Cashmere Planning Commission reviews housing code reforms, sets June forum for public input

By Kirk Beckendorf
Special to Ward Media

CASHMERE — The Cashmere Planning Commission is evaluating changes to the city's building and zoning codes following a recent Land Capacity Analysis that highlighted mismatches between current regulations and projected housing needs.

Planning consultant Christina Wollman of Pertee, Inc. presented findings at the May 5 meeting, showing that existing codes favor the development of higher-income housing — defined as housing for those earning more than 120 percent of the Area Median Income (AMI) — while limiting opportunities for residents earning less than 80 percent of AMI.

Wollman emphasized that state law requires cities to “plan for and accommodate” housing affordable to all income levels, referencing the Washington Department of Commerce's guidance under the state's Growth Management Act.

She also noted that Cashmere's current codes do not allow emergency housing or shelters in areas zoned for hotels, despite a state requirement that they be permitted in such zones. Additionally, while the code allows for nursing homes, it does not provide for supportive housing for individuals with disabilities.

“Cashmere will need to make code changes to allow for the development of housing that could meet the needs of these populations,” Wollman said.

Wollman also clarified that while cities must make it legally possible for a range of housing types to be built, they are not obligated to ensure that the housing is constructed.

Commissioners discussed various options to align city regulations with projected growth. Some suggested expanding multi-family zoning areas and allowing the market to determine development outcomes. Commission Chair Zak Steigmeyer said he would prefer that “multi-family be spread across town rather than concentrated in one area.” Others recommended avoiding the term “affordable housing” due to its perceived negative connotations.

Also during the meeting, Director of Operations Steve Croci announced preliminary discussions with the Chelan County Department of Natural Resources and the Cascadia Conservation District regarding the restoration of the old lagoon site adjacent to the city's wastewater treatment plant. Steigmeyer added that “it is important for the public to also know that the city also owns property on the hillside, above the lagoon site.”

The city will hold a Community Forum on June 3 to gather public input on a new vision statement, the 20-Year Comprehensive Plan update, and the development of a Climate Resilience Plan.

As community needs rise, food pantries face challenges

CHELAN COUNTY — As North Central Washington food banks experience record demand, they are simultaneously facing unprecedented challenges in meeting community needs, such as higher food costs and reduced funding.

“The needs are definitely increasing in terms of just the number of people that are visiting the food pantry, and then, the way that the food pantry is funded is potentially at risk at the same time. So we're seeing more people and sort of uncertainty,” said Upper Valley MEND Executive Director Kaylin Bettinger.

Upper Valley MEND's food pantry, the Community Cupboard, has struggled to keep pace with a record 3,000 visitors to date this year, compared to 1,800 during the same period in 2024. While the food pantry's traditional service area spans the upper valley and Cashmere, the need goes well beyond, with about 47 percent of its visitors traveling from throughout the region.

The food pantry receives a majority of its commodities through the regional food distributor, with additional food coming in from gleaned excess produce on farms, the Grocery Rescue and Washington state's Farm-to-Food Pantry programs, and community donations.

However, these commodities don't always meet the demand, nor do they provide culturally relevant staples that local households rely on, such as eggs, tortillas, milk, beans. To bridge the gap, Upper Valley MEND sets aside a food purchasing budget each year for the pantry.

Recently, the nonprofit has had to increase its budget to not only meet the rising demand, but also account for the higher cost of food. Last year, Upper Valley MEND increased its food purchasing budget from $30,000 to $75,000.

Based on the first few months of 2025, it would likely spend about $150,000 this year if it didn't make adjustments, according to Bettinger. To maintain financial viability, the Community Cupboard has started testing out stricter limits on items it purchases, currently limiting milk, eggs, butter, and cooking oil.

“Everything is more expensive than it used to be, so we try really hard to get the best deals...We always try to support local businesses and local farmers when we can, but we also are balancing, you know, the cost of all of that,” said Bettinger.

