Cashmere plans June 3 forum on comprehensive and climate plans

By Kirk Beckendorf
Special to Ward Media

CASHMERE — A Community Forum will be held on June 3 to obtain public input and feedback to assist in updating Cashmere's 20 Year Comprehensive Plan and the development of the new Climate Resilience Plan.

Christina Wollman, Planning Consultant with Perteet, Inc., told the Cashmere Planning Commission at their April 7th meeting that there will be a booth at Founder's Day to gather additional contributions from the public. As part of the community engagement strategy, a community and county-wide survey is being developed. Wollman stressed that it will be in both Spanish and English in order to have participation from all community members.

Wollman and Mandy Maxwell, EK Consulting, provided the Commissioners with an update of the status of the Climate Resilience planning process, which is a required component and grant-funded portion of the Comprehensive Plan.

Maxwell explained that city assets were analyzed to determine which might be at risk from five different climate hazards. The result was an asset-hazard pairing. The five hazards are: drought, extreme temperatures, floods and precipitation, wildfire and smoke, and snowpack loss.

The list of 16 city assets included orchards and other agriculture, ag-related business, power infrastructure, cultural sites, commercial buildings, schools, churches, residential buildings, and water supply. All 16 of the assets were considered at risk from the impacts of potential floods, extreme precipitation, wildfire and smoke. Seeking input from the Planning Commission, Maxwell asked if there were pairings that should be prioritized. The Commission replied that additional information was needed first.

After the asset-hazard pairings had been developed, Wollman explained that the city's old Comprehensive Plan and other planning documents had been reviewed to determine if goals and policies were included that would address climate resilience. According to Wollman, some policies were in place, but she recommended that they will need to be revised and others added, especially in relation to the city's water and sewer plans.

Wollman explained that the next steps in the process would be a Vulnerability and Risk analysis for each asset-hazard pair. Each asset's vulnerability to a hazard will be evaluated and given a High, Medium and Low rating based on its 1) exposure, 2) sensitivity and 3) adaptive capacity.

Those assets which are determined to have high or medium vulnerability will then be evaluated for their risk to the hazards. Risk will be evaluated based on both the probability (how likely climate change will cause an impact) and magnitude (how severe an impact from climate change could be expected) of the risk.

Commission Chair Zak Steigmeyer said he wants to prioritize what asset-pairs are addressed since the city is resource limited. He also recommended that the Commission plan for other hazards, in addition to those that are climate-focused.

In Cashmere, building community is a family affair

ANDREW SIMPSON/WARD MEDIA

John Mainord, his wife Hailey, and his sister Mary have taken Cashmere into their hearts and brought in ideas that will fill others' hearts.

By Andrew Simpson
Ward Media Staff Reporter

CASHMERE — Even if you believe that Cashmere is someday going to be an urban hotbed of shopping, dining and nightlife, the focus for now is on community. In fact, it has been for more than 120 years.

Sometimes, being community-minded leads to the kind of cultural experience that the people of small towns like this across America deserve without having to travel as far as one of the more urban places.

That's exactly the aim of John Mainord, his wife Hailey, and his sister Mary. They may not originally be from Cashmere, but their ties to the community run much further back than just to the businesses they're opening in the next few weeks in Cashmere's newest block-long complex, Side Street.

A new family comes to an old town

The Mainords fell in love with Cashmere years ago, when they would come visit a friend who worked in the Forest Service in Entiat. The natural beauty of the town, with the Wenatchee River running through it and the hills surrounding the area, make the geographical center of Washington a magnet for folks that come from other naturally beautiful areas — just like where the Mainords grew up in Texas.

Eventually they relocated to this area, living at first in their RV. But after time, they wanted to make things permanent, and Cashmere was the town they'd come to love. In fact, the first thing they printed as part of their new business venture here were t-shirts declaring "Cashmere is Cool."

