Lake Chelan community to host third annual shoreline cleanup event

Lake Chelan Mirror / Ward Media

CHELAN – Local environmental groups and community organizations are preparing for the third annual "Restore the Shore" cleanup event at Lake Chelan on April 12, as part of ongoing efforts to preserve one of Washington state's natural landmarks.

The community-wide initiative will begin at 9:30 a.m., with volunteers gathering at the City Marina Parking Lot between the drive-in and go-carts across from Chelan Market.

Participants are also encouraged to clean up any lakeshore location of their choosing.

This year's event introduces new data collection methods through the TrashBlitz app, developed by the 5 Gyres Institute, which will help track and categorize collected waste. The application is available for free download on mobile platforms, though paper forms will also be provided for those who prefer non-digital options.

The cleanup effort is expanding beyond the main lake area this year. A special cleanup in Stehekin, within the Lake Chelan National Recreation Area, will take place on April 11, led by Anna Galipeau of the Lake Chelan Research Institute (LCRI). This extension was made possible through a grant from 5 Gyres' TrashBlitz Ambassador Action Fund.

Campbell's Resort will provide complimentary coffee, tea, cocoa, and pastries for volunteers from 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. in their Park Room on Woodin Avenue following the cleanup activities.

The event represents a collaborative effort between Keep It Blue--Lake Chelan, LCRI, and The Chelan Project at Chelan High School, with additional support from Campbell's Resort, City of Chelan, Pilgrim Lake Services, Lake Chelan Valley Habitat for Humanity, and the 5 Gyres Institute.

Organizers recommend that participants bring reusable bags or buckets, gloves, and a phone or camera for documentation purposes. Collected trash can be logged independently, dropped off at the designated collection point at 601 W. Wooden Ave., or arrangements can be made for pickup.

Further information about the cleanup event, including registration details, can be found on the Keep It Blue- – Lake Chelan website at www.keepitbluelakechelan.org/restore-the-shore.

House committee unanimously endorses Goehner's water-sewer district bill

NCW News / Ward Media

OLYMPIA – A House committee has unanimously endorsed legislation sponsored by Sen. Keith Goehner (R-Dryden) that aims to streamline the process for water-sewer districts to sell surplus property.

Senate Bill 5467 would update financial thresholds for property sales, doubling the current $2,500 threshold for the notice-of-intention requirement that water-sewer districts must meet when selling personal property. Additionally, the threshold for permitting private sales of real property owned by districts would increase to $7,500 from the current $5,000 limit. "Senate Bill 5467 is a common-sense update that ensures our water-sewer districts can operate more efficiently without unnecessary bureaucratic delays," said Goehner. "By adjusting outdated financial thresholds, we're cutting red tape and enabling districts to manage their surplus property in a manner that makes fiscal sense, while maintaining transparency and accountability."

NCW News / Ward Media

OLYMPIA – Washington state lawmakers have released a $7.63 billion bipartisan capital budget proposal for 2025-27 that focuses on statewide infrastructure needs and community investments.

House Bill 1216, unveiled last week, represents months of collaborative work between Republican and Democratic legislators. The proposal makes substantial investments in housing, education, behavioral health facilities, and essential infrastructure across the state.

WASHINGTON STATE SENATE Sen. Keith Goehner (R-Dryden)

The legislation is presented as a measure to help water-sewer districts adapt to current economic conditions while focusing on their primary services.

"This bill reflects the economic realities of today and helps our local water-sewer districts focus on their core mission – delivering reliable services to our communities," Goehner added. "These updates strike the right balance between efficiency and oversight, ensuring that small asset sales are not entangled in outdated regulations while still upholding responsible stewardship of public resources."

Following the committee's endorsement, the bill now moves forward for potential consideration by the full House of Representatives. Rep. Mike Steele, R-Chelan, ranking Republican on the House Capital Budget Committee, expressed strong support for the plan.