Funding Woes

The regional food distributor, Chelan-Douglas Community Action Council (CDCAC), which distributes one to three million pounds of food each year to 20 different pantries like Upper Valley MEND, senior centers, meal sites, and low-income apartments, has also seen a rise in demand throughout the region while experiencing a reduction in funding.

Cashmere Auxiliary to distribute Memorial Poppies May 16 in honor of veterans

Cashmere Valley Record
Ward Media

CASHMERE — Volunteers from the Cashmere American Legion Auxiliary will distribute red handcrafted poppies in the community on Friday, May 16, as part of a nationwide effort to honor U.S. military veterans and their families.

The poppy distribution will take place from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. outside Doane's Valley Pharmacy and inside Martin's Marketplace. The event coincides with the lead-up to Memorial Day and is part of the Auxiliary's annual “Poppy Days” observance.

The red poppy, a symbol of remembrance inspired by the World War I poem “In Flanders Fields,” was adopted by the American Legion Auxiliary as its official memorial flower in 1921. The Poppy Program began in 1924 and continues today with millions of poppies distributed across the country in exchange for donations to support veterans' services.

“You should look at the poppy and see what it represents. It's not just a flower with a label on it. Try to remember what the poppy stands for and what the meaning of Memorial Day is,” said Linda Ingraham of the Cashmere American Legion Auxiliary. “Please take the time to set aside this one day of the year to remember, reflect and honor those who have given their all in service to our country. Everyone should be able to say, ‘I know why I am free.’ Proudly wear a poppy for Memorial Day.”

In addition to the poppy distribution, the Auxiliary will place more than 1,000 small American flags on the graves of veterans and auxiliary members at the Cashmere Cemetery starting at 9 a.m. on Saturday, May 24.

Community members are encouraged to assist with the effort.

Cashmere American Legion Post #64 will also hold its “Cavalcade of Flags” ceremony at 11 a.m. on Memorial Day, Monday, May 26, displaying nearly 500 large flags. Volunteers are needed to help set up for the event. Those interested can contact Commander Ken Komro at 509-782-4972.

Goehner honors Nutcracker Museum founder with Senate Resolution

LOGAN FINLEY / WARD MEDIA

By TAYLOR CALDWELL
Ward Media Staff Reporter

LEAVENWORTH – Washington State Senator Keith Goehner visited the Nutcracker Museum on May 9 to present a special Senate resolution to its co-founder, Arlene Wagner.

“NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, That the Washington state Senate honor Arlene Wagner for her appreciation for the arts, a desire to learn, dedication to collection and generosity, a willingness to teach, and contribution to society, and congratulate her on achieving 100 years of age,” the resolution read.

Wagner and her husband George opened the Nutcracker Museum in 1995, showcasing their private collections of nutcrackers. Since then, the museum has grown to hold one of the largest collections of nutcrackers in the world, featuring more than 9,000 nutcrackers from across the globe. Known as “the Nutcracker Lady,” Wagner became an authority on the topic of nutcrackers and their history, sharing her knowledge with museum visitors as well as publishing several books.

Sen. Goehner’s resolution honors Wagner’s 100th birthday, which occurred in December last year, celebrating her contributions to her community, society, and the world, by passing down knowledge and culture to future generations.

“We read it and honored her [on the Senate floor in Olympia], but I just felt like to actually show up here at the museum and honor her and kind of her home turf, it would be just very fitting to do it that way,” said Sen. Goehner.

Wagner was in eastern Germany at the time of the reading, visiting nutcracker workshops and training her successor.

“They know us in Germany, we were on television, we were in the papers. And three different nutcrackers were made especially in honor of my 100th birthday,” said Wagner.

