culture at CHS, the ASB follows Washington Association of School Business Officials (WASBO) guidelines.

“We try to highlight everyone’s best abilities,” said Bertomeu “The class reps format helps encourage students to find their leadership strengths and work towards the goals of the group.”

Only 7 Seconds

The ASB Leadership class met with the Only 7 Seconds organization upon learning that the nonprofit will be part of the CHS curriculum this year. Only 7 Seconds was originally founded in Chelan in March 2018 to address youth loneliness.

The class met with Tori Carpenter, who joined Only 7 Seconds in October 2023 as the North Central Washington Program Coordinator.

“We brainstormed ways in which ASB could support the movement from the students’ perspective... to bring the inclusion message to their classmates,” Bertomeu said.

Recently Only 7 Seconds gifted the entire student body pink “Because You Matter” shirts to support the school’s October Pink Out! theme.

Concessions management

On the business side, one of ASB’s largest responsibilities involves managing fall and winter sports concessions.

Bertomeu said this creates the opportunity for sports and clubs to raise funds. The Leadership group sched-

Other highlights:

- First Fridays of each month for all-school fun competition between classes.
- Spirit Days to build community within grades.
- Color Wars, where each class has its designated color for the weekly competition.
- Other color days – Jersey Day, Twin Day - to break up the consistency:

plement strategies to express individuality.

“I think we can really rebuild the community around here,” said Bertomeu. “We are taking big first steps.”

Bertomeu said he sees many people who are happy to be out at events like the school pep rally.

“Manson and Chelan coming together for another pep rally was really fun to do,” said Bertomeu. “Even the school resource officers were able to communicate with each other and enjoy the night.”

Jorja Davenport crowned new Chelan County Rodeo Queen

By Quinn Propst
Ward Media Staff Reporter

CHELAN COUNTY – Wenatchee High School senior Jorja Davenport was named the 2025 Chelan County Fair and Rodeo Queen.

Davenport, 18, is the daughter of Jed and Meagan Davenport of Wenatchee.

“Jorja’s deep-rooted passion for the Western way of life and her extensive experience make her an exceptional ambassador to our rodeo,” Queen Coordinator Kristen Mattson said.

Davenport is an accomplished horse rider and has participated in various equestrian activities, including 4H, FFA, WAHSET (Washington High School Equestrian Team), and an equestrian drill team.

“Jorja’s knowledge of the Western lifestyle and her ability to connect with people will be invaluable as she represents our rodeo,” Mattson said.

“Her infectious smile and strong work ethic will inspire both young and old, and she is committed to promoting the values and excitement of the rodeo throughout our community.”

“We look forward to seeing her shine in her new role and help bring the spirit of the rodeo to life,” Mattson said.

Davenport was selected at the Oct. 13 pageant at the Tillicum Riders Club House in Cashmere. Prospective queens competed in several segments, including personal interviews, horsemanship skills, modeling presentations, speech delivery, and impromptu questions.

The new 2025 Chelan County Fair and Rodeo Queen Jorja Davenport is pictured with the outgoing Queen Austyn Robinson.

Mattson said the committee has already started planning for Davenport’s coronation ceremony in early spring of 2025.

The 2025 queen will be presented with a variety of awards, sponsored items, and royalty accessories to be worn during the year of her reign.

She will participate in a year of community events, public speaking, parades, luncheons, and rodeos while serving as a goodwill ambassador for the Chelan County Fair and Rodeo.

Davenport is only the second queen to represent the Chelan County Fair and Rodeo.

“A rodeo queen embodies the spirit of the rodeo, serving as a role model and ambassador for the sport,” Mattson said.

“She not only represents the traditions and values of rodeo culture, but also champions the heart of the community, showcasing the pride of Chelan County Fair and Rodeo.”

“Her presence is inspiring to all, promotes agricultural heritage, and fosters a sense of unity and celebration within the fairgrounds and beyond,” she said.

