Stevens Pass opens one week early for 2024-2025 winter season

SKYKOMISH – Stevens Pass welcomed skiers and snowboarders back to the mountain for the 2024-2025 season, celebrating an early opening on Nov. 29.

“I’m most excited about the snow this season. The mountain is in great shape and the skiing and riding is going to be terrific. It’s also the perfect foundation for a great season all around—like lessons for anyone looking to improve their skills and burgers taste better when the conditions are good,” said Ellen Galbraith, Vice President and General Manager of Stevens Pass.

The mountain initially planned to open on Dec. 6, but early snowfall made it possible to open terrain off of Daisy, Hogsback, Skyline and Brooks ski lifts the day after Thanksgiving.

This season will be the first time opening in November since 2018-2019, when the slopes opened on Nov. 21. The Stevens Pass snow report states the mountain received over 70 inches of snow this season prior to opening, with a base depth of 34 inches on opening day.

“While our maintenance teams work year-round to prepare for opening day, they need Mother Nature’s cooperation for it to happen, and she delivered. We also have our front-of-house staff ready to welcome guests in the plaza, our retail and rental outlets, and throughout the resort. It’s truly a team effort, with dedicated teams working around the clock to ensure everything is in place for everyone to have an unforgettable experience at Stevens Pass,” said Galbraith.

The mountain was in full-celebration on opening day, starting with free hot chocolate in the morning, and continuing the excitement with giveaways and music from DJ Mystic in the base area.

This winter, Stevens Pass is introducing a combination of free and paid parking options on weekends and peak-periods, with a focus on reservations and carpooling incentives. The reservations-based parking system will begin the first week of December for select lots.

Stevens Pass will host a number of events and activities throughout the season, including the second annual Women’s Weekend, an avalanche dog demonstration with a meet and greet, and Springfest. Live music will also return, with Foggy Fridays and a live DJ on Thursday nights for Dew After Dark and College Nights.

The ski resort’s dining options have expanded this year to include a new dinner menu at the Bull’s Tooth and fiesta rice bowls at the Pacific Cantina.

In addition to private and group ski and snowboard lessons, there are several returning and new programs this season such as adult coaching programs like Her Turn, Outer Limits Camp with Ingrid Backstrom, and Conditions Coaching.

“All Is Calm: The Christmas Truce of 1914” returns to Music Theater of Wenatchee

WENATCHEE – “All Is Calm: The Christmas Truce of 1914” will return to the Music Theater of Wenatchee this December. The musical tells the true story of soldiers laying down their weapons and spending Christmas with the enemy during World War I (WWI).

“It celebrates the bravery of these men who were not afraid to fight for their country, but also, at the same time, were not afraid to realize that the people that crossed the trenches from them were human beings as well,” said Director Henry Hettick.

On Christmas Eve of 1914, five months into WWI, an impromptu truce between soldiers fighting amid the trenches began with a Christmas carol sung by German soldiers. Thousands of soldiers left their trenches to greet their enemy, sharing rations, playing soccer, and singing Christmas songs in a demonstration of peace. However, the truce was short-lived, when higher command forced soldiers to return to their trenches and resume fighting.

“War is often at the instigation of people who are not going to fight it, and often for reasons that have nothing to do with the lives of those who fight it. And so I think that’s an important message, and that you can love your enemy as well. I think that’s a really important

NCW Libraries launches Winter Reading Program

NCW News
Ward Media

WENATCHEE — NCW Libraries launched its annual Winter Reading Program on Dec. 1 to promote literacy across North Central Washington during the winter months through a combination of traditional and digital engagement methods.

The program, available at all 30 library locations and via mobile Bookmobile services, allows participants to track their reading progress both through physical reading logs and the digital platform Beanstack.

“Our winter reading program is all about reading for fun. It’s an invitation for community members of all ages to make time to read. We want to foster a culture of reading for all, whether that’s with a book, an audiobook, or even a magazine. Join us!” said Alicia O’Dell, Adult Services Manager.

The initiative implements a dual-reward system: participants using paper logs receive tangible prizes upon reaching their goals, while digital participants earn virtual raffle tickets for prize drawings.

Each library branch has established community-specific reading targets, displayed on prominent reading thermometers that track collective progress. The system-wide impact of last year’s program was significant, with participants logging over 27,500 books during the two-month period.

To foster community engagement, branches are featuring curated book displays and encouraging patron-written reviews. The library system is also maintaining an active online presence, sharing age-appropriate book recommendations across their website and social media platforms.