Touch A Truck returns to Wenatchee with hands-on fun for kids

COURTESY OF JUNIOR SERVICE LEAGUE OF WENATCHEE

Ward Media Staff Reporter

WENATCHEE — The Women's Service League of North Central Washington is once again bringing their annual Touch A Truck event to the Wenatchee Valley College campus on Saturday, May 17 from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m.
The fun-filled day focuses on letting kids finally experience what the big vehicles that they see from the back seat of the car are actually like — climbing inside police cruisers, operating a boom on a giant truck, or even pulling the levers that lift the scoop on a front loader.
At the top of the day, there will be a one hour period known as “quiet hour” for kids with sensory issues or who might be startled by the large vehicles, but at 11 a.m., prepare for the HONK that announces the rest of the day.
Kids will be allowed to touch and climb on and around fire trucks, garbage trucks, a helicopter, tow trucks, a logging truck, first responder vehicles and more. Some of the businesses and entities that will be represented include the Wenatchee Valley Fire Department, the Chelan County Sheriff's Office, the Wenatchee Police, Waste Management, the Chelan and Douglas PUD, the Wenatchee Wild, Town Toyota, the Wenatchee School District, Link Transportation and even Leavenworth's Marson and Marson Lumber.

Tickets are $5 for adults and $3 for kids, with proceeds all going to non-profits that are kid-focused and kid-friendly. You can even bring a non-perishable food item for donation and get a dollar off your total cost of entry. Kids under 2 get in completely free, and there's a military discount for members of our armed forces.
L-Bow the Clown will be onsite making balloon animals, there will be face painting, a food vendor on the grounds, kettle corn, raffles and so much more. Crunch Pak will be providing apples as a snack as always.
This family-friendly event promises to be a fun time for kids of all ages, but especially the little ones who always wondered about the big trucks they see, but never get to touch. At the Touch A Truck event, touching's not just allowed — it's encouraged.

Cashmere Bulldogs Athletics

CASHMERE - The Cashmere High School track and field teams delivered standout performances at the SCAC Championship Meet on Saturday, May 10, as all nine schools in the South Central Athletic Conference converged at Royal High School to battle for the titles.

The Cashmere boys dominated the competition from start to finish, capturing the conference championship in commanding fashion with 179 team points — a staggering 71 points ahead of second-place Royal. Meanwhile, the CHS girls team turned in a strong showing of their own, finishing third overall behind Connell and champion Naches Valley.

Boys Highlights:

Junior standout Tobie Larson led the way for the Bulldogs, claiming double gold in the hurdles. Larson won the 110m hurdles in a personal-best 16.06 seconds and added another victory in the 300m hurdles with a time of 41.48.

Cashmere’s sprint relays were untouchable, winning both the 4×100 and 4×400 relays in meet-best and personal record times. The 4×100 squad of Cockrum, Knoll, Diaz, and Zavala clocked a blazing 43.30 seconds, while Diaz, Knoll, Larson, and Zavala powered the 4×400 to a 3:31.33 finish.

In the field events, Zane Pace soared to a first-place finish in the pole vault, clearing 13 feet for a new personal record. Joseph Acton added valuable points with a pair of runner-up finishes in the shot put (46-4.5) and discus (139-6.5).

Additional top-three performances included:

- Colton Bjorklund, 2nd in triple jump (38-3, PR)
- Isaac Zavala, 3rd in 100m (11.25)
- Ty Cockrum, 2nd in 200m (23.26, PR)
- Keenan Knoll, 3rd in 400m (52.17)
- Rylan Reiber, 3rd in 1600m (4:55.65)
- Edison Server, 3rd in 300m hurdles (42.99, PR)
- Colby Diaz, 3rd in both long jump (19-7) and triple jump (38-2.5)

Girls Highlights:

Mackenzie Van Bogart led the way for the Cashmere girls with a championship-winning run in the 800m, clocking a personal-best 2:21.39. She also placed second in the high jump, clearing 4-8.

In the hurdles, Elsey McDevitt had an impressive showing, taking second in both the 100m hurdles (17.39 PR) and 300m hurdles (50.02). Amelia Flick followed closely in the 300m hurdles, finishing third in a personal-best 50.95.

The girls’ relay teams also contributed to the strong team finish:

- 4×400 Relay (Van Bogart, Infante, Butcher, McDevitt) – 2nd place (4:21.18)
- 4×100 Relay (Kitchel, Miller, Guerrero, Flick) – 3rd place (53.67)

Makelah Gatens added to the scoring with a third-place finish in the pole vault, clearing 7-0.