Chelan Cancer Support Group to resume monthly meetings in November

By Quinn Propst
Ward Media Staff Reporter

CHELAN – The Chelan Cancer Support Group will have a new home this year at Lake Chelan Health Hospital. Starting Nov. 7, the group will meet on the first Thursday of the month from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. in the hospital’s Bragg Room, located near the cafeteria.

Group founder, Anne Brooks, said this gives participants a chance to grab lunch and head over to the meeting.

Lake Chelan Health Community Relations Manager, Agustin Benegas, will speak at the November meeting to welcome the group to their new home.

The meetings are open to anyone in the Lake Chelan Valley impacted by cancer, including patients, survivors, caregivers, and family members. But Brooks especially hopes to help those who are recently diagnosed.

Brooks, who was diagnosed with cancer 19 years ago, started the support group about 18 years ago after recognizing a need for a local network of support.

As they restart in the new facility, the group’s goal is to continue providing local support, so those affected by cancer don’t have to travel far for meetings. For many, the opportunity to connect with others who understand their journey is an essential part of coping with their diagnosis and treatment.

“I know so many people have gone through cancer right now, and the thing I tell them is, take it one step at a time, and this is your journey and it’s nice to be able to share it with others,” Brooks said.

“So in a support group, you can at least share this is my journey, and somebody might be able to connect with you and might be able to share their experience that may help that person,” she said.

“But it’s just to have that connection that you’re not alone. And give some hope to people that you can get through it, too.”

Through these interactions, members can offer advice, share coping strategies, and build relationships that extend beyond the meetings, such as meeting for lunch or going on walks together, she said.

Ultimately, Brooks hopes that the group helps ensure that no one feels alone in their journey.

“So, 19 years ago, I would never have thought I would be still in a support group and coordinating the support group,” she said.

“But about the time, I think that I should, let’s bag it, let’s not continue meeting. And somebody else has been put in my path that you know needs that connection and that understanding and to listen to what their journey is.”

“Unfortunately, cancer is with us, and I just feel like we need to be there for each other,” she said.

Vote no on I-2109 and I-2117

I would like to encourage everyone who reads the Lake Chelan Mirror to vote no on initiatives 2109 and 2117.

Working families in our area benefit from the Capital Gains Tax paid by 4,000 of the richest Washingtonians (I-2109) as well as the Climate Commitment Act (I-2117) that imposes a fee on the largest polluting corporations in our state.

The funds associated with the Capital Gains Tax and Climate Commitment Act in the past two years have generated billions of dollars in funding for schools, child care, early childhood education, public transportation, home repairs, and wildfire prevention in our rural area. These initiatives help level the playing field for working families in our area by making the millionaire-billionaire class pay some of their fair share.

Join me and vote no on I-2109 and I-2117 this November.

WDFW seeks members for new North Central Washington advisory committee

NCW News / Ward Media

OLYMPIA – The Washington Department of Fish and Wildlife (WDFW) is seeking members for a new Regional Engagement Committee (REC) in North Central Washington. The committee will represent local interests and provide input on regional conservation efforts.

The North Central Region consists of Adams, Chelan, Douglas, Grant, and Okanogan counties, serving more than 290,000 residents. WDFW is calling for applications from members of the public and organizational representatives interested in fish, wildlife, and habitat conservation, as well as fishing, hunting, wildlife watching, and other fish and wildlife-related outdoor recreation.

"As we continue to advance our mission of conserving fish, wildlife, and habitats across Washington, these RECs will play a crucial role in incorporating regional perspectives into our decision-making processes," said North Central Regional Director Brock Hoene. "By bringing together community members with a shared passion for the outdoors, we can ensure that our conservation efforts are more inclusive and better reflect the needs and values of our region. We encourage everyone with an interest in these important issues to apply and join us in this collaborative effort."

The REC will begin quarterly meetings in 2025, serving as a forum to provide input to regional management on the Department's work within the North Central region. Meetings will be a mix of in-person gatherings at WDFW's regional headquarters or other locations within the region, with opportunities for hybrid meetings.