Currently, the storefronts for both Cashmere Records, the brainchild of John Mainord, and Understory Books, his sister Mary's store, are just booths inside Brassbound Collective, an amalgamating space of makers and

The Huckleberry's wild about Cashmere with new Cafe location at Apple Annie's

By Andrew Simpson
Ward Media Staff Reporter

CASHMERE — At this point, if you haven't been to at least one of the locations or variations of the Wild Huckleberry in the Wenatchee Valley, you've been missing out. Now they're set to open their newest location — and version of the eatery — in the same diner next to Apple Annie's in Cashmere that once housed the '59er Diner and Jasmine's.

The classic yellow Studebaker front end still sits over the kitchen window where orders come up.

The long-awaited opening finally came on April 15 at 8 a.m.

The original restaurant on Mission Street in Wenatchee has been in business for 25 years, and during that time, they've expanded into The Huck at Pybus, a smaller dining area that's one of the most popular spots inside the Public Market, taken over the Big Y Cafe in Peshastin and opened Huckleberry North at the site of the old Dusty's In and Out on North Wenatchee Avenue.

The Cashmere iteration will be called the Huckleberry Cafe, and although there's no menu publicly available yet, employees say that it will be a mix of all the locations. With hours from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m., they'll offer meals for any time of day.

A stroll inside the nearly-there restaurant tells you that it's going to have décor for sale just like the

Chelan County secures previously frozen wildfire defense grant

By TAYLOR CALDWELL
Ward Media Staff Reporter

CHELAN COUNTY – After facing an uncertain delay due to frozen federal funding, Chelan County has secured access to its $9.275 million Community Wildfire Defense Grant (CWDG) for wildfire risk reduction in the Leavenworth area.

The federal grant supports five years of hazardous fuels reduction, evacuation route improvement, and implementation of remote water tanks for firefighting response in priority landscapes, such as Chumstick Highway, Upper Lake Wenatchee, and Nason areas. The work will be led by a number of group of organizations and agencies, such as Chelan County Fire District #3, Lake Wenatchee Fire and Rescue, Chumstick

Wildfire Stewardship Coalition, and Cascadia Conservation District, to name a few.

In early February, the Washington Department of Natural Resources (DNR), the grant facilitator, lost access to $180 million in Infrastructure Investment and Jobs Act and Inflation Reduction Act funding amid the Trump administration's spending freeze. According to DNR Communications Director Michael Kelly, $90 million of which was designated for wildfire prevention, suppression, resilience, and forest health.

Kelly previously told Ward Media that there was no official communication from the federal government about why it was frozen or when it would be made available. Without confirmation of funding, the DNR moved to pause the execution of pending grant agreements, including Chelan County's CWDG funding.

Within the last several weeks, the DNR regained access to the funding, although some funds remain inaccessible. According to Kelly, program staff and grant managers evaluated grants and contracts for resumption on a case-by-case basis.

"Just like when the funds were frozen originally, there has been no official communication. Any information we've received has come through staff-to-staff conversations," said DNR Communications Director Michael Kelly in an email to Ward Media.

Chelan County Natural Resources Director Mike Kaputa confirmed that the county received the signed agreement in the first week of April, guaranteeing funding for work in the 2025 season.

"The whole time we continued with our planning... So as soon as we got the money, we were able to start sending out emails to homeowners we already had lined up [for defensible space fuels treatment]," Fire District #3 Deputy Chief Mike Smith. The fire district's goal is to treat 40 properties per year over the five-year grant.

At the state level, the DNR's concerns lie with expectations of a "degraded federal partner" going into the 2025 wildfire season, due to the firing of staff at a federal level and the delay in the U.S. Forest Service hiring seasonal staff, said Kelly.

"But we are preparing for wildfire season as we always do – hiring and training our seasonal staff, locking in our exclusive-use aircraft contracts, planning to pre-position our air and other resources across the state, and making sure we are in regular communication with our local, Tribal, and federal partners," said Kelly.

Chelan-Douglas Regional Port Authority's Trades District recognized for innovation in economic development

NCW News
Ward Media

OLYMPIA — The Chelan-Douglas Regional Port Authority received recognition for its innovative Trades District Project at the 2025 Washington Economic Development Association (WEDA) Awards held in Olympia on March 26.

