Chelan council approves fee hikes, emergency services, biosolids

By MIKE MALTAIS
Ward Media Staff Reporter

CHELAN – The city council addressed a range of issues, from biosolids to bulk water fees, during the second of its bimonthly meetings on Nov. 26.

Biosolids Contract

Chelan has had a biosolids agreement with Boulder Park Inc., and King County since 1998. It provides an avenue for Chelan to dispose of biosolids generated by its wastewater treatment plant. The current agreement expires at the end of this year. The agreement is for an additional five years.

“If you have even been up on the Mansfield plateau and seen the BPI signs that are related to this project where the byproduct is applied for agricultural use to help crop nutrient loads,” said Public Works Director Jake Youngren.

Chelan generates approximately 125 tons of biosolids per year. Youngren said the Department of Ecology classifies and regulates biosolids, so Chelan must meet the DOE parameters established for the city’s class B product.

The new agreement will result in an approximate additional cost of $500 annually. The council approved the contract.

Lodging Tax Funding Agreement Extension

The city is working on final revisions to a Lodging Tax Fund agreement with the Lake Chelan Chamber of Commerce over integrating the data into the city’s system.

- 2012: The city council approved a Lodging Tax Fund Agreement with the Lake Chelan Chamber of Commerce
- December 2017: Council approved a five-year Lodging Tax Fund Agreement.
- December 2022: Council approved a one-year extension agreement.
- November 2023: Council approved another one-year extension agreement.
- September 2024: Council created a Lake Chelan Chamber of Commerce committee to review the upcoming Lodging Tax Fund Agreement.

The contract committee has requested an additional extension to complete the revisions.

“What you have before you is an extension of that contract for three months to March 31 with the goal of getting something that we can live with,” City Administrator Wade Farris said.

The council approved the extension. A new agreement will be placed before the council in early 2025.

Emergency Services Agreement

Chelan is mandated to have an emergency management plan and program in place and has contracted with the Chelan County Department of Emergency Management since 2002.

Similar to what Chelan does with Wenatchee Valley Humane Services for animal control, the city contracts with the Chelan County Sheriff’s Office for Emergency Services. Costs are assessed on a per capita basis. The 2024 rate was $3.08 per capita, and the 2025 rate has increased to $3.75 per capita.

“This is as pretty good deal because we do not have the bandwidth here to do it ourselves,” said Farris. “If we have an emergency they will roll in and do pretty much everything we need them to do for the county.”

The council approved the contract.

Amended Rates and Fees

The 60-page resolution includes the following revisions:

- Public Works Department increased:
- City water fees.
- Stand-by fire service connection fees.
- Bulk water user fees.
- Monthly sewer rates
- Residential collection rates.
- Commercial collection rates.
- Roll off compactor and drop box services.
- Parks and Recreation Department increased:
- Lakeshore RV Park rates.
- Miscellaneous RV park dump fees.
- Parking fees.
- Annual parking passes.
- Lakeshore Marina rates.
- Daily moorage.

- Seasonal moorage.
 - Greens Putting Course rates before and after 7 p.m.
 - Lake Chelan Municipal Golf Course fees.
 - Daily green fees.
 - Fees removed:
 - Recreational program fees
 - Administration Department:
 - Removed public dance fees.
 - Annual public dance license fee $200.
 - Single public dance license fee $50.
 - Security deposit $200.
 - Combined the black and white and colored paper copies at .15 cents per page (each side is one page) to one line item that reads... black and white, or colored paper copies.
- Councilmember Tim Hollingsworth requested confirmation that parking fees for Chelan and Chelan Valley residents were not increased. Finance Director Jackie Tupling reassured Hollingsworth that no changes were made to the annual parking passes for Chelan and Chelan Valley residents.

The Heritage Heights Giving Tree at Whaley’s General Store in Chelan is a way for community members to make the holidays brighter for residents at the assisted living facility.

Giving Tree brings holiday joy to assisted living residents

By QUINN PROPST
Ward Media Staff Reporter

CHELAN – The annual Heritage Heights Giving Tree is up early this year and ready for shoppers at Whaley’s General Store in Chelan.