Applications for the two-year terms are due by Dec. 2, 2024. Interested individuals can apply through an online form at www.publicinput.com/receng or by completing a PDF application form and submitting it via email or postal mail.

WENATCHEE – NCW Libraries and Hand in Hand Immigration Services are partnering to offer weekly citizenship classes at the Wenatchee, Peshastin and Quincy libraries.

NCW Libraries will provide the space and Hand in Hand Immigration Services, a Wenatchee-based nonprofit, will provide the instruction, content, and materials.

Class participants will learn about citizenship eligibility and requirements, the basics of U.S. history, and study and prepare for the citizenship exam and interview.

This new series of classes comes after two years of successful partnership and programming between the NCW Libraries Latino Services Department and Hand in Hand Immigration Services.

Information sessions and citizenship classes have been offered at NCW Library locations in Moses Lake, Peshastin, Leavenworth, and Quincy.

At least three of the students who took classes in Moses Lake have since become U.S. citizens. Several more students have pending appointments for their naturalization interviews.

11 people recite the oath before becoming U.S. citizens at Wenatchee Public Library in June.

"This partnership has been transformative in many ways. It has broken down barriers to citizenship while also strengthening community bonds," said Claudia Bovee, Latino Services Manager for NCW Libraries.

"People at different stages of their citizenship journey gain a deeper understanding of their eligibility and the steps required to achieve their dreams" Classes will be offered at these locations and times through 2025.

Quincy Public Library :

- Citizenship classes in Spanish: Thursdays, 4:30-5:30 p.m.

- Citizenship classes in English: Mondays (with two additional Tuesdays to make up for holidays), 4:30-5:30 p.m.

Wenatchee Public Library

- Citizenship classes in Spanish: Mondays, 5:30-6:30 p.m.

Peshastin Public Library

- Citizenship classes in English: Tuesdays, 6-7:30 p.m.

Bovee added, "While they are learning and studying about civics, they are also building a community with their instructors and others attending the classes. They encourage each other and celebrate their collective successes. Many of them bring friends or family members into our spaces, creating a positive ripple effect of information-sharing. For some people, these classes represent their first opportunity to embark on this journey to citizenship."

NCW Libraries' Latino Services Department strives to connect the diverse Latino communities across NCW to vital community resources.

WSU launches $4.2 million campaign for new tree fruit research facility

NCW News / Ward Media

WENATCHEE - Washington State University is launching a fundraising campaign this fall for a new Plant Growth Facility at the Wenatchee Tree Fruit Research and Extension Center (TFREC).

The university will host a public campaign kick-off event on Tuesday, Oct. 29, from 3:30 to 5 p.m. at the Wenatchee TFREC. The goal is to raise $4.2 million in private funds to replace a 70-year-old structure with a modern facility designed to support Washington's $10 billion tree fruit industry.

"This facility will make projects possible that we simply can't do now," said Lee Kalcsits, endowed chair in Environmental Tree Fruit Physiology and Management.

"It's a leveraging opportunity: it opens a whole set of doors for impact on industry."

The proposed facility will double the existing greenhouse space and include advanced lighting, temperature, and humidity controls.

These features will enable environmental stress experiments, year-round disease research, root health tests, and pest-free plant growth.

Kate Evans, WSU Pome Fruit Breeder, commented on the current limitations and the potential of the new facility. "We do a good job of maximizing the facilities we have, but there's a limit," Evans said.

"With the greenhouses, we're way beyond it. The new growth facility will give our internationally renowned programs a way to expand into areas we've simply been stymied from entering."

Evans noted that the facility would support expanded screening of breeding material for diseases like fire blight and provide space for research on new rootstocks.

Wendy Powers, Cashup Davis Family Endowed Dean of WSU's College of Agricultural, Human, and Natural Resource Sciences, described the vision for the facility.

"The vision for the new plant growth facility is a place where the top researchers, teachers, and Extension personnel come together to address the on-the-ground problems of today and the emerging threats of tomorrow," Powers said.