Participation in the Winter Reading Program is free and open to all residents. Interested participants can obtain reading logs at any physical location or register online at www.ncwlibraries.org.

The program builds upon NCW Libraries’ existing infrastructure of 30 branches and mobile services, extending its reach across North Central Washington’s diverse communities.

For additional information, visit www.ncwlibraries.org or access the Winter Reading Program homepage through the Beanstack App.

WENATCHEE — The Community Foundation of North Central Washington announced the distribution of $63,500 in grants to 36 organizations through its Woods Family Music & Arts Fund, supporting arts and music education programs across three counties.

The grants, which provide up to $5,000 each for operating expenses or specific projects, aim to increase equitable access to arts and culture in Chelan, Douglas, and Okanogan counties, with a particular focus on youth and underrepresented audiences.

“We were thrilled with the quality of the grant requests for the Woods Family Music & Arts Fund this year,” said fundholder Rufus Woods. “We were only able to meet a portion of the need for music and arts funding, so it made for a very challenging job of selecting which grants to fund. We appreciated the many efforts to create access to arts and music education for kids and adults who otherwise wouldn’t have access to these programs.”

The fund originated with Wilfred and Kathy Woods, arts patrons who established the Woods House Conservatory of Music in 1997. The conservatory’s board later decided to sell the property and establish the current grant program through the Community Foundation, a decision

Leavenworth Village Voices brings holiday spirit with concert series

The Leavenworth Village Voices will celebrate their 42nd season with a traditional holiday concert at 2 p.m. on Sunday, Dec. 15, at the Leavenworth's Icicle Creek Center for the Arts, Snowy Owl Theater.

By QUINN PROPST
 Ward Media Staff Reporter

LEAVENWORTH – The Leavenworth Village Voices will celebrate their 42nd season with a traditional holiday concert at 2 p.m. on Sunday, Dec. 15, at the Leavenworth's Icicle Creek Center for the Arts, Snowy Owl Theater.

The performance, titled Christmas in the Mountains and Around the World, features a diverse collection of sacred and secular music that highlights the origins and traditions of Christmas celebrations from various countries, LVV President Allison Bergstrom said.

The Bavarian Brass, a longtime favorite of Village Voices audiences, will join as special guests.

"We have worked with them for many years, and our audience surveys always rate them really highly, so we're glad to have them, and we continue to just enjoy working together and making music together,"

The December 15 concert is the first in a series of three holiday concerts the group will perform.

This year's program promises an eclectic mix of musical styles, including unique arrangements of familiar carols.

"I think the audience will really enjoy the variety and styles, different styles of music we've collected for this year," she said.

"I am really proud of our sound and the technical quality of our singing," Bergstrom said.

"This year we have some really challenging pieces and some really different arrangements of well known carols, and many of them are challenging, and I really feel very confident and proud of the program we've put together," she said. "I know it will just enhance the Christmas joy and the holiday spirit for people who come to our concerts."

"So we just really want to share the joy and the peace and the festive nature of the season to locals and visitors alike and we just invite them to come," she said.

After recruiting efforts in the spring and summer, the group has grown to about 20 members.

There is even a family of three, a mom, dad and daughter who sing together in the choir. Plus the group's director, Mindy Wall, has family in the group. Her husband and son both sing in the choir. Bergstrom said it's a great way for families to spend time together.

Nicholas Colletto, a master's student at Central Washington University, will serve as accompanist and also sing with the choir for a cappella numbers.

The Village Voices, a non-profit community choir, is known for its high-quality sound and technical expertise.

Tickets for the Dec. 15 concert are available at the door or online at leavenworthvillagevoices.org.

Wenatchee volunteer named 2024 Master Gardener of the Year

NCW News
Ward Media

WENATCHEE — The Washington State University Extension Master Gardener Program has named Debbie Benbow of Wenatchee as its 2024 Master Gardener of the Year, recognizing her extensive contributions and leadership in horticultural education across the state.

Benbow, who has served as a volunteer with the WSU Chelan-Douglas Master Gardener Program since 2009, was selected from eight nominees statewide by the WSU Extension Master Gardener Recognition and Awards Committee. The award was announced in late September and is sponsored by the Master Gardener Foundation of Washington State.

"I can't say enough good things about Debbie Benbow," said Marco Martinez, coordinator of the WSU Chelan-Douglas Master Gardener Program. "Her work has benefitted our local WSU Master Gardener Program and other programs statewide. Locally, she has helped our program better focus its education efforts. She has also used her marketing and graphic design skills to help promote those efforts."