"This budget is the product of months of careful collaboration and a strong focus on people," said Steele. "At a time when other state budgets are facing pressure and shortfalls, the capital budget stands out as a bright spot. It supports our shared bipartisan priorities – housing, education, behavioral health, and essential infrastrucWASHINGTON STATE HOUSE REPUBLICANS ture – and does not rely heavily on general fund dollars. I'm proud of the teamwork that went into this plan and confident in the positive impact it will have in communities across the state."

Unlike Washington's operating budget, which covers day-to-day state services and relies primarily on general fund revenue, the capital budget is largely funded through bond sales. It focuses on long-term physical investments including public schools, water systems, and community facilities.

The House proposal includes $4.64 billion in newly authorized general

Chelan High School captures SkillsUSA Teamworks State Title against technical school competition

Lake Chelan Mirror / Ward Media

CHELAN – Chelan High School emerged victorious at the SkillsUSA Teamworks Washington State Competition, distinguishing itself as the only traditional high school to win against a field of specialized technical schools.

The competition tested students' proficiency in multiple construction disciplines including framing, electrical wiring, plumbing, and masonry.

The winning team consisted of four Chelan students: Gabe Gilpin, Logan Watson, Tristan Sanderson, and Wade Sanderson, under the guidance of teacher and advisor Mr. Jason Sanderson.

In a separate event, Chelan student

But, it's "good" smoke. After an overview of a century of forest growth patterns and wildfire mitigation efforts, we heard hopeful news.

The friendly, interactive panel from The Nature Conservancy, DNR, and Cascadia Conservation District outlined why we should support mechanical thinning and controlled burning every spring and fall in our dry forests.

We may not love it, but smoke from prescribed burns is much better than smoke from a WILDFIRE! Prescribed burns are pre-scheduled, monitored for air quality, regulated by highly trained teams, AND they're effective in mitigating the Megafires.

So, let's get our MERV 13 indoor air filters installed, and bookmark these useful websites: Central Washington Interagency Communications Center: https://gacc.nifc.gov/ nwcc/districts/CWICC/ and Watch Duty: https://www. watchduty.org/

Johnny Castro competed in the carpentry competition, marking the school's first year of participation in this category.

Despite facing unexpected challenges, Castro performed admirably.

His competition included metal stud framing, which is more common in commercial building and not yet a focus in Chelan's programs.

According to the school, Castro adapted well and learned on the fly.

School officials noted that all club programs and trips to state competitions are supported by local school levy funds, and expressed gratitude to the community for their continued support.

The SkillsUSA competition provides students with opportunities to demonstrate careerready skills in various technical and trade fields, preparing them for future employment in industries facing skilled labor shortages.

Sophomore Isauro has shattered the school javelin record with an incredible throw of 169' 8", surpassing the previous mark of 153' 3". His hard work and dedication are paying off, and the season is only halfway through. Isauro originally broke the record by a few feet early on and has continued to push even farther. In addition to his success in javelin, he plays a key role on the 4x100 relay team-starting the season as the lead-off runner and now anchoring the squad. His commitment and versatility have made him a true team leader. Keep it up, Isauro!

"It's been no surprise that I wanted housing," said Yasmin Trudeau, D-Tacoma. "I've supported housing policy, I've supported supply, stabilization, I've supported anything related to housing. A lot of that is based on my own lived experience. So I know the need is acute."

The Housing Trust Fund isn't the only pot of money for homes in the capital budgets. The House version has nearly $724 million for housing, including the Housing Trust Fund dollars. The Senate figure is $770 million.

Much of that extra money pays for connecting utilities to affordable housing. The Senate budgets $65 million for this. The House has $100 million, including $10 million for the long-planned redevelopment of Fort Lawton in Seattle.

The Senate plan also looks to put nearly $36 million toward developing more housing near transit. The House has $10 million dedicated to shelter and housing for youth.

Lawmakers are trying to tackle an estimated millionhome shortfall over the next two decades as the state grows. And half of those added homes would need to be affordable to those making less than half of the median income, according to a state Department of Commerce report last year.

Washington is 230,000 affordable units shy of what it needs for those households. The state needs nearly 22,000 new units per year through 2044, but averaged just 7,000 from 2016 to 2023

Meanwhile, the number of housing permits has declined the past two years, likely due to rising construction costs and higher interest rates.