"Located in the heart of tree fruit production for the world, this facility puts us out in front to ensure safe, abundant, healthy fruit for everyone."

The new Plant Growth Facility is intended to enhance WSU's ability to conduct research on environmental stresses, diseases, and pests affecting tree fruits. It is also expected to aid in attracting and retaining scientists and students in the field.

Washington State University has directed interested parties to the TFREC website for more information on the project and donation opportunities.

Entiat remains undefeated, dominates Soap Lake 58-16

Lake Chelan Mirror
Ward Media

SOAP LAKE – The Entiat Tigers (7-0) maintained their perfect record with a dominant 58-16 victory over the Soap Lake Eagles (4-1) in a highly anticipated NCW 1B League matchup on Friday night.

The game, which began as a battle of undefeated teams, quickly turned into a one-sided affair as Entiat's high-powered offense and stifling defense overwhelmed their opponents.

The Tigers wasted no time asserting their dominance, racing to a 16-0 lead within the first three minutes of play.

Their relentless attack continued throughout the first half, with a particularly explosive second quarter that saw Entiat outscore Soap Lake 34-8.

The lopsided score triggered the 40-point mercy rule, resulting in a running clock for the remainder of the game.

Entiat's quarterback, Ethan Fogelstrom, delivered a stellar performance, completing 11 of 17 passes for 294 yards and six touchdowns.

Fogelstrom also led the Tigers' ground game, rushing for 89 yards and a touchdown on nine carries.

Sebastian Sanchez contributed to the rushing attack with 54 yards and a touchdown, while freshman Mario Padilla added 46 yards on just two carries.

The aerial assault was spearheaded by Noah Fogelstrom, who connected with his brother Ethan for seven receptions, amassing 213 yards and four touchdowns.

Monico Valadez-Robinson also made his presence felt, hauling in three catches for 74 yards and two touchdowns.

Defensively, the Tigers were equally impressive, limiting Soap Lake to a mere 178 total yards of offense and forcing four turnovers.

Sanchez anchored the defensive effort with an outstanding individual performance, recording 18 tackles, 2.5 for loss, forcing two fumbles, and making a diving interception.

The victory solidifies Entiat's position as the sole undefeated team in NCW 1B League play.

The Tigers will now enjoy a bye week before facing La Conner in a neutral site non-league game at Sultan High School on November 1.

This matchup was scheduled to replace a league game against Pateros, which was forced to end its season prematurely due to a shortage of players.

Chelan falls to Omak, faces historic 'Bronze Shoe' rivalry next

Lake Chelan Mirror
Ward Media

OMAK – The Chelan Mountain Goats suffered a significant setback on Friday night, falling to the host Omak Pioneers 56-22 in a lopsided 1A Caribou Trail league contest.

The Mountain Goats (2-5) struggled to contain Omak's high-powered offense and found themselves overwhelmed as the game progressed.

Despite moments of promise, Chelan was unable to mount a consistent challenge against the Pioneers (3-4), who dominated throughout the evening.

Chelan's defense, which has shown flashes of potential in previous outings, appeared particularly vulnerable against Omak's balanced attack.

The Pioneers' offensive strategy proved too much for the Mountain Goats to handle, leading to the wide margin of victory.

The loss marks another difficult chapter in what has been a challenging season for the Mountain Goats.

Chelan's record now stands at 2-5, raising concerns about their performance as they approach the final stretch of the season.

Looking ahead, Chelan faces a formidable task as they prepare for their next matchup, but it's not just any game.

The Mountain Goats are set to face the Cashmere Bulldogs (6-1) in the annual "Battle for the Bronze Shoe" on Thursday, October 24, at 7:00 p.m. at the Cashmere Football Stadium.

This storied rivalry, dating back to 1953, is more than just a non-league contest – it's a celebration of the enduring bond between two North Central Washington communities.

The Bronze Shoe trophy, originating from a bronzed college shoe of Bill Lippincott, a legendary figure who coached both programs, symbolizes the friendship and sportsmanship shared between the schools.