The award recognizes active volunteers who demonstrate leadership at both state and county levels while making lasting contributions to the Extension Master Gardener Program. Benbow's service record shows significant dedication, with more than 1,500 volunteer hours logged in the past two years alone. Throughout her 15-year tenure, she has accumulated over 7,100 volunteer hours.

In related news, Craig Lawrence, a WSU Chelan-Douglas Master Gardener since 2016, was nominated for the Ed LaCrosse Distinguished Award. Lawrence was one of four nominees for this recognition, which honors individuals who have made significant statewide impacts on the WSU Extension Master Gardener Program or have served the Master Gardener Foundation of Washington State.

Winter logging operations begin in Lake Wenatchee area

NCW News
Ward Media

LEAVENWORTH — Winter logging operations have commenced on two timber sales near Lake Wenatchee, marking the latest phase of the Upper Wenatchee Pilot Project.

The operations, located 20 miles north of Leavenworth on the Wenatchee River Ranger District, will involve Hampton Lumber Company and Gibson and Son LLC working on the Meadow DXP and Raging DXP Stewardship timber sales, respectively.

The project, which began tree felling and road preparation in mid-October, will continue through summer 2025. Operators selected winter operations to take advantage of frozen ground conditions that help protect sensitive soil areas.

Wenatchee River District Ranger Erica Taecker addressed safety concerns for winter recreationists. "Please be aware that logging trucks will be hauling through the Fish Lake Sno-Park on weekdays and snowmobile riders and other winter recreationists will need to remain alert for logging truck traffic in the vicinity of the Sno-park," Taecker said.

The logging activities are concentrated near several major forest roads, including the West Chiwawa #6306, Big Meadow Creek #6300, Road #62, and the Meadow Ridge Road #6307. While logging operations will affect some areas, officials confirm that many miles of groomed snowmobile routes in the Fish Lake and Chiwawa areas remain unaffected by the hauling operations.

To accommodate both logging operations and recreation, no log hauling will occur on weekends. The purchasers will maintain haul roads with a snow base to allow for continued snowmobile grooming on weekends and holidays.

The timber sales are part of a larger forest management initiative aimed at reducing wildfire risk to local communities and promoting forest health. The Forest Service is collaborating with Chelan County and the North Central Washington Forest Health Collaborative on the implementation of the Upper Wenatchee Pilot Project.

The Fish Lake Sno-Park, situated at the intersection of Roads #6200 and #6300, will remain open throughout the winter season, though Taecker cautioned against snowmobiling on active haul routes during weekdays due to safety concerns.

The Winter Recreation Program at Washington State Parks oversees Sno-Park management in partnership with various agencies and private landowners. Winter trail grooming typically operates from early December through March, weather conditions permitting.

message right now, even in this country," said Hettick.

The musical was created by Peter Rothstein, and originally performed at Theater Latté Da in Minneapolis, Minnesota. Rothstein dedicated himself to research before writing the musical, in order to balance accuracy, joy, and tragedy of the historic moment in "All is Calm."

"I think he got the story right, because although it's a very heartwarming story, it's also an extremely tragic story, because this one incident that happened with so much hope is surrounded by awful death and destruction by humanity. And it didn't last," said Music Director Dan Jackson.

The story is told through 37 a capella songs in 75 minutes.

The songs are a mix of complex harmonies of both classic Christmas carols as well as songs of war.

"They've been arranged in ways that are truly unique. In the middle of the show, "Silent Night" is sung by the whole chorus, and it's sung in three different languages, French, German and English. It's also in, at various points, three different tempos...And it's overlapping...It's just an amazing, amazing bit of musical creation," said Hettick.

The immersive production projects photos from the war behind the men as they sing, and songs are interspersed with monologues of real letters home written by soldiers in the war.

"It's got moments that make you want to cry and whatnot, but you leave the theater feeling exhilarated by the bravery of these men, but also by a piece of theater that's moving," said Hettick.

"All Is Calm: The Christmas Truce of 1914" will have both evening and matinee performances at the Riverside Playhouse in Wenatchee. Evening performances will be at 7:30 p.m., Dec. 5-7 and 12-14. Matinee performances will be at 2 p.m. Dec. 7-8 and 14-15. For more information and tickets, visit mtow.org.

"It's really cool that we have an organization like Music Theater [of Wenatchee] in town that has a facility and can be a vehicle for shows like this...We wouldn't be doing it I don't think if we didn't have Music Theater. It's a community treasure," said Jackson.