Affordability continues to be a major issue, as rents climb faster than incomes.

Advocates applauded the new proposed investment.

"Your investments to increase the supply of affordable homes across the state will significantly transform lives," Michele Thomas, the director of policy and advocacy for the Washington Low Income Housing Alliance, told a Senate committee last week.

Jesse Simpson, of the Housing Development Consortium, called the House's proposal "bold and necessary steps to address our state's deep shortage of affordable housing."

Getting specific

Founded in 1986 to finance housing for low-income Washingtonians, the Housing Trust Fund has since invested $2 billion to help build over 58,000 units.

The funding mostly goes to the state Department of Commerce to dole out via competitive grants, like the roughly $100 million both chambers earmarked for permanent supportive housing, the more than $200 million for multifamily rental units and the $50 million to $55 million for housing for people with intellectual and developmental disabilities. Each proposal also has $50 million in the trust fund to preserve existing housing.

Most of the money goes toward grants for construction, but can also be used for rental subsidies and assistance on down payments for first-time homebuyers.

The House blueprint budgets $80 million for homeownership help, while the Senate sets aside $75 million.

Lawmakers continue to show their "commitment to affordable housing and affordable homeownership, and move us closer to our goal of 20% of the Housing Trust Fund being dedicated to affordable homeownership," said Ryan Donohue, the chief advocacy officer for Habitat for Humanity SeattleKing & Kittitas Counties.

The budgets also include money tied to specific projects.

In the House, those include $4.5 million for a shelter organization in King County, $5 million for the YWCA based in Wenatchee and $2 million for an 80-unit transit-oriented development project in Tacoma.

And in the Senate, there is $8 million for a 17-story affordable housing project near the University of Washington, $2 million for older adult housing in Yakima and another $2 million for refugee and immigrant housing in Tacoma.

The Senate unanimously approved its capital budget plan Saturday, kicking off a few weeks of negotiations between the two chambers before arriving at a consensus. The legislative session is slated to end April 27.

Sustainable NCW Earth Day Fair set for April 19 at Wenatchee Valley College

NCW News / Ward Media

WENATCHEE – Wenatchee Valley College will host Sustainable NCW's Earth Day Fair on Saturday, April 19, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., offering the community a variety of free environmental education activities and entertainment.

The event will feature more than 50 vendors and local organizations, including Cascadia Conservation District, Chelan Douglas Land Trust, Master Gardeners, and NCW Audubon Society, among others

The day will begin with an Earth Day 5K or 1K Fun Run at 9:30 a.m. on WVC's Wenatchee campus.

Throughout the day, attendees can participate in a bike co-op to learn about bicycle maintenance, visit an e-cycling center for electronics disposal, and join a tree campus tour led by WVC Professor Jennifer Hadersberger.

A series of Eco-Talks is scheduled from 10:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., covering topics such as Helion fusion plans, innovative construction materials, and Eastside Rebuild. Each presentation will include a question-and-answer session.

Musical performances will be provided by the Wenatchee Valley Youth Symphony and groups from Wenatchee High School, Pinnacles Prep, and Eastmont High School.

Children's activities will include a TEAMS Learning Center, chalk art, and wildlife experiences.

Food trucks will be present, with vendors using compostable serving ware as part of the event's Towards Zero Waste practices.

The fair will also feature a silent auction of sustainable items and experiences to benefit Sustainable NCW, plus displays of electric vehicles, a hydrogen vehicle, an all-electric tractor, and a Link Transit electric bus.

"I'm delighted that this year's Sustainable NCW Earth Day Fair will be held on our beautiful Wenatchee campus. Our community will have the opportunity to see the amazing work our college and local organizations do every day to create a more sustainable environment across North Central Washington," said WVC President Faimous Harrison. "Sustainable NCW's Earth Day Fair is a landmark event that brings our community together to celebrate the stewardship of our planet and Wenatchee Valley College is honored to welcome you onto our campus for the next chapter of this event!"

WVC will extend Earth Day celebrations with additional events on April 22 and 23, including poetry readings, nature hikes, and a clothing swap.