With the SCAC Championship meet behind them, the Bulldogs now turn their focus to the sub-district meet, scheduled for Saturday, May 17, at Wapato High School

ATHLETE OF THE WEEK

Kennedy Walgren Sophmore Cashmere Girls Tennis

Kennedy has been a cornerstone of the CHS girls tennis team’s incredible 18-0 season, earning Athlete of the Week honors for her undefeated singles record and her strong showing at the SCAC tournament.

Walgren, who primarily plays second singles, has gone a perfect 18-0 this season—including two clutch wins at Saturday’s league tournament, securing her a spot in the upcoming district tournament. Her consistency, mental toughness, and quiet leadership have helped push the Bulldogs to their perfect regular season.

“Her success stems from her ability to work hard and keep a positive attitude wherever she plays and with whomever she plays against,” said Coach Kert. “She’s also won a couple matches against first singles players where she split sets and then triumphed because of her mental toughness and willingness to battle.”

With districts on the horizon, Walgren’s unshakable focus and unbeaten record make her a serious contender to advance to the state tournament.

Tobie Larson Junior Cashmere Boys Track

Tobie delivered a dominant performance at the SCAC Championship track meet on Saturday, helping lead the Bulldogs to the conference title at Royal High School. Larson was a key contributor with three league championships to his name, making him an obvious choice for Athlete of the Week.

Larson claimed first place in both hurdle events, winning the 110-meter hurdles with a personal-best time of 16.06 seconds and taking the 300-meter hurdles in 41.48 seconds. He also ran a leg on the Bulldogs’ league champion 4x400-meter relay team, which clocked a time of 3:31.33—an eight-second victory over the field.

Coach Kenoyer praised Larson’s breakout performance, saying, “It’s evident that coaches made a mistake with Tobie. He earned first-place finishes and is the league champion in three events. However, athletes are allowed four events in each meet, so Tobie will need to work with the coaches to find his next best event.”

With his combination of speed, stamina, and competitive drive, Larson has established himself as one of the top athletes in the SCAC and a major force heading into the postseason.

Andru Gomez brings jazz, blues, and style to PNW music scene with new EP release

By Andrew Simpson
Ward Media Staff Reporter

LEAVENWORTH — A restaurant in Leavenworth on a Thursday night at the beginning tourist season is not an ideal spot for a crowd that’s truly engaged with the performance. If you’re a musician whose songs are primarily aimed at people actively listening and participating in the show — rather than treating it as ambience for the conversations they were already having, the dates they were already on, the meal they’d be eating whether you were there or not — it can be hard to feel appreciated.

Not so for Andru Gomez. The Moscow, ID-based musician is used to a dinner show. In fact, he says, he usually treats his first set as a dinner show, setting a tone and letting stragglers just coming in settle down and get used to the music, before ramping up the volume or intensity in a second set.

That explains the opening of Gomez’s night at Rhein Haus in Leavenworth on May 8. Jazz guitar with a suspiciously French vibe is soon confirmed as he reaches the chorus of “Ooh La La (I’m Not Here, Go Away),” a song that, through the creative use of a loop pedal, immediately shows off his fingerboard dexterity and allows him to use his voice as he will for the rest of the evening: As an instrument in this one-man-band.

He has a light touch that lets him control the volume of his playing without adjusting too many knobs or dials. Then, just as you get used to the pattern of him laying down rhythm guitar and playing harmony fills over the top, he begins to use vocal effects as well. Not with fancy electronics; Gomez has a variety of singing styles carried within his bass-baritone range, and has stretched it into even a higher-ranged head voice useful in parts of the songs.

During this show, and as we found out later during an interview, Gomez intersperses plenty of original music, playing only enough cover songs to make people feel at home with hints of things they recognize. And by “hints,” we mean that Gomez is playing a song that you eventually recognize, but only after he’s given it his own flavor. During one part of the show, he tells the crowd they’ll get a prize if they can guess who wrote the song he’s about to play. Launching into the song, it sounds a lot like Santana’s treatment of Fleetwood Mac’s “Black Magic Woman” until he comes in with lyrics. He’s blended the nearly-flamenco guitar into a purely Andru Gomez version of “Do It Again,” by Steely Dan.