The rivalry's history heavily favors Cashmere, who leads the all-time series with a commanding 57-12-1 record.

Chelan faces an uphill battle, not having claimed victory in the Shoe game since 2014. Last year's matchup saw Cashmere dominate with a 58-7 win.

As Chelan looks to salvage their season, the coaching staff will be focused on addressing the defensive lapses that proved costly against Omak.

The Mountain Goats will need to regroup quickly for this historic rivalry game, seeking to upset the strong Cashmere squad and bring the cherished bronze shoe back to Chelan for the first time in nearly a decade.

The Omak Pioneers (3-4), buoyed by their convincing win over Chelan, will aim to maintain their momentum as they prepare for a Thursday night home game against the Cascade Kodiaks (4-2) on October 24. The Kodiaks enter the matchup with a 4-2 record following their recent 42-14 non-league victory over Medical Lake.

As the season progresses, both Chelan and Omak will be focused on their respective challenges, with the Mountain Goats seeking to overcome their recent struggles in a game that transcends the regular season, offering a chance to salvage pride in a challenging year and potentially turn their season around with a victory in this historic rivalry.

MANSON – The Manson Trojans defeated the Tonasket Tigers 28-0 in a league football game Friday night.

With the victory, Manson improved its record to 2-5 for the season.

The Trojans prevented Tonasket from scoring throughout the game. Tonasket's record fell to 1-6 with the loss.

The Trojans will next host the Okanogan Bulldogs (7-0) on Friday, October 25.

Okanogan is coming off a 58-7 win against Brewster in their recent league game.

This league match was part of the 2B Central Washington division games for the season.

Confluence Health rations IV solutions amid nationwide shortage, delays elective surgeries

NCW News / Ward Media

WENATCHEE – Confluence Health is implementing measures to address a nationwide shortage of intravenous (IV) solutions, a crisis affecting healthcare facilities across the United States.

The shortage stems from Hurricane Helene's impact on a Baxter facility in North Carolina, which produces approximately 60% of the country's IV solutions, equivalent to 1.5 million bags daily.

The Washington State Hospital Association previously reported on this disruption, which is expected to persist until the facility resumes full production, possibly lasting until year's end.

Confluence Health, serving the largest geographic region of any healthcare system in Washington State, is taking proactive steps to maintain adequate fluid supplies for urgent and emergency care in North Central Washington.

Kelly Allen, chief nursing officer at Confluence Health, emphasized the organization's priorities: "Our core goal as we address this supply chain disruption is to make sure that we are able to maintain enough fluids on-hand so that we can provide the crucial care our patients need."

Allen added, "While we are still receiving fluid shipments, the amount available to each facility has been significantly reduced nationwide to help conserve. We are proactively addressing this challenge by ensuring, despite this limitation, that our patients still receive the level of care they expect and need with minimal impact, while also making certain that emergency and critical care services are not interrupted."

To manage the shortage, Confluence Health is implementing a strategy that includes delaying certain elective procedures. Dr. James Murray, chief medical officer for Confluence Health, explained the approach: "In order to be able to maintain the level of fluids on-hand that is needed to address emergencies or care that cannot wait, we will be delaying some elective cases that require a large amount of fluids."

Murray acknowledged the inconvenience this may cause, stating, "While we never like to reschedule surgeries due to the disruption this brings to our patients, we need to prioritize emergency services for our communities. We hope to only delay these elective procedures by a few weeks to help us to build up our fluid reserves."

Patients affected by these delays will be contacted directly by Confluence Health's patient services teams to reschedule their procedures.

Confluence Health serves over 12,000 square miles across Okanogan, Grant, Douglas, and Chelan counties. As one of only two locally-led healthcare systems in Washington State, it aims to maintain access to high-quality, cost-effective healthcare services for North Central Washington.

The organization's board of directors, comprising nine community members and six physicians, oversees Confluence Health's operations and decision-making during this challenging period.