The poetry reading on April 22 will feature WVC faculty Ana Maria Spagna and writers Jarret Ziemer and Susan Sampson, along with WVC Creative Writing students.

Parking will be free for the Earth Day Fair, though attendees are encouraged to use alternative transportation when possible.

More information is available at www.sustainablencw. org/earth-day-fair.

Governor Ferguson names WVC English professor Derek Sheffield as State Poet Laureate

By ANDREW SIMPSON Ward Media Staff Reporter

OLYMPIA - Governor Bob Ferguson has named Washington State's eighth and newest State Poet Laureate, an honor he gave to Professor Derek Sheffield of Wenatchee Valley College.

Professor Sheffield teaches English at the college and is the author of several books of poetry, as well as the co-editor of Cascadia Field Guide: Art, Ecology, Poetry, the winner of the 2024 Pacific Northwest Book Award

The two-year appointment makes Sheffield Washington's cultural ambassador of poetry, a position he's uniquely qualified for as an avid outdoorsman.

The culture of Washington and the whole of the Pacific Northwest centers largely on the scenic natural beauty of the area, and Sheffield writes extensively in that vein.

It could be said that if Washington were Walden Pond, Sheffield might be its Henry David Thoreau.

He not only lives in an area near Leavenworth, but has, for the last two decades, taught the Northwest Nature Writing class at Wenatchee Valley College.

"I am as much a naturalist as I am a poet, and so I am able to build awareness and connection for the natural world, just as I do for poetry," says Sheffield. "People won't protect what they don't know. More of us need to understand exactly what it is we lose from our culture when we lose

poetry and wildness."

Governor Ferguson himself noted Sheffield's focus on the environment, saying "Derek has a real gift for capturing in poetry the natural beauty that makes Washington one of the best places to live.

Sheffield's other passion lies in mental health awareness, and he is acutely aware of the crisis facing young people today.

"As poet laureate, I want to engage more of our teenagers with poetry because it will be good medicine," he says. "Poetry makes us slow down and dwell on our relationships.

Indeed, the job of a poet laureate is not merely symbolic.

As an ambassador through poetry, Sheffield will visit all manner of areas of community engagement, including schools and museums, and will travel the state building awareness and a deeper appreciation for poetry through readings and events, and may even embark on projects of his own choosing.

The Washington State Arts Commission (ArtsWA) and Humanities Washington comanage the State Poet Laureate program, and have since its inception in 2007.

Karen Hanan, ArtsWA's executive director, said in a press release announcing the Governor's appointment of Sheffield, "Washington is fortunate to be home to compassionate, courageous artists like Derek. We are confident that his message of community and connection to nature will improve the lives of Washingtonians across the state - especially our youth, who need this support more than ever."

Having a local represent the state as Poet Laureate is especially exciting to members of the literary "scene" here in the Wenatchee Valley.

Holly Thorpe, a colleague of Sheffield's at the college and the founder of "LitMic: NCW's Loudest Open Mic" a monthly showcase for the best poets and writers from the Wenatchee Valley - told Ward Media exclusively:

"I am so proud to call Derek a friend, mentor, and colleague. He is a role model for me as a poet and educator, and inspired me to pursue my master of fine arts. The joy he finds in writing, community and the beautiful place we call home is infectious, and I'm so grateful he will get to share it with others around the state."

create outdoor recreation endowment

NCW News / Ward Media

WENATCHEE _ The Wenatchee Valley YMCA announced Friday it will sell its nearly century-old Lake Wenatchee Camp property to fund a multi-million-dollar endowment aimed at expanding outdoor recreation offerings for area residents.

The organization plans to begin marketing the 25-acre property this fall following the conclusion of the 2025 summer camp season, according to YMCA President and CEO Dorry Foster.

"The Wenatchee Valley

YMCA will be embarking on an audacious strategy to dramatically increase the number of local residents who can experience outdoor recreation, including overnight camping experiences," Foster said. The Lake Wenatchee Camp currently serves approximately 300 campers annually, with 125 from Chelan and Douglas counties, representing just 1.24% of the local school districts' population for the age groups served.