The project, which features 12 incubator spaces ranging from 1,584 to 2,175 square feet, was honored with one of two Innovation in Economic Development awards presented at WEDA's Winter/Spring Conference.

According to WEDA officials, the Trades District represents a pioneering approach to economic development, reimagining how communities cultivate business growth and entrepreneurship by focusing on trade-based, retail and service businesses rather than pursuing large-scale business recruitment.

"The Trades District is more than just a collection of buildings—it's a launching pad for entrepreneurs, a catalyst for local business growth and a long-term investment in the economic vitality of our region," said Brooke Lammert, Economic Development Specialist at the Chelan Douglas Regional Port Authority. "We are honored to receive this recognition from WEDA and proud to support small businesses with the space, resources and partnerships they need to succeed."

The project's success stems largely from its collaborative approach, partnering with organizations including the Small Business Development Center (SBDC) and the Hispanic Business Council. These partnerships ensure entrepreneurs from historically underserved communities receive mentorship, resources and guidance needed to navigate the challenges of business ownership.

WEDA, Washington's only trade association focused exclusively on economic development, presents its awards annually to recognize outstanding achievements in the field. This year, the organization's Awards Committee noted they received a record number of nominations from communities across the state.

"WEDA's Economic Development Awards celebrate outstanding achievement in economic development at the highest level," said WEDA Board Chair Betty Capestany, who also serves as the Director of Economic Development for Pierce County. "There are leaders across our entire state working tirelessly to grow jobs and strengthen economic vitality in their communities. These awards honor leaders and projects that are excelling in this impactful work."

Amanda Wallner, WEDA Awards Committee Chair and Economic Development Manager for the City of Richland, added, "We received a record number of impressive nominations from communities across Washington. The nominations reflect a unique array of the breadth and diversity of important work taking place by economic developers statewide. These projects are often complex and require extensive collaboration and creative partnerships."

The Trades District Project was one of two recipients of the Innovation in Economic Development Award, sharing the honor with the Clallam Forest Product Innovation Program from the Clallam County Economic Development Council.

The awards ceremony recognized achievements across multiple categories, including business recruitment, business retention/expansion, diversity and inclusion, and economic response and recovery efforts.

Conservation District announces April board meeting

WENATCHEE — The Cascadia Conservation District has scheduled its regular board meeting for Friday, April 18, at 1:30 p.m. The meeting will take place at the district's office located at 1350 McKittrick St., Suite B, in Wenatchee.

The meeting will be conducted in a hybrid format, offering both in-person attendance and remote participation options via telephone or Zoom videoconferencing.

Due to limited space capacity at the venue, individuals planning to attend in person are required to contact the district office in advance to secure a spot. More information and instructions for the Zoom meeting will be available on its website at cascadiacd.org or by calling the district office at 509-436-1601.

A conceptual drawing depicts the outdoor communal area planned for the Trades District Project, featuring picnic tables and planters to create a collaborative environment where entrepreneurs can gather and network. The design reflects the Port Authority's emphasis on creating a community-oriented business ecosystem.

An aerial view rendering of the complete Trades District development showcases the layout of the 12 business incubator units arranged in clusters with shared access, landscaping and parking. The project is designed to support a diverse mix of businesses in a campus-like setting.

Brooke Lammert (in red), Economic Development Specialist at the Chelan Douglas Regional Port Authority, accepts the 2025 WEDA Innovation in Economic Development Award for the Trades District Project at the organization's Winter/Spring Conference in Olympia on March 26. The award recognizes the Port Authority's pioneering approach to cultivating business growth and entrepreneurship.

ATHLETE OF THE WEEK

Ethan Theiss Junior
Cashmere Boys Soccer

Junior Ethan Theiss had an outstanding week for the Bulldogs' boys soccer team, showcasing his skill and leadership. On Tuesday, he led the Bulldogs to a dominant 7-0 conference victory over La Salle with an impressive hat trick. Then, in a hard-fought 4-4 tie at Brewster on Saturday, Theiss added two more goals to his tally, further proving his offensive prowess.