As the situation develops, healthcare providers nationwide continue to monitor the IV solution supply chain, adapting their strategies to ensure critical care remains uninterrupted.

Beavers gain traction as key players in Washington's stream restoration efforts

By Taylor Caldwell
Ward Media Staff Reporter

LEAVENWORTH – As river restoration and salmon recovery has been spearheaded by various advocates throughout the valley, Trout Unlimited is adding beavers to the conversation through the Wenatchee-Entiat Beaver Project.

Stream restoration often involves multiple organizations coming together to build manmade beaver dams or beaver dam analogs (BDAs). These BDAs increase groundwater supply, improve water quality, and restore fish and wildlife habitat. However, building and maintaining these projects takes time and resources.

"We've built a ton of [restoration] projects, and it's becoming a whole summer of just going back and doing maintenance on them. But if we can bring in beavers, they do that maintenance for free and much more efficiently than we do, so that's the idea with relocation efforts," said Lisa Foster, Restoration Program Director at Trout Unlimited.

Trout Unlimited's project works in two-fold. When Foster's team receives a call about a beaver conflict, their first move is to implement coexistence strategies. If coexistence isn't feasible, they will relocate the beaver.

"If I trap those beavers, new beavers are just going to come in. Beavers exist on the landscape, and we're kind of trying to get people used to that idea, as opposed to just removing them," said Foster.

The team has a number of tools to promote coexistence, such as caging tree bases, fencing culverts, and installing pond levelers in order to reduce the conflict.

"Our coexistence efforts have been really successful, which means that we're not moving as many beavers. Which again, that's ideal for the beavers. They want to stay where they are. They've found a place. It's their home where they have food, and they're raising their kids and their families nearby," said Foster.

When coexistence efforts aren't effective, Trout Unlimited's next move is to trap the beaver for relocation. The beaver is first brought to a holding facility at the Leavenworth National Fish Hatchery, where it will be assessed and monitored while other family members are trapped.

Then, the beaver, or beaver family, is taken to a preselected site that meets permit requirements, on public or private land with owner permission.

"We have to go 2,000 feet upstream and downstream of a release site. We have to say how deep the water is, if there's good pools, if there's sufficient food, if there's any concerns, like culverts or roads," said Foster.

Trout Unlimited will often target stream restoration sites, where the beaver's basic needs will be met and their presence will be most effective. Once the beavers get to work slowing streamflow, the area can see a myriad of improvements such as moderation of water temperature, increased fire resiliency, and increased biodiversity and riparian zones.

However, these benefits have only started to gain recognition in recent years. For decades, beavers have been written off as a nuisance animal. According to Washington State Department of Fish and Wildlife (WDFW), beavers are the second-most frequent reason for constituents to contact the agency regarding conflict. Additionally, landowners are allowed to kill beavers that are causing damage on their property.

"Beavers have been considered a nuisance animal for so long, even within my agency, if you look at the traceback URLs that we use for our beaver web pages, they're in the nuisance animal grouping. And there are so many conversations that I have where beavers are still considered a nuisance animal," said Shawn Behling, Wetland Wildlife Species Specialist for WDFW.

While groups across the state such as Tulalip Tribes Natural Resources and the Methow Beaver Project have been doing this work as far back as 2008, the state has only recently started to consider beavers as a species that needs more research and protection.

RCW 77.32.585, a pivotal law passed in 2012 and revised in 2017, recognized that beavers "have historically played a significant role in maintaining the health of watersheds in the Pacific Northwest and act as key agents in riparian ecology." The law allowed the relocation of wild beavers, prompting WDFW to enact the Beaver Relocation Permit Pilot Program in 2019.

The temporary feasibility project was intended to reduce lethal removals throughout the state by ensuring humane care during relocation, supporting relocators, and implementing data collection.

"Now that we are seeing such widespread degradation of habitat and of populations of so many species, especially ones that are dependent on freshwater systems, folks are starting to realize that these are fragile and interdependent, and that beavers are one of the few species that can so easily tie many different aspects of habitat together and repair them in ways that take our human restoration efforts, so much time, so much energy and so much money," said Behling.