According to the YMCA, the camp has faced mounting financial challenges, with capital and operating losses totaling more than $2 million over the past

Officials cited that camp buildings no longer comply with current child safety policies, and necessary renovations would cost "tens of millions of dollars."

"The needs of kids and families in our area are changing and the Wenatchee YMCA must adapt its programs and services to meet those needs," Foster said. "The development of an outdoor recreation endowment will allow the Y the ability to better serve its members and the community and do so in a financially sustainable manner."

Search is on in Washington Legislature for new tax options

By Jerry Cornfield Washington State Standard

B2

OLYMPIA - How much Washington should raise in new tax revenue and who will pay is something state lawmakers and Gov. Bob Ferguson will hash out in the final weeks of the legislative session.

Washington's wealthiest individuals, largest corporations and biggest banks are prime targets.

Homeowners, vapers and self-storage unit renters are among those who could share in the burden. Possible tweaks to expand the state's capital gains tax could also be in play.

"There will be a tax increase," House Speaker Laurie Jinkins, D-Tacoma, said Wednesday. "It's figuring out the right kind of balance and making sure we're able to not harm everyday Washingtonians.'

A day earlier, Ferguson threw cold water on House and Senate Democrats' desire to tax those with more than $50 million. He said the tax is "untested, difficult to implement, and most importantly, for purposes of adopting a sustainable budget, will face an immediate challenge in court.

Ferguson said he could, however, tolerate such a tax if the take is tiny, just to have its legality tested.

But a drastically slimmed version of the so-called wealth tax won't raise anywhere near what Democrats say is necessary to close a wide budget gap and stave off harsh cuts.

Notably, Ferguson did not express dissent on other revenue-raising measures under discussion, such as hiking taxes on large businesses and financial institutions, a new payroll tax and lifting the 1% cap on annual increases in property tax collections by the state.

These are all means Democrats are eyeing to fill a budget hole the governor pegged at $16 billion.

Republican legislators were glad the governor dissed the wealth tax but disappointed he didn't go further.

"I wish he had also pushed back against the Democrats' property-tax increase, as that will take billions upon billions from families of all income - but maybe it will be levels next," Sen. Nikki Torres, R-Pasco, said in a statement.

Staking out their positions

Fans and foes of the Democrats' efforts argued their cases at lengthy hearings in the Senate and House this week. They've also intensified their direct lobbying of party leaders and budget writers, knowing it's crunch time.

Leaders of Washington's mostrecognized corporate giants signed onto a letter Wednesday opposing new business-related taxes and warning of severe economic consequences if companies and jobs start decamping to less expensive states.

"Given national economic trends, Washington state cannot sustain continued tax and spending increases and simultaneously maintain our economic resilience and competitiveness," reads the letter sent Wednesday to Ferguson and leaders of the four caucuses

More than 60 executives -including those from Amazon, Costco, Microsoft, Nordstrom, T-Mobile, the Seattle Mariners and Weverhaeuser - signed on.

Rachel Smith, president and CEO of the Seattle Metropolitan Chamber of Commerce, which helped put together the letter, said Thursday that political leaders at all levels of government need "a reality check" or they're risking a recession.

"Whether you want to tax the rich to be righteous or enact tariffs to drive an ideological policy goal, we need to ask ourselves: when has kamikaze economic policy ever worked?" she said.

Jinkins took umbrage at Weyerhaeuser's participation, telling reporters company representatives have sat in her office and told her "we're never leaving this state."

Supporters have focused on the importance of Democrats' proposals as a needed corrective to a tax system in which those with lower incomes pay a greater percentage of their earnings in taxes.

The tax hikes will sustain vital services and move the state closer to carrying out its paramount duty of funding basic education for public school students, they've said.

"The governor and legislative leaders have all said that our tax structure is too regressive. Now is the time to help us close this budget shortfall while preserv-providing more opportunities for everyone to access the outdoors," Ulrich said.

The endowment will fund adventure-based programs, outdoor education, leadership ing public schools and essential services for our community,' said Larry Delaney, president of the Washington Education Association, a teachers' union.