The Heritage Heights Giving Tree program at Whaley’s General Store ensures that residents of the assisted living facility receive personalized Christmas gifts. Heritage Heights provides tags with residents’ names and gift wishes.

Community members may select a tag at the store’s front desk, purchase and wrap the gift, and return it to the store by December 20.

Whaley’s General Store will then organize the gifts and make sure that they are delivered by the 21st so that residents will have a gift in time for Christmas.

Store owner, Jana Crawford, said giving back to the community is important, and that is why the store has offered a giving tree for about 20 years.

The Giving Tree helps make the season a little brighter for residents at the Heritage Heights Assisted Living facility.

“I think it’s important to give back to the community first of all,” Crawford said. “And I think older people get forgotten.”

“I think that, you know, and a lot of people don’t, they don’t have any packages up there, they don’t have family in town or whatever,” she said. “So this way they have a Christmas.”

Heritage Heights Activity Director Rachel Kiesecker said each year, the residents get excited to open their presents.

“Whatever the gift, small or big, the resident will appreciate whatever the community gives to them,” she said.

Transportation Benefit District passes with thin margin

By MIKE MALTAIS
Ward Media Staff Reporter

CHELAN – Public Works Director Jake Youngren was an early messenger who advised the Nov. 26 meeting of the city council of the narrow passage of the Transportation Benefit District (TBD) on the Nov. 5 ballot.

“The Transportation Benefit District officially passed,” Youngren said to a relieved council.

“It was a little bit of a roller coaster to certification,” added Youngren. “There was a very large turnout of more than 2,300 voters for that and it passed by five votes.”

The TBD’s 0.3% sales tax increase from 8.4 to 8.7 percent will fund city transportation improvements.

The city council held a public hearing in December 2023 and established the TBD by ordinance. In January 2024, the city assumed TBD rights, powers, functions, and obligations and elected Mayor McCardle as board chairperson.

“Over the next six years we have about $24 million in projects that need to be completed,” said Cardle earlier this year. “And when we have available $300,000 or less each year in terms of matching funds, we’re really not going to be moving forward very quickly on any of those projects.”

Youngren reminded the council of the effect the new TBD will have on city infrastructure.

“With some of the insights you all have into our street operating and capital budget you appreciate and understand how transformative this measure will be for the city for a long time,” Youngren said.

McCardle noted last May that “40 to 60 percent of the incoming TBD funds would be used for pavement preservation; 20 to 40 percent as grant match for projects within the State Transportation Improvement Plan (STIP); 10 to 20 percent for sidewalks, ADA upgrades, and city traffic projects.”

Youngren said his department is anxious to get to work.

“We are very excited about getting started in the process of figuring out and when we are going to start navigating projects,” said Youngren. “There are a lot of great things but one is that it is a very accountability-driven measure. Monies go into a very specific fund and then get spent on very specific projects in an adopted transportation plan.”

For more information about the TBD visit the city’s website at cityof-chelan.us.

NCW Libraries launches Winter Reading Program

NCW News / Ward Media

WENATCHEE – NCW Libraries launched its annual Winter Reading Program on Dec. 1 to promote literacy across North Central Washington during the winter months through a combination of traditional and digital engagement methods.

The program, available at all 30 library locations and via mobile Bookmobile services, allows participants to track their reading progress both through physical reading logs and the digital platform Beanstack.

“Our winter reading program is all about reading for fun. It’s an invitation for community members of all ages to make time to read. We want to foster a culture of reading for all, whether that’s with a book, an audiobook, or even a magazine. Join us!” said Alicia O’Dell, Adult Services Manager.

The initiative implements a dual-reward system: participants using paper logs receive tangible prizes upon reaching their goals, while digital participants earn virtual raffle tickets for prize drawings.

Each library branch has established community-specific reading targets, displayed on prominent reading thermometers that track collective progress. The system-wide impact of last year’s program was significant, with participants logging over 27,500 books during the two-month period.

To foster community engagement, branches are featuring curated book displays and encouraging patron-written reviews. The library system is also maintaining an active online presence, sharing age-appropriate book recommendations across their website and social media platforms.