And although the covers he elects to play are eclectic — from Atlanta Rhythm Section to Nancy Sinatra, Buffalo Springfield to Jim Croce — it’s the originals that really shine. That’s because they, too, sound familiar enough that you’re singing along by the second time through the chorus.

Throughout, he transitions seamlessly between a Tom Waits-style growl to an airy David Crosby sighing of sound, most especially on his cover of “Horse With No Name” by the band America. But when he switches over to one of his own songs, like “College Radio,” “Whiskey and Clovers” or “Get My Boots,” all that vocal styling has already prepared you to be as big a fan of the originals as the songs you know.

That’s the goal for any musician who’s made performing their full-time job, as Gomez has: To get the crowd to remember your music as much as they remember your cover of “Folsom Prison Blues,” a song that lots of bands and performers can play. And he’s a hard worker. We won’t enumerate each here, but there are well over 150 shows on his schedule right now, and he books more as they become available in advance. This really is full time work, and he tells us he’s doing reasonably well.

Gomez has already released a full length album and one other EP, and the reason for our visit is the release of another EP, “Drunk at Church.” Immediately following the show, Gomez orders a plate of Rhein Haus’ famous pork schnitzel and kraut and we sit down to talk.

When asked what he’s learned between the first EP and now about telling a story in a shorter format than a full length record, he tells us that he prefers it. “To me, it’s less stressful than a full length album. I feel [for a full length] you have to have not only a broader style of songs, but they still have to be cohesive, right? An EP allows you to kind of have little quadrants of just four songs that can say a lot.”

Like his first EP, College Radio, there’s a title track from the name of the record for the upcoming release. So when can you hear “Drunk at Church”? Along with the rest of us, your first listen will be May 15, when the EP comes out.

Until then, you can hear him anytime on Spotify or follow him on Instagram at @andrugomezmusic. For upcoming shows, you can visit his website at andrugomezmusic.com. Some here in North Central Washington include a late afternoon show in Manson on May 22 at Tippy Canyon Winery, an evening show at Wenatchee Valley Brewing in the Riverside District on May 24, and just down the road from there for another afternoon set at Pybus’ Off The Hill tasting room on May 25.

WENATCHEE — It’s Apple Awards time again, when we celebrate high school theater, both plays and musicals, and give the equivalent of Tony awards to actresses, actors and crew. What used to be an honor given only by a student’s own school has six schools participating all together for one giant night of awards and honors presented by Wenatchee’s own Barrett Family.

Hosted and directed by Brian Higgins, and produced by Kylee Boggs and Alex Haley, the Apple Awards serve to highlight the excellence and innovation and creativity that these young minds create, giving us their all in return for nothing but the experience.

And make no mistake: High school theater is a lot harder than you might suppose. Just as football players start practicing in full gear when the summer sun is still high overhead, theater kids put in long hours and dedicate all of their free time to perfecting something for your entertainment.

There’s not a slouch in the bunch of this year’s nominees. The high schools involved are Cashmere, Chelan, Eastmont, Ephrata, Quincy and Wenatchee, and the productions that nominations are drawn from are just as varied as the communities that these young people are from.

If you want a sneak peek at the up-and-comers in the Wenatchee Valley’s vibrant theater community, find your way to the Numerica PAC on Thursday, May 15 at 7 p.m. (doors open at 6:30 p.m.). Tickets are $15 for students and $20 for adults, and can be found at the PAC’s Box Office, by phone at 509-663-ARTS (2787) or on the PAC website.

In March, the U.S. Department of Agriculture cut $500 million in funding for the Local Food Purchase Assistance Cooperative Agreement Program (LFPA), effectively discontinuing a Biden-era program that helped food pantries purchase food from local farmers.