On Sept. 27, the Fish and Wildlife Commission decided to adopt the pilot project as a permanent program, which will go into effect on Dec. 7.

"I am very, very happy. It was a lot of work, a surprising amount of work, to make that [Washington Administrative Code] happen, but I'm very excited that the Commission agreed that this is a program that should continue," said Behling.

While the program is a step towards beaver protection, Foster says there's still more to be done to track population size and set trapping limits. Currently, there are no protections

Once trapped, beavers will be placed in a holding facility at the hatchery that provides fresh water, partially shaded shelter, and is clean regularly.

Before they are relocated, the Trout Unlimited team collects the beaver's weight and sex, tags the beaver, and monitors its health. Beavers of the same family are relocated together.

Wenatchee Valley Humane Society appoints new executive director

NCW News / Ward Media

WENATCHEE – The Wenatchee Valley Humane Society (WVHS) announced the appointment of BJ Andersen as its new Executive Director, effective November 4.

Andersen, a Certified Animal Welfare Administrator (CAWA), will succeed James Pumphrey, who left the position in June.

With nearly two decades of experience in animal welfare, Andersen brings a wealth of knowledge to the role. Her appointment comes at a crucial time for the organization, which has been seeking new leadership to advance its mission of providing compassionate services to at-risk animals.

Andersen's most recent position was with the Oregon Humane Society, where she served as Director of Volunteer

Engagement. In this role, she developed and implemented training and management systems for over 1,300 volunteers across two campuses in Portland and Salem.

Prior to that, Andersen spent nearly ten years as the Executive Director at the Willamette Humane Society (WHS) in Salem, Oregon. During her tenure, she successfully negotiated a merger with the Oregon Humane Society in 2022, a move aimed at securing more resources for animals in the Willamette Valley.

"BJ is known to be a caring leader, an innovative and creative problem-solver, and persistent in pursuing long-term goals," stated Jane Provo, Interim Executive Director and former WVHS board member.

"We are thrilled to have someone of her caliber join our hard-working team and lead WVHS into its next chapter."

Andersen will connect with community leaders, donors, and volunteers in the upcoming weeks. WVHS looks forward to Andersen's leadership and vision as it continues its mission to improve the lives of animals and the community.

Andersen's expertise extends beyond operational management. As a DEI ambassador and council member for the Association for Animal Welfare Advancement, she has demonstrated a strong commitment to fostering inclusive environments within organizations.

In the coming weeks, Andersen is expected to engage with community leaders, donors, and volunteers as she prepares to take the helm at WVHS.

The organization views her appointment as a significant step forward in its ongoing efforts to improve the lives of animals and the community.

Confluence Health PA named Washington's Rural Physician Assistant of the Year

NCW News / Ward Media

WENATCHEE – Maria Dalzell, a physician assistant (PA) working in nephrology for Confluence Health, was recently named the Rural Physician Assistant of the Year by the Washington Academy of Physician Assistants (WAPA) at its annual conference. The prestigious award recognizes the outstanding contributions of a Washington State PA in rural community healthcare.

"I'm incredibly honored to have been named the Rural Physician Assistant of the Year," remarked Dalzell. "It was unexpected and incredibly humbling. I never expected to receive this award for following my passions of diversity and equity and doing my job, but am so grateful."

The Rural Physician Assistant of the Year Award is presented annually by the WAPA in recognition of an outstanding person who has made an exceptional contribution to rural community healthcare, celebrating the role of a PA in showing their dedication, compassion, and innovation in delivering healthcare to underserved communities and areas. In particular, the award recognizes those who strive to overcome the challenges inherent in delivering rural healthcare, extending beyond simple clinical excellence into community engagement, patient advocacy, and initiatives that improve access to healthcare resources. As described by the WAPA, the award "honors their profound impact and commitment to ensuring equitable healthcare access for all individuals, regardless of geographic location."