Participation in the Winter Reading Program is free and open to all residents. Interested participants can

Woods Family Fund awards $63,500 to arts programs across NCW

NCW News / Ward Media

WENATCHEE - The Community Foundation of North Central Washington announced the distribution of $63,500 in grants to 36 organizations through its Woods Family Music & Arts Fund, supporting arts and music education programs across three counties.

The grants, which provide up to $5,000 each for operating expenses or specific projects, aim to increase equitable access to arts and culture in Chelan, Douglas, and Okanogan counties, with a particular focus on youth and underrepresented audiences.

"We were thrilled with the quality of the grant requests for the Woods Family Music & Arts Fund this year," said fundholder Rufus Woods. "We were only able to meet a portion of the need for music and arts funding, so it made for a very challenging job of selecting which grants to fund. We appreciated the many efforts to create access to arts and music education for kids and adults who otherwise wouldn't have access to these programs."

The fund originated with Wilfred and Kathy Woods, arts patrons who established the Woods House Conservatory of Music in 1997.

The conservatory's board later decided to sell the property and establish the current grant program through the Community Foundation, a decision that has led to broader impact.

"That decision has resulted in being able to dramatically increase the impact on music and arts programs in the region," Rufus Woods said. Since its establishment, the grant has distributed over $670,000.

Mount Rainier National Park seeks properties to lease

Houses and trailer pads needed for spring through fall, 2025

NCW News / Ward Media

ASHFORD – Mount Rainier National Park is seeking properties to lease for use by park employees for the spring, summer, and fall seasons (March to November) 2025.

Due to limited housing within and adjacent to Mount Rainier National Park, the park's housing office is looking to expand opportunities for seasonal staff to rent apartments, houses, and/or recreational vehicle (RV) trailers outside the park.

This is the second year that the park has sought and received additional funding specifically to support this effort.

"Mount Rainier National Park continues to search for solutions for housing issues that affect the park's ability to attract new employees," said Greg Dudgeon, park superintendent.

"We were pleased to be selected to participate in this leasing program that could both support adjacent communities and provide supplemental housing for employees during our busiest seasons of the year."

Mount Rainier National Park houses approximately 240 permanent and seasonal employees during the park's busy summer season.

Interested parties can reach out to the Housing Office by calling 360-569-6232. Basic requirements include, but are not limited to, the following:

- Houses and apartments must have smoke detectors and full-sized kitchens. Fire suppression systems are preferred.
- RV pads must, at minimum, be able to accommodate a 40-foot by 12-foot RV, and have full hookups.

Two educators join North Central Education Foundation board

NCW News / Ward Media

WENATCHEE – The North Central Education Foundation has appointed two new board members, Beverly Seim of Ephrata and Alex Siefe of Wenatchee.

Seim joined the board in March 2024 and Siefe in October 2024.

Seim worked in public education for 34 years. She taught elementary resource room in Othello, followed by four years teaching junior high resource room in Moses Lake. She completed her career with the Ephrata School District, teaching grades four through eight, ending as a sixth-grade science and math teacher.

Siefe is an instructor at SkillSource. She holds education degrees from Whitworth University in Spokane and previously lived in Amsterdam before moving to Wenatchee. Her teaching background includes online, hybrid, and in-person instruction across multiple subjects, working with middle and high school students.

“I joined NCEF so that I can help empower educators to create a positive lasting impact on future generations,” Siefe said.

“I believe that the work NCEF is doing here in Central Washington is vital for brightening Washington’s future by investing in educators’ creativity and ingenuity. Every student deserves the opportunity to thrive, so when an educator decides to go above and beyond with that goal in mind, NCEF provides the resources towards realizing that dream.”

CONNECTING COMMUNITIES ACROSS NORTH CENTRAL WASHINGTON

“All Is Calm: The Christmas Truce of 1914” returns to Music Theater of Wenatchee

By Taylor Caldwell
Ward Media Staff Reporter

WENATCHEE – “All Is Calm: The Christmas Truce of 1914” will return to the Music Theater of Wenatchee this December.

The musical tells the true story of soldiers laying down their weapons and spending Christmas with the enemy during World War I (WWI).