Coach Flores had high praise for Theiss's performance, saying, "Ethan had a great spring break week for boys' soccer. In Tuesday's game against La Salle, he was able to find the back of the net three times, helping us secure the win. Against Brewster, he scored two more goals. Ethan is one of our captains and has shown great leadership. He is finding his form at the right time for this second half of the season."

Jake Peterson Junior
Cashmere Boys Baseball

Junior Jake Peterson is off to a fantastic start in the 2025 spring season as the Bulldogs' starting second baseman. With a 7-1 record to begin the year, Peterson has been a key contributor to the team's early success. This past week, he went 4-for-10 at the plate, including a double, 3 RBIs, and 4 runs scored, continuing to provide both offense and defensive reliability for the Bulldogs.

Coach Loomis commented on Peterson's efforts, stating, "I'm proud of Jake and his efforts this season. At the plate, he consistently works deep into counts and is a tough out. On defense, Jake has consistently been someone our team can count on to make the routine and challenging plays that come his way. I'm excited to see him continue his craft for the remainder of the season!"

Undefeated Bulldogs sweep rival Cascade 5-0

CASHMERE - Cashmere hosted their longtime archrivals, now a non-conference foe, in a cloudy, drizzly afternoon of tennis on April 7. The Bulldogs proved to be rather unwelcoming hosts, beating the Kodiaks 5-0 in boys' matches, thanks to four wins and a forfeit. Both the boys' and the girls' teams remain undefeated on the season.

Quentin Christensen delivers a backhand during his doubles team's match against Cascade on April 7. The duo of Christensen and Kamren Meloy defeated its Kodiak counterparts Melvin Northrup and Adan Vargas, 6-3, 6-0.

CASHMERE - In a gray day for tennis on April 7, the Bulldogs showed no mercy against the visiting archrivals Cascade Kodiaks from Leavenworth. The girls won their matches 5-0. Both the boys' and the girls' teams remain undefeated on the season.

Freya Dronen delivers a shot during her singles match against Cascade's Anna Reichlin, en route to a 6-4, 6-1 win.

Mandy Barba is all business during her doubles match against Cascade on April 7. The duo of Barba and Hadley Westlund defeated Hazel Eschen and Harper Baker, 6-3, 3-6, 7-6.

Hadley Westlund readies a backhand against Cascade on April 7. The duo of Westlund and Mandy Barba overcame a tough second set to take their match against Hazel Eschen and Harper Baker in three sets.

Chelan County District Court and Probation offer limited time debt relief program

CHELAN COUNTY — Chelan County District Court and Chelan County District Court Probation will be working with Armada Collections with an account relief program designed to aid those who have unpaid fines or probation fees with the Court or its Probation office.

The County last offered such a program four years ago, and it turned out to be helpful for customers who had balances with Armada, a debt collection company, from those unpaid debts. In a press release, Judges Allen Blackmon and Jonathan Volyn said “It is the Court’s intent to provide an opportunity to pay off your court fines and fees, probation costs, as well as court-ordered victim restitution at a greatly reduced cost.”

This two-month program, which began April 14 and ends June 14, could prove key to allowing people who have already seen their accounts go into collections to rid themselves of the kinds of debt that cannot generally be discharged through bankruptcy. Any debts resulting from anything more serious than a minor traffic infraction usually persist until they are paid in full, unlike most debt collections with statute limitations.

For more information or to find out if you qualify for this program, contact Armada at 509-884-8000, the Chelan County District Court at 509-667-6600, or Chelan County Probation at 509-667-6656.

The Wild Huckleberry has had the Midas touch so far, and done more than just open new places to eat. They keep extending the life of Wenatchee Valley landmarks, and expanding their culinary each plate purchase and annual renewal toward scholarships for students from families working in the state’s tree fruit industry.

"This milestone is not just about the number of plates—it’s about the students whose lives have been changed through the generosity of those who choose to support WAEF in this unique way," said Rolando Martin, WAEF Chairman. "We are grateful to individuals displaying this plate on their personal and company vehicles. You are making higher education possible for hardworking, deserving young people."