Though Dalzell had not anticipated the recognition, her supervisors and colleagues felt the honor was well-deserved and no surprise.

"Maria's dedication to our patients and to our community extends beyond the hallways of the nephrology department," commented Leah Marshall, medical specialty service line director at Confluence Health. "She has a deep dedication to addressing health disparities and providing vital care to our underserved communities."

"We are so proud to work alongside someone so caring, giving, and thoughtful," continued Skyler Gouldin, practice manager for gastroenterology and nephrology. "This award could not have been bestowed upon a more deserving recipient. Thank you, Maria, for all you do for our patients, community, and our nephrology department!"

The award was presented

Maria Dalzell

to Dalzell at a ceremony last week in Spokane, Washington, as part of the annual WAPA fall conference held at the historic Davenport Hotel.

"I am grateful to be working with a fantastic nephrology team at Confluence Health who supports me professionally and personally as a PA, and most importantly, serving a patient population that makes our work meaningful," concluded Dalzell. "To me, this award truly shows Confluence Health allows their APPs to practice at their full scope and to really make a difference in our community."

from trapping for beavers that have been recently relocated to restoration areas.

"We want beavers to be treated like any other game species. We do that for deer. We do that for all sorts of species, and I think beavers deserve those same protections, especially recognizing their outsized impact on the landscape," said Foster.

Those interested in receiving assistance with beaver coexistence or relocation can contact Foster at 509-630-3733, or lisa.foster@tu.org.

Battle for the Bronze Shoe: Cashmere and Chelan Football Rivalry Resumes on Thursday

CASHMERE – The clash between Chelan and Cashmere on the football field this Thursday night isn't just another game; it's a time-honored tradition that dates back to 1953. The annual "Battle for the Bronze Shoe" unites these two North Central Washington communities under the bright Friday night lights.

At the heart of this rivalry stands the late Bill Lippincott, a legendary figure who once coached both the Cashmere and Chelan football programs. Lippincott, whose college career as a running back, defensive back, and placekicker at Washington State University earned him legendary status, had one of his old college shoes bronzed by a former assistant coach. This shoe came to symbolize the enduring friendship and sportsmanship shared between the two schools and their football programs.

Lippincott's achievements at WSU are etched in history; he is fifth all-time in career interceptions with 13 and was named to the All-Coast team in 1948, earning a spot in the Hula Bowl. Despite being drafted by the Los Angeles Rams, Lippincott chose a career in teaching and coaching. Lippincott coached Cashmere into a winning team beginning in 1949 before moving to Chelan in 1953 to coach at Chelan High School. He retired from coaching in 1962 but continued to teach and work in broadcasting until 1984.

This year, the victor of the game will claim ownership of the cherished bronze shoe trophy until the teams meet again next year.

Traditionally, Cashmere has held the upper hand in this series, but the Chelan Goats are resolute in their quest to seize the shoe this Thursday night – Chelan last secured victory in the Shoe game in 2014.

The "Battle for the Bronze Shoe" is set to unfold on Thursday, Oct 24, at 7:00 p.m. at the Cashmere Football Stadium, where Cashmere and Chelan will go head-to-head. This unique trophy, known as "The Shoe Trophy," has its origins in Cashmere High School in 1953, originating from Bill Lippincott's college shoe during his standout days as a running back at Washington State University.

Bill Lippincott, a graduate of Okanogan High School, left an indelible mark as one of the finest athletes to emerge from North Central Washington. He left a legacy not only as an athlete but as a dedicated educator and coach in both Cashmere and Chelan high schools. The trophy itself serves as a symbol of the enduring bond of friendship and sportsmanship shared between the Bulldogs and the Goats.

As history has shown, this rivalry has witnessed intense battles on the gridiron over the years. With Cashmere leading the all-time series with a record of 57-12-1, the Battle of the Bronze Shoe continues to be a highlight of the football season, celebrating both athletic prowess and the spirit of camaraderie that transcends the game.