The cuts resulted in a loss of $160,000 for CDCAC, which sources produce from five local farmers. The organization is applying to other grants in order to continue the program, albeit at a much smaller scale, said CDCAC Executive Director Alan Walker.

“That was a great program, because we got to support our local farmers too. They really liked it, because it was a way for them to sell their product,” said Walker.

The same month, the USDA cut another $500 million allocated toward The Emergency Food Assistance Program (TEFAP), a federal program that provides emergency food assistance at no cost to low-income Americans. The CDCAC is set to lose $80,000, about half of its TEFAP funding. While the organization's general TFPAP funding remains steady through September, Walker anticipates that if it does continue, it will be a lower amount.

Additionally, $4.7 million in TEFAP commodities expected to be delivered to the Washington State Department of Agriculture (WSDA) for April through June were cancelled. The delivery was expected to supply Washington food banks, including CDCAC, with three months of federally procured milk, dried plums, dried cranberries, canned chicken, turkey breasts, and chicken breasts, according to the WSDA.

“That number of semiloads has gone from 70 over the next three months down to less than 10,” said Walker. “That’s going to have a significant impact on the amount of food that we have.”

The cuts have been compounded by the federal government’s immediate termination of Americorps grant programs in April, which supported volunteer and service efforts in education, public safety, and hunger relief.

CDCAC facilitated the funding, training, and placement of 15 Americorps members at nonprofit organizations throughout the region. Two of those members served full-time at CDCAC’s Food Distribution Center, supporting a small staff of two full-time and two part-time employees.

“If we don’t have those individuals in our food bank, we can’t meet the level of demand,” said Walker.

So far, the organization has been able to retain the two individuals part-time through the end of June. The termination is also being challenged by a multistate lawsuit, which may result in a temporary reinstatement.

At the state level, CDCAC expects to receive more funding through the state’s Emergency Food Assistance Program (EFAP) than in previous years, based on what was approved by the House and Senate, although the governor had yet to sign the proposed 2025-2027 budget at the time this was written.

“So we know we’ll be able to continue to provide the service to our two-county area and the food pantries and meal sites that we support. Unfortunately, it will not be at the quantity of food that we saw in the last calendar year,” said Walker.

New Avenues of Support

While CDCAC is expected to receive more support from the state, it won’t completely fill the gap left in funding. The organization plans to apply for more grants, such as the state’s Resiliency Grant. However, grants are becoming increasingly competitive as programs across the state experience the same cuts.

It’s also seeking out local support through its Green Bag program, in which participants buy one extra item for the Food Distribution Center every time they shop, which is then collected by volunteers.

“People stepping up and helping out each other here locally, I think, is what I hope will occur...I think food is pretty near to people’s hearts. We know we’re not going to exist without it,” said Walker.

To add to Upper Valley MEND’s challenges, a grant that has supported the nonprofit’s gleaning program for the last two years is expected to expire mid-summer without renewal. As a result, it is leaning on backyard gardeners to donate their extra produce.

“I used to think, okay to donate produce to the food pantry, I needed to have a lot. Like, they just want to have boxes of stuff. And then I kind of realized, if you just have a few extra tomatoes...They’re grateful,” said Leavenworth resident Mara Bohman, who donates produce from her home garden.

The nonprofit also encourages donations to its “area of greatest need,” which allows Upper Valley MEND to allocate funds to the Community Cupboard as needed.

“Because a lot of things are volatile, our services and our funding sources change from time to time, so it allows us to keep things the same, but the funding underneath the surface is changing throughout,” said Bettinger.

Thrill at Ski Hill

U.S. Forest Service, and Leavenworth Winter Sports Club, the race served as the third stop in the league’s five-event spring series.

Sunny skies and a landscape splashed with a riot of blooming balsamroot and lupine provided a stunning natural backdrop to the almost 500 student riders from over 30 teams to test their endurance and spirit on a challenging course designed specifically for the occasion.