The license plate program was developed through a collaborative effort between the Washington Apple Commission and the Washington Apple Education Foundation. It has become a visible symbol of the state's agricultural heritage while providing financial support for education.

The Washington Apple Education Foundation serves as the charitable arm of Washington's tree fruit industry. According to foundation officials, WAEF provides over $1 million in scholarships annually and offers professional and career development training throughout the year for student recipients.

Despite still being a little disorganized, the stock that Mary Mainord already has to offer when the doors open at Understory are enough to write a book about.

Family affair

small businesses. It's a little like what you might see over at Apple Annie's or at Simply Unique down in Wenatchee, but less segregated into strict areas. Brassbound Collective is owned by Hailey Mainord — John's wife — who put her degree in business and merchandising to work immediately just working there at first. She bought the business, and then when Side Street began expanding, it was only natural that John and Mary would have their storefronts there as well.

The family branches out

Over the next couple of weeks, both the record store and the book store are set to open, and John and Mary have been working overtime to get things in order. Down a set of stairs inside Brassbound is the hallway to Understory, which is still in the sorting and finishing phase of setup. But from among the boxes of books, Mary plucks her prized possession so far from her buying adventures at estate sales and in warehouses full of books: A first edition copy of J.R.R. Tolkien's The Silmarillion.

Mary proudly shows off where the children's section will be, and even a darkened area with a spaceship-shaped bookshelf and a fixture for a rotating disco-style light that's just begging for sci-fi and fantasy books. One can already picture a dog-eared copy of The Hitchhiker's Guide to the Galaxy waiting on the shelf for an unsuspecting new reader.

The opening date for Understory is less fixed than that of Cashmere Records, Until Cashmere Records opens downstairs, John has been using a space inside Brassbound Collective to sell a few albums and tease the grand opening.

however. Mary has just a little time left before John opens his doors — which happen to be directly through her space. Across the hallway from Understory, you can see the 12-inch by 12-inch sleeves holding every manner of recordings, from jazz and blues to rock, folk, country, alternative, hip hop, comedy albums, and John even has a section dedicated entirely to local musicians.

The first album visible as you walk in the door is to the left of his cash register, and you can make out the silhouette of legendary local saxophonist Don Lanphere. Amazingly, John is unaware that Don is from the Valley born in Wenatchee in 1928. He just knows he scored two autographed albums at an estate sale nearby.

John has engineered the opening of Cashmere Records to coincide with the celebration of independent record stores around the world that takes place twice a year, Record Store Day (RSD). He doesn't get to participate yet this year, because a record store has to have been open for at least six months to sell RSD merchandise or anything like that.

"But at least the anniversary of the store's opening will be on RSD, though," John says.

His real prize possession is at home in his own collection. It's an original Tomato Press edition of Townes Van Zandt's Live at the Old Quarter, Houston, Texas, which makes sense for a guy who grew up near where Van Zandt was from. But here at the store, John's secret treasure is an original pressing of "Weird Al" Yankovic's self-titled 1983 debut album, with the plastic wrap still sealing everything but the opened side and therefore not a single scuff on the pristine jacket, which features MAD Magazine-style artwork depicting each of the songs on the record.

Community is the goal, not just sales

So how does this all translate into building a place that feels like it belongs in Cashmere? After all, the end result should be something that seems like it should have been here all along. That's the ideal result for any business in any town.

But John and Mary are determined to make this not just a place to buy things, but to feel like a part of the community. On opening day for Cashmere Records, John's going to be raffling off an electric guitar and giving goodie bags to the first customers through the door. Mary's got plenty of seating to just pick out a book and read for a while. Straight down the hallway that runs between the two stores, there's a set of double doors that will stay open during business hours leading into Yonder East Taproom, the Cashmere location for Yonder Cider Company, a local cidery that picks and presses apples from the Wenatchee Valley.

Along with Hailey at Brassbound Collective, the Mainords plan to make Side Street the hangout in Cashmere — and make it a destination for people in the surrounding area as well. What makes a better hangout than books, music, coffee and cider next door, and a town small enough that you know everyone inside?