“It celebrates the bravery of these men who were not afraid to fight for their country, but also, at the same time, were not afraid to realize that the people that crossed the trenches from them were human beings as well,” said Director Henry Hettick.

On Christmas Eve of 1914, five months into WWI, an impromptu truce between soldiers fighting amid the trenches began with a Christmas carol sung by German soldiers.

Thousands of soldiers left their trenches to greet their enemy, sharing rations, playing soccer, and singing

Christmas songs in a demonstration of peace.

However, the truce was short-lived, when higher command forced soldiers to return to their trenches and resume fighting.

“War is often at the instigation of people who are not going to fight it, and often for reasons that have nothing to do with the lives of those who fight it. And so I think that’s an important message, and that you can love your enemy as well. I think that’s a really important message right now, even in this country,” said Hettick.

The musical was created by Peter Rothstein, and originally performed at Theater Latté Da in Minneapolis, Minnesota.

Rothstein dedicated himself to research before writing the musical, in order to balance accuracy, joy, and tragedy of the historic moment in “All is Calm.”

“I think he got the story right, because although it’s a very heartwarming story, it’s also an extremely tragic story, because this one incident that happened with so much hope is surrounded by awful death and destruction by humanity. And it didn’t last,” said Music Director Dan Jackson.

The story is told through 37 a capella songs in 75 minutes. The songs are a mix of complex harmonies of both classic Christmas carols as well as songs of war.

“They’ve been arranged in ways that are truly unique. In the middle of the show, “Silent Night” is sung by the whole chorus, and it’s sung in three different languages, French, German and English. It’s also in, at various points, three different tempos... And it’s overlapping... It’s just an amazing, amazing bit of musical creation,” said Hettick.

The immersive production projects photos from the war behind the men as they sing, and songs are interspersed with monologues of real letters home written by soldiers in the war.

you want to cry and whatnot, but you leave the theater feeling exhilarated by the bravery of these men, but also by a piece of theater that’s moving,” said Hettick.

“All Is Calm: The Christmas Truce of 1914” will have both evening and matinee performances at the Riverside Playhouse in Wenatchee.

Evening performances will be at 7:30 p.m., Dec. 5-7 and 12-14.

Matinee performances will be at 2 p.m. Dec. 7-8 and 14-15.

For more information and tickets, visit mtow.org.

“It’s really cool that we have an organization like Music Theater [of Wenatchee] in town that has a facility and can be a vehicle for shows like this... We wouldn’t be doing it I don’t think if we didn’t have Music Theater. It’s a community treasure,” said Jackson.

Wenatchee volunteer named 2024 Master Gardener of the Year

NCW News / Ward Media

WENATCHEE – The Washington State University Extension Master Gardener Program has named Debbie Benbow of Wenatchee as its 2024 Master Gardener of the Year, recognizing her extensive contributions and leadership in horticultural education across the state.

Benbow, who has served as a volunteer with the WSU Chelan-Douglas Master Gardener Program since 2009, was selected from eight nominees statewide by the WSU Extension Master Gardener Recognition and Awards Committee.

The award was announced in late September and is sponsored by the Master Gardener Foundation of Washington State.

“I can’t say enough good things about Debbie Benbow,” said Marco Martinez, coordinator of the WSU Chelan-Douglas

Debbie Benbow

Master Gardener Program. “Her work has benefitted our local WSU Master Gardener Program and other programs statewide. Locally, she has helped our program better focus its education efforts. She has also used her marketing and graphic design skills to help promote those efforts.”

The award recognizes active volunteers who demonstrate leadership at both state and county levels while making lasting contributions to the Extension Master Gardener Program. Benbow’s service record shows significant dedication, with more than 1,500 volunteer hours logged in the past two years alone. Throughout her 15-year tenure, she has accumulated over 7,100 volunteer hours.

In related news, Craig Lawrence, a WSU Chelan-Douglas Master Gardener since 2016, was nominated for the Ed La-Crosse Distinguished Award. Lawrence was one of four nominees for this recognition, which honors individuals who have made significant statewide impacts on the WSU Extension Master Gardener Program or have served the Master Gardener Foundation of Washington State.