The course featured steep climbs, fast descents, and a dramatic finish down the face of the ‘Big Hill.’ “It was a really fun track, especially the big bank turn under the ski jumps,” noted Icicle River Middle School (IRMS) eighth grader, Tyson Koizan.

Riders tackled one to three laps of the course depending on category, with 5th through 8th graders and newer high school riders pedaling one, while more experienced high schoolers and advanced middle schoolers rode two, and JV and Varsity athletes completed three.

The route incorporated Ski Hill’s lower-level single track and cross-country ski trails, a segment of the “New Uphill Trail,” and ended with a winding path down the Big Hill —delivering a thrilling challenge and ideal vantage points for spectators.

“I designed the racecourse two-plus years ago and have been working on securing the race here since then,” explained IBC Head Coach Mike Bedard. “And we confirmed with the League maybe six months ago. Since then, it’s been a series of boxes to check, some trail work, and many hands helping to get it ready.”

IBC, founded in 2013, is fully volunteer-run and draws athletes from IRMS and Cascade High School (CHS). It’s known for its positive team culture and strong community involvement. That culture is currently being shaped by the ever-energetic and enthusiastic Bedard, now in his second year at the helm, alongside his equally spirited wife, Lisa, who serves as team manager.

“Hosting this race at our home venue is something we were really looking forward to,” said Bedard. “We were excited to bring a huge group of fun people to our community and share our awesome trails. And it went off pretty much without a hitch. I would call it an absolute success for our team, for our community, and for the League.”

The whole weekend buzzed with activity. Saturday featured a lively pre-ride session and a lighthearted coaches’ race, with Bedard and assistant coaches Nick Krenz and Terry Houghton taking their turn on the course.

Both days the team tent area or “race village” transformed the Ski Hill base into a festive gathering space, complete with lawn chairs, cheering families, and the aroma of burgers and BBQ, not to mention scoops from Leavenworth’s Whistlepunk Ice Cream Company, which generously helped IBC raise nearly $1,000 through sales at the event.

While the competition was fierce, the emphasis remained on sportsmanship, safety, and skill development. And the local riders shone on their home turf, with standout performances from Cedar Tremberth (4th place, 7th Grade Boys), Dudley Krenz (4th, 8th Grade Boys), Lane Bedard (5th, high school boys), and Caroline Menna (2nd, Varsity Girls).

The WSCL spring series continues with its next race in Winthrop on May 18, followed by the State Championship and Relay at 360 Trails in Gig Harbor on June 1.

“For anybody who is interested in our team, at any level, we love developing riders and confidence,” stated Bedard. “That’s what we are all about. So, if you [are in middle or high school and] have any interest in getting better at biking, please contact me.”

State Fire Marshal urges wildfire preparedness as summer nears

NCW News

OLYMPIA — With warmer and drier weather expected across Washington this summer, state officials are warning residents to prepare for an increased risk of wildfires.

In 2024, the State Fire Marshal’s Office (SFMO) deployed its All-Risk Mobilization Program to assist in 30 wildfire incidents statewide. The combined response cost approximately $23 million, underscoring the growing financial and environmental impact of large-scale wildfires.

“As we look forward to sunshine and outdoor activities, wildfire prevention and preparedness must remain a top priority,” the State Fire Marshal’s Office stated in a release issued Wednesday.

To reduce the risk of wildfires, SFMO officials recommend clearing dead vegetation and other fuel sources away from structures, participating in community cleanup days, practicing daily fire safety, using fire-resistant construction materials, and staying alert to emergency notifications.

Preparedness efforts should also include assembling an emergency kit with food, essential medications, important documents, a battery-powered radio, and a first aid kit. Families are encouraged to practice evacuation routes, establish communication plans with neighbors, and prepare vehicles with necessary supplies.

The SFMO emphasized that residents should follow evacuation orders and heed guidance from emergency personnel in the event of a wildfire. Additional wildfire safety information can be found through the National Fire Protection Association.

For further resources or questions, residents can contact the State Fire Marshal’s Office at (360) 596-3904 or visit www.wsp.wa.gov/state-fire-marshals-office.