The big taxes

Democrats in the Senate and House have teed up four major proposals. Hearings were held this week on all of them, but no votes are planned until Democrats decide which to pursue.

One is the wealth tax targeting about 4,300 people. Each chamber has its own approach.

In the House version, there would be a tax of $8 on every $1,000 of assessed value of certain financial assets such as stocks, bonds, exchange-traded funds, and mutual funds. The tax would only apply to the value of these assets that is above $50 million.

Senate Democrats want to set the tax rate at $10. They also want to tax the full value of the covered assets if a person has more than $50 million of them. In other words, if you have $51 million of these assets, Senate Democrats would apply the new tax on all of it, while the House would only tax the $1 million.

Both chambers want to erase the 1% cap on increases in the annual property tax growth for the state's common schools levy and for cities and counties, as well as special purpose districts.

The Senate replaces it with one based on the combined rate of population growth plus inflation. There would be no cap.

The House also moves to a rate based on population growth plus inflation, but sets a cap of 3%. Both assume the state property tax limit will be uncapped but local governments would not make a change without voter approval.

A third major proposal is a Senate-backed statewide payroll announcement. The organization has commissioned an appraisal of the property and sought guidance from third-party partners.

YMCA leadership noted that it remains unclear whether pro-tax. Employers would pay a 5% tax on payroll expenses above the Social Security threshold currently $176,100 per year.

This tax is limited to companies with $7 million or more in payroll expenses - about 5,289 businesses. It's modeled on Seattle's JumpStart tax. Critics point to employers who have shifted jobs away from Seattle after the city imposed its levy.

House Democrats are eyeing a permanent 1% surcharge to the business and occupation tax rate on businesses with taxable income over $250 million. About 370 businesses would be affected.

The same bill would increase the surcharge on financial institutions with annual net income of $1 billion or more from 1.2% to 1.9%. This will impact about 250 businesses.

Wait, there's more

Budgets passed in the House and Senate relied on billions of dollars from the wealth tax to balance. Ferguson's comments have them casting around for other ideas.

"There are other revenue options out there," Jinkins said Wednesday, including eight to 10 business tax possibilities.

"There are capital gains," she added without elaborating. Washington imposes a 7% tax on gains over $270,000 from the sale or exchange of long-term assets like stocks, bonds and business interests

Democrats in December looked at the possibility of upping it to 9% or having a higher rate for gains greater than $1 million.

The Senate has a bill to repeal 20 tax exemptions considered obsolete or ineffective. These include carve-outs for gold bullion and prescription drug wholesalers.

This week, the House Finance Committee is expected to advance a bill expanding definitions of "moist snuff" and 'tobacco products" to include those containing nicotine.

That would make them subject to the state's tobacco products tax and net $25 million a year. Next week the committee will consider a bill that could raise the price of cigarettes and vape products.

Bills to tax storage units, which could generate a similar amount each year, and increasing the advanced computing surcharge paid by large technology companies, are lurking. The latter legislation could bring in around $200 million a year. "It's clear we have work to do in negotiating a compromise that leads to a budget and revenue package that works for Washington families," said House

Finance Chair April Berg, D-Mill Creek.

The 105-day legislative session is scheduled to end April 27.

Faletto (Jenny) of Chelan, WA, weight of the decision.

"We are incredibly grateful for the many years of memories created at the camp and the impact it has had on countless young lives. While this decision was not taken lightly, we believe this brings a new opportunity to create partnerships with State Parks, Forest Service, and recreation businesses in our community that share our mission, development, and overnight camping experiences at other Northwest camps. The YMCA stated it would work to ensure a smooth transition for former camp staff and volunteers, with many expected to participate in the new programming.

After summer 2025, the camp will continue offering group rentals and outdoor education "when we can," according to the ceeds from the property sale will help fund construction of a new facility or reduce long-term debt for the new YMCA campus on 5th Street in Wenatchee.

"We believe these decisions will help the Wenatchee Valley YMCA be successful in supporting kids and families for the next 100 years," Foster added.

The Lake Wenatchee YMCA Camp has operated for 98 years.