Washington State releases plans to end traffic deaths by 2030

NCW News / Ward Media

OLYMPIA – Washington state transportation officials announced a plan to eliminate traffic deaths and serious injuries on state roads by 2030, introducing new safety measures and policy recommendations.

The Washington State Department of Transportation (WSDOT) and Washington Traffic Safety Commission (WTSC) released their 2024 Target Zero Plan, which changes the state’s approach to traffic safety since the program’s inception in 2000.

The updated plan introduces three foundational elements: Prosocial Traffic Safety Culture, the Safe System Approach, and an Equity Framework. The plan incorporates the Safe System Approach for the first time, acknowledging human error and focusing on creating infrastructure that prevents fatal outcomes from crashes.

“We simply cannot continue to see crashes, deaths and injuries increase on our roadways,” said Secretary of Transportation Roger Millar of WSDOT. “We know several ways to keep everyone safer while expanding access to all, and this plan and recommendations include important steps to inform state funding decisions and achieve our 2030 safety goals.”

The plan comes as Washington faces rising traffic fatalities. Key policy recommendations include reducing the legal blood alcohol content limit to .05, implementing strategies for safer driving speeds, and making driver education more accessible through financial assistance.

“Traffic fatalities have devastating impacts on families and communities, and we must use every tool available to eliminate these tragic losses,” said WTSC Director Shelly Baldwin. “The 2024 Target Zero Plan outlines a clear path to achieve safer roads for everyone in Washington.”

The plan details shared responsibility among all road users and lists six key elements: safer land use, safer people, safer roads, safer vehicles, safer speeds, and post-crash care. It also includes measures for active transportation infrastructure to protect vulnerable road users.

The Target Zero initiative, which began in 2000, guides Washington’s work to eliminate traffic fatalities and serious injuries. State officials want stakeholders, including policymakers, transportation planners, and the public, to support the plan’s safety initiatives.

For more information, the complete plan is available at <https://targetzero.com>.

Winter logging operations begin in Lake Wenatchee area

NCW News / Ward Media

LEAVENWORTH – Winter logging operations have commenced on two timber sales near Lake Wenatchee, marking the latest phase of the Upper Wenatchee Pilot Project.

The operations, located 20 miles north of Leavenworth on the Wenatchee River Ranger District, will involve Hampton Lumber Company and Gibson and Son LLC working on the Meadow DXP and Raging DXP Stewardship timber sales, respectively.

The project, which began tree felling and road preparation in mid-October, will continue through summer 2025. Operators selected winter operations to take advantage of frozen ground conditions that help protect sensitive soil areas.

Wenatchee River District Ranger Erica Taecker addressed safety concerns for winter recreationists.

“Please be aware that logging trucks will be hauling through the Fish Lake Sno-Park on weekdays and snowmobile riders and other winter recreationists will need to remain alert for logging truck traffic in the vicinity of the Sno-park,” Taecker said.

The logging activities are concentrated near several major forest roads, including the West Chiwawa #6306, Big Meadow Creek #6300, Road #62, and the Meadow Ridge Road #6307.

While logging operations will affect some areas, officials confirm that many miles of groomed snowmobile routes in the Fish Lake and Chiwawa areas remain unaffected by the hauling operations.

To accommodate both logging operations and recreation, no log hauling will occur on weekends.

The purchasers will maintain haul roads with a snow base to allow for continued snowmobile grooming on weekends and holidays.

The timber sales are part of a larger forest management initiative aimed at reducing wildfire risk to local communities and promoting forest health.

The Forest Service is collaborating with Chelan County and the North Central Washington Forest Health Collaborative on the implementation of the Upper Wenatchee Pilot Project.

The Fish Lake Sno-Park, situated at the intersection of Roads #6200 and #6300, will remain open throughout the winter season, though Taecker cautioned against snowmobiling on active haul routes during weekdays due to safety concerns.

The Winter Recreation Program at Washington State Parks oversees Sno-Park management in partnership with various agencies and private landowners. Winter trail grooming typically operates from early December through March, weather conditions permitting.
